HE State of Conversation and Business in this Town having been long perplexed with Pretenders in both Kinds, in order to open Men's Eyes against such Abuses, it appeared no unprofitable Undertaking to publish a Paper which should observe upon the Manners of the Pleasurable, as well as the Busie Part of Mankind. To make this generally read, it seemed the most proper Method to form it by Way of a Letter of Intelligence, confilting of fuch Parts as might gratify. the Curiofity of Persons of all Conditions, and of each Sex.

But a Work of this Nature requiring Time to grow into the Notice of the World, it happened very luckily, that a little before I had resolved upon this Design, a Gentleman had written Predictions, and Two or Three other Pieces in my Name, which had rendered it famous thro all Parts of Europe; and by an inimitable Spirit and Humour, raised it to as high a Pitch of Reputation as it could possibly arrive at.

By this good Fortune, the Name of Isaac Bickerstaff gained an Audience of all who had any Tast of Wit, and the Addition of the ordinary Occurrences of common Journals of Newsbrought in a Multitude of other Readers. I could not, I confess, long keep up the Opinion of the Town, that these Lucubrations were written by the same Hand with the first Works which were published under my Name; but before I lost the Participation of that Author's Fame, I had already found the Advantage of his Authority, to which lowe the sudden Acceptance which my Labours met with in the World.

The general Purpose of this Paper, is to expose the salse Arts of Life, to pull off the Disguises of Cunning, Vanity, and Affectation, and to recommend a general Simplicity in our Dress, our Discourse, and our Behaviour. No Man has a better Judgment for the Discovery, or a nobler Spirit for the Contempt of all Imposture, than your self; which Qualities render you the most proper Patron for the Author of these Essays. In the general, the Design, fign, however executed, has met with fo great Success, that there is hardly a Name now eminent among us for Power, Wit, Beauty, Valour, or Wildom, which is not fubfcribed, for the Encouragement of the Two Volumes in Octavo, on a Royal or Medium Paper. This is indeed an Honour for which it is impossible to express a fuitable Gratitude; and there is nothing could be an Ado dition to the Pleasure I take in it. but the Reflection, that it gives me the most conspicuous Occasion ? can ever have, of fubscribing my HO' the other Papers which are published for the Use of the good People of England, have certainly very wholsom Effects, and are laudable in their particular Kinds, they do not seem to come up to the main Design of such Narrations, which I humbly presume, should be principally intended for the Use of politick Persons, who are so publick spirited as to neglect their own Affairs to look into Transactions of State. Now these Gentlemen, for the most Part, being Men of strong Zeal, and weak Intellects, It is both a Charitable and Necessary Work to offer something, whereby such worthy and well-affected Members of the Commonwealth may be instructed, after their Reading, what to think;

think; which shall be the End and Purpose of this my Paper: Wherein I shall from Time to Time Report and Consider all Matters of what Kind soever that shall occur to Me, and publish such my Advices and Reflections every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday in the Week, for the Convenience of the Post. I resolved also to have something which may be of Entertainment to the Fair Sex, in Honour of whom I have taken the Title of this Paper. I therefore earnestly desire all Persons, without Diflinction, to take it in for the present Gratis, and hereafter at the Price of One Penny, forbidding all Hawkers to take more for it at their Peril. And I defire all Persons to consider, that I am at a very great Charge for proper Materials for this Work, as well as that before I resolved upon it. I had settled a Correspondence in all Parts of the Known and Knowing World. And for a much as this Globe is not trodden upon by meer Drudges of Business only, but that Men of Spirit and Genius are justly to be esteemed as considerable Agents in it, we shall not upon a Dearth of News, present you with musty Foreign Edicts, or dull Proclamations, but shall divideour Relation of the Passages which occur in Action or Discourse throughout this Town as well as elsewhere, under such Dates of Places as may prepare you for the Matter you are to expect, in the following Manner:

All Accounts of Gallantry, Pleasure, and Entertainment, shall be under the Article of White's Chocolate-house; Poetry, under that of Will's Coffee-house; Learning, under the Title of Gracian; Foreign and Domestick News, you will have from St. James's Coffee-house; and what else I have to offer on any other Subject, shall be dated from my own Apartment.

I once more desire my Reader to consider, That as I cannot keep an ingenious Man to go daily to Will's, e

Will's, under Twopence each Day merely for his Charges; to White's, under Sixpence; nor to the Græcian, without allowing him some Plain Spanish, to be as able as others at the Learned Table; and that a good Observer cannot speak with even Kidney at St. James's without clean Linnen. I fay, these Considerations will, I hope, make all Persons willing to comply with my Humble Request (when my Gratis Stock is exhausted) of a Penny a-piece; especially since they are sure of some proper Amusement, and that it is impossible for me to want Means to entertain em, having besides the Force of my own Parts, the Power of Divination, and that I can, by casting a rigure, tell you all that will happen before it comes to pass.

But this last Faculty I shall use very sparingly, and Speak but of few Things 'till they are passed, for fear of divulging Matters which may offend our Superiors.

White's Chocolate-bouse, April 7. HE deplorable Condition of a very pretty |s.p. 29. Gentleman, who walks here at the Hours when Men of Quality first appear, is what is very much lamented. His Hiltory is, That on the 9th of September 1705, being in his One and twentieth Year, he was washing his Teeth at a Tavern-Window in Pall-mall, when a fine Equipage passed by, and in it a young Lady who looked up at him; away goes the Coach, and the young Gentleman pulled off his Nightcap, and instead of rubbing his Gums, as he ought to do out of the Window till about Four a Clock, fits him down, and spoke not a Word till Twelve at Night; after which, he began to enquire, If any Body knew the Lady-The Company asked, What Lady ? But he faid B 2

no more 'till they broke up at Six in the Morning. All the ensuing Winter he went from Church to Church every Sunday, and from Playhouse to Playhouse every Night in the Week, but could never find the Original of the Picture which dwelt in his Bosom. In a Word, his Attention to any Thing but his Passion, was utterly gone. He has loft all the Money he ever played for, and been confuted in every Argument he has enter'd upon fince the Moment he first faw her. He is of a Noble Family, has naturally a very good Air, and is of a frank, honest Temper: But this Pattion has fo extremely mauled him. that his Features are fet and uninformed, and his whole Visage is deaden'd by a long Absence of Thought. He never appears in any Alacrity, but when raised by Wine; at which Timehe is fure to come hither, and throw away a great deal of Wit on Fellows, who have no Sense further than just to observe, That our poor Lover has most Understanding when he is drunk, and is least in his Senses when he is fober. Will's Coffee-bouse, April 8.

On Thursday last was acted, for the Benefit of Mr. Betterton, the Celebrated Comedy, called Love for Love. Those excellent Players, Mrs. Barry, Mrs. Bracegirdle, and Mr. Dogget, though not at present concerned in the House, acted on that Occasion. There has not been known so great a Concourse of Persons of Distinction as at that Time; the Stage it self was cover'd with Gentlemen and Ladies, and when the Curtain was drawn, it discovered even there a very splendid Audience. This unusual Encouragement, which was given to a Play for the Advantage of so great an Actor, gives an undeniable Instance, That the true Relish for Manly Entertainments and Rational Pleafures fures is not wholly loft. All the Parts were acted to Perfection; the Actors were careful of their Carriage, and no one was guilty of the Affectation to infert Witticisms of his own, but a due Respect was had to the Audience, for encouraging this accomplish'd Player. It is not now doubted but Plays will revive, and take their usual Place in the Opinion of Persons of Wit and Merit, notwithstanding their late Apostacy in Favour of Dress and Sound. This Place is very much altered fince Mr. Dryden frequented it; where you used to see Songs, Epigrams, and Satyrs, in the Hands of every Man you met, you have now only a Pack of Cards; and instead of the Cavils about the Turn of the Expression, the Elegance of the Style, and the like, the Learned now dispute only about the Truth of the Game. But however, the Company is altered, all have shewn a great Respect for Mr. Betterton: And the very Gaming Part of this House have been so much touched with a Sense of the Uncertainty of Humane Affairs, (which alter with themselves every Moment) that in this Gentleman, they pitied Mark Anthony of Rome, Hamlet of Denmark, Mitbri-dates of Pontus, Theodosius of Greece, and Henry the Eighth of England. It is well known, he has been in the Condition of each of those illustrious Personages for several Hours together, and behaved himself in those high Stations, in all the Changes of the Scene, with fuitable Dignity. For these Reasons, we intend to repeat this Favour to him on a proper Occasion, lest he who can instruct us fo well in personating Feigned Sorrows, should be lost to us by suffering under Real Ones. The Town is at present in very great Expectation of feeing a Comedy now in Rehear-B 3 fal, which is the 25th Production of my Honoured Friend Mr. Thomas D'Urfey; who, befides his great Abilities in the Dramatick, has a peculiar Talent in the Lyrick Way of Writing, and that with a Manner wholly new and unknown to the Ancient Greeks and Romans, wherein he is but faintly imitated in the Tranflations of the Modern Italian Opera's.

St. James's Coffee house, April 11.

Letters from the Hague of the 16th fay, That Major-General Cadogan was gone to Bruffels, with Orders to disperse proper Instructions for affembling the whole Force of the Allies in Flanders in the Beginning of the next Month. The late Offers concerning Peace, were made in the Style of Persons who think themselves upon equal Terms : But the Allies have fo just a Sense of their present Advantages, that they will not admit of a Treaty, except France offers what is more fuitable to her present Condition. At the same Time we make Preparations, as if we were alarmed by a greater Force than that which we are carrying into the Field. Thus this Point feems now to be argued Sword in Hand. This was what a great General alluded to, when being asked the Names of those who were to be Plenipotentiaries for the enfuing Peace; answered, with a serious Air, There are about an Hundred Thousand of us. Mr. Kidney, who has the Ear of the greatest Politicians that come hither, tells me, There is a Mail come in to Day with Letters, dated Hague, April 19. N. S. which fay, a Defign of bringing Part of our Troops into the Field at the latter End of this Month, is now altered to a Resolution of marching towards the Camp about the 2 oth of the next. There happened t'other Day, in the Road of Scheveling, an Engagement between a Privateer of Zealand, and one of Dunkirk. The Dunkirker, carrying 33 Pieces of Cannon, was taken and brought into the Texel. It is faid, the Courier of Monfieur Rouille is returned to him from the Court of France. Monfieur Vendosme being reinstated in the Favour of the Dutchess of Burgundy, is to command in Flanders.

Mr. Kidney added, That there were Letters of the 17th from Ghent, which give an Account, that the Enemy had formed a Delign to furprize two Battalions of the Allies which lay at Aloft; but those Battalions received Advice of their March, and retired to Dendermond. Lieutenant-General Wood appeared on this Occation at the Head of 1000 Foot, and 1000 Horfe, upon which the Enemy withdrew, without ma-

From my own Apartment.

I am very forry I am obliged to trouble the Publick with fo much Discourse upon a Matter which I at the very first mentioned as a Trifle, viz. the Death of Mr. Partridge, under whose Name there is an Almanack come out for the Year 1709. In one l'age of which it is afferted by the faid John Partridge, That he is still living, and not only fo, but that he was also living some Time before, and even at the Instant when I writ of his Death. I have in another Place, and in a Paper by it felf, fuf-v ficiently convinced this Man that he is dead. and if he has any Shame, I don't doubt but that by this Time he owns it to all his Acquaintance: For the' the Legs and Arms, and whole Body of that Man may Itill appear and perform their animal Functions; yet fince, as I have elsewhere observed, his Art is gone, the Man isgone. I am, as I faid, concerned, that this little Matter should make so much Noise; but fince I am engaged, I take my felf obliged in Honour to go on in my Lucubrations, and by the Help of these Arts of which I am Master. as well as my Skill in Aftrological Speculations, I shall, as I see Occasion, proceed to confute other dead Men, who pretend to be in Being, that they are actually deceased. I therefore give all Men fair Warning to mend their Manners, for I shall from Time to Time print Bills of Morrality; and I beg the Pardon of all fuch who shall be named therein, if they who are good for Nothing shall find themselves in the Number of the Deceased.

Will's Coffee-bouse, April 13.

Here has lain all this Evening on the Table, the following Poem. The Subject of it being Matter very useful for Families, I thought it deserved to be considered, and made more Publick. The Turn the Poet gives it, is very happy; but the Foundation is from a real Accident which happened among my Acquainsance. A Young Gentleman of a great Estate, fell desperately in Love with a great Beauty, of very high Quality, but as ill-natured, as long Flattery and an habitual Self-will could make her. However, my young Spark ventures upon her, like a Man of Quality, without being acquainted with her, or having ever faluted her, her, till it was a Crime to kiss any Woman else. Beauty is a Thing which palls with Posfession; and the Charms of this Lady soon wanted the Support of good Humour and Complaifancy of Manners. Upon this my Spark flies to the Bottle for Relief from his Satiety. She disdains him for being tried with that for which all Men envied him; and he never came home, but it was — Was there no Sot that would ftay longer? Would any Man living but you? Did I leave all the World for this Usage? To which he ____ Madam, Split me, you are very impertinent! In a Word, this Match was Wedlock in its most terrible Appearances. She, at last weary of Railing to no Purpose, applies to a good Uncle, who gives her a Bottle of Water: The Vertue of this Powerful Liquor (said he) is such, that if the Woman you marry proves a Scold, (which, it seems, my dear Neece, is your Missortune; as it was your good Mother's before you,) let her hold fix Spoonfuls in her Mouth for a fall half Hour after you come Home --- But I find I am not in Humour for telling a Tale, and nothing in Nature is fo ungrateful as Story-Telling against the Grain, therefore take it as the Author has given it you.

A Tale __ for the Ladies.

Miss Molly, a fam'd Toast, was Fair and Young, Had Wealth and Charms, -- but then she had a (Tongue!

From Morn' to Night th'Eternal Larum run, Which often lost those Hearts her Eyes had won. Sir John was smitten, and confess'd his Flame, Sigh'd out the usual Time, then wed the Dame: Posses'd he thought of every Joy of Life, But his Dear Molly prov'd a very Wife.

Excess of Fondness did in Time decline, Madam lov'd Money, and the Knight lov'd (Wine.

From whence some petty Discords would arise, As, Tou're a Fool; --- and, You are mighty Wise!

Tho' he and all the World allow'd her Wit,
Her Voice was shrill, and rather loud than

When she began, for Hat and Sword he'd call,
Then, after a faint Kiss-Cry, B'y, Dear Moll:
Supper and Friends expect me at the Rose.
And, what, Sir John, You'll get your usual Dose:
Go, stink of Smoak, and guzzle nasty Wine,

Sure, never Virtuous Love was us'd like Mine!

My Lady with her Tongue was still prepar'd, She rattled loud, and he impatient heard: Tis a fine Hour! In a sweet Pickle made! And this, Sir John, is ev'ry Day the Trade. Here I sit moping all the live-long Night, Devour'd with Spleen, and Stranger to Delight; Till Morn' sends stagg'ring Home a Drunken (Beast.)

Refolv'd to break my Heart, as well as Reft.

(Spouse!)
Hey! Hoop! d'ye hear my damn'd obstrep'rous
What, can't you find one Bed about the House!
Will that perpetual Clack lie never still!
That Rival to the Sostness of a Mill!

Still in your Mouth the Healing Cordial hold; One Month this Sympathetick Med'cin try'd, He'll grow a Lover, you a Happy Bride. But, dearest Neece, keep this Grand Secret close, Or ev'ry prayling Hussy'll beg a Dose.

A Water-Bottle's brought for her Relief, Not Nants could fooner ease the Lady's Grief': Her bufy Thoughts are on the Tryal bent, And Female-like, impatient for th'Event:

The Bonny Knight reels home exceeding clear, Prepar'd for Clamour, and Domestick War. 12

Entring, he cries-Hey! Where's our Thunder (fled!

No Hurricane! Betty's your Lady dead?
Madam, aside, an ample Mouthful takes,
Court'sy's, looks Kind, but not a Word she speaks:
Wond'ring, he star'd, scarcely his Eyes believ'd,
But found his Ears agreeably deceiv'd.
Why, How now, Molly? What's the Crotchet

She finiles, and answers only with a Bow.
Then classing her about—Why, let me die!
These Nightclothes, Moll, become thee mightily!
With that, he figh'd, her Hand began to press,
And Betty calls, her Lady to undress.
Nay, kiss me, Molly,—for I'm much inclin'd.
Her Lace she cuts, to take him in the Mind.
Thus the fond Pair to Bed enamour'd went,
The Lady pleas'd, and the good Knight con-

St. James's Coffee-bouse, April 13.

Letters from Venice say, The Disappointment of their Expectation to see his Danish Majesty, has very much disquieted the Court of Rome. Our last Advices from Germany inform us, That the Minister of Hansver has urg'd the Council at Ratisbonne to exert themselves in Behalf of the Common Cause, and taken the Liberty to fay, That the Dignity, the Virtue, the Pru-dence of his Electoral Highness, his Master, were called to the Head of their Affairs in vain. if they thought fit to leave him naked of the proper Means to make those Excellencies useful for the Honour and Safety of the Empire. They write from Berlin of the 13th, O.S. That the true Delign of General Fleming's Visit to that Court was, to infinuate, that it will be for the mutual Interest of the King of Prussia and King Augustus to enter into a new Alliance; but that the Ministers of Prussia are not inclined to his Sentiments. We hear from Vienna, That his Imperial Majesty has expressed great Satisfaction in their High Mightineffes having communicated to him the whole that has passed in the Affair of a Peace. Though there have been Practices used by the Agents of France, in all the Courts of Europe, to break the good Understanding of the Allies, they have had no other Effect, but to make all the Members concerned in the Alliance more doubtful. of their Safety from the great Offers of the Enemy. The Empire is rouzed by this Alarm, and the Frontiers of all the French Dominions are in Danger of being infulted the enfuing Campagne. Advices from all Parts confirm, That it is impossible for France to find a Way to obtain so much Credit, as to gain any one Potentate of the Allies, or conceive any Hope for Safety from other Prospects.

From my own Apartment, April 13. I find it of very great Use, now I am setting up for a Writer of News, that I am an Adept in Astrological Speculations; by which Means, I avoid speaking of Things which may offend Great Persons. But at the same Time, I must not prostitute the Liberal Sciences so far, as not to utter the Truth in Cases which do not immediately concern the Good of my Native Country. I must therefore contradict what has been so affuredly reported by the News-Writers of England, That France is in the most deplorable Condition, and that their People die in great Multitudes. I will therefore let the World know, that my Correspondent, by the Way of Bruffels, informs me, upon his Honour, That the Gentleman who writes the Gazette of Paris, and ought to know as well as any Man, has told him, That ever fince the King has been past his 63d Year, or Grand Climaterick, there has not died one Man of the French Nation who was younger than his Majesty, except a very few, who were taken suddenly near the Village of Hockstet in Germany; and some more, who were straitned for Lodging at a Place called Ramilies, and died on the Road to Ghent and Bruges. There are also other Things given out by the Allies, which are Shifts below a Conquering Nation to make use of. Among others, 'tis faid, There is a general Murmuring among the People of France, tho' at the same Time all my Letters agree, That there is fo good an Understanding among them, that there is not one Morfel carried out of any Market in the Kingdom, but what is delivered upon Credit.

The TATLER. [Nº 3.

From Thursd. Apr. 14. to Saturd. Apr. 16. 1709:

Will's Coffee-house, April 14.

"His Evening, the Comedy, call'd The Country Wife, was acted in Drury-Lane, for the Benefit of Mrs. Bignall. The Part which gives Name to the Play was performed by her felf. Through the whole Action, The made avery pretty Figure, and exactly entered into the Nature of the Part. Her Husband, in the Drama, is represented to be one of those Debauchees who run through the Vices of the Town, and believe when they think fit they can marry and fettle at their Ease. His own Knowledge of the Iniquity of the Age, makes him chuse a Wife wholly ignorant of it, and place his Security in her Want of Skill how to The Poet, on many Occasions, abuse him. where the Propriety of the Character will admit of it, infinuates, That there is no Defence a-gainst Vice, but the Contempt of it: And has, in the natural Ideas of an untainted Innocent, shown the gradual Steps to Ruin and Destruction; which Persons of Condition run into, without the Help of a good Education how to form their Conduct. The Torment of a Jealous Coxcomb, which arises from his own False Maxims, and the Aggravation of his Pain, by the very Words in which he fees her Innocence, makes a very pleasant and instructive Satyr.

The Character of Horner, and the Defign of it, is a good Representation of the Age in which that Comedy was written; at which Time Love and Wenching were the Bufiness of Life, and the Gallant Manner of purfuing Women was the best Recommendation at Court. To which only it is to be imputed, that a Gentleman of Mr. Wicherly's Character and Sense, condescends to represent the Insults done to the Honour of the Bed, without just Reproof; but to have drawn a Man of Probity with Regard to such Confiderations, had been a Monfter, and a Poet had at that Time discovered his Want of knowing the Manners of the Court he lived in, by a Virtuous Character in his fine Gentleman, as he would show his Ignorance, by drawing a Vicious one to pleafe the present Audience. Mrs. Bignall did her Part very happily, and had a certain Grace in her Rusticity, which gave us Hopes of seeing her a very Skilful Player, and in some Parts, supply our Loss of Mrs. Verbruggen. I cannot be of the same Opinion with my Friends and Fellow-Labourers, the Reformers of Manners, in their Severity towards Plays, but must allow, that a good Play acted before a well-bred Audience, must raise very proper Incitements to good Behaviour, and be the most quick and most prevailing Method of giving Young Peo-ple a Turn of Sense and Breeding. But as I have fet up for a Weekly Historian, I resolve to be a Faithful One; and therefore take this publick Occasion, to admonish a Young Nobleman, who came fluftered into the Box laft Night, and let him know, how much all his Friends were out of Countenance for him. The Women fate in Terror of hearing fomething that should shock their Modesty, and all the

the Gentlemen in as much Pain, out of Compassion to the Ladies, and perhaps Resentment for the Indignity which was offered in coming into their Presence in so disrespectful a Manner. Wine made him fay nothing that was rude, therefore he is forgiven, upon Condition he will never hazard his offending more in this Kind. As I just now hinted, I own my self of the Society for Reformation of Manners. We have lower Instruments than those of the Family of Bickerstaff, for punishing great Crimes, and exposing the Abandoned. Therefore, as I defign to have Notices from all Publick Affemblies, I shall take upon me only Indecorums, Improprieties, and Negligences, in fuch as should give us better Examples. After this Declaration, if a Fine Lady thinks fit to giggle at Church, or a Great Beau come in drunk to a Play, either shall be sure to hear of it in my enfumg Paper: For meerly as a well-bred Man, I cannot bear these Enormities.

After the Play, we naturally stroll to this Cosse-house, in Hopes of meeting some new Poem, or other Entertainment, among the Men of Wit and Pleasure, where there is a Dearth at present. But it is wonderful there should be so sew Writers, when the Art is become meerly Mechanick, and Men may make themselves Great that Way, by as certain and infallible Rules, as you may be a Joiner or a Mason. There happens a good Instance of this, in what the Hawker just now has offered to Sale; to wit, Instructions to Vanderbank; A Sequel to the Advice to the Poets; A Poem, eccapioned by the Glorious Success of her Majest's Arms, under the Command of the Duke of Marlborough, the last Tear in Flanders. Here you are to understand, that the Author finding the Poets would not take his Advice, he troubles himself no more about 'em; but has mer with one Vanderbank, who works in Arras, and makes very good Tapestry Hangings: Therefore, in order to celebrare the Hero of the Age, he claps me together all that can be said of a Man that makes Hangings: As,

Then, Artist, who dost Nature's Face express
In Silk and Gold, and Scenes of Action dress; Dost sigur'd Arras animated leave,
Spin a bright Story, or a Passion weave By mingling Threads; canst mingle Shade and (Light.

Delineate Triumphs, or describe a Fight?

Well, what shall this Workman do? Why? To show how great an Hero the Poet intends, he provides him a very good Horse:

Champing his Foam, and bounding on the Plain Arch his high Neck, and Graceful Spread his Mane.

Now as to the Intrepidity, the calm Courage, the constant Application of the Hero, it is not necessary to take that upon your self; you may, in the Lump, bid him you employ raise him as high as he can, and if he does it not, let him answer for disobeying Orders.

Let Fame and Victory in inferior Sky, Hover with ballaned Wings, and smiling fly Above his Head, &c.

A whole Poem of this Kind may be ready against an ensuing Campague, as well as a Space lest in the Canvass of a Piece of Tapestry for the principal Figure, while the Under-Parts are working: So that in Effect, the Adviser copies after the Man he pretends to direct.

This.

This Method should, methinks, encourage young Beginners: For the Invention is fo fitted to all Capacities, that by the Help of it a Man may make a Receipt for a Poem. A young Man may observe, that the Gigg of the Thing. is, as I faid, finding out all that can be faid of his Way you employ to fet forth your Worthy. Waller and Denham had worn out the Expedient of Advice to a Painter: This Author has transerred the Work, and fent his Advice to the Poets; that is to fay, to the Turners of Verse, as he calls em. Well, that Thought is worn out also, therefore he directs his Genius to the Loom, and will have a new Set of Hangings in Honour of the last Year in Flanders. I must own to you, I approve extremely this Invention, and it might be improved for the Benefit of Manufactury: As, suppose an Ingenious Gentleman should write a Poem of Advice to a Callico-Printer: Do you think there is a Girl in England, that would wear any Thing but The Taking of Lifle, or The Battle of Oudenarde? They would certainly be all the Fashion, till the Heroes abroad had cut out fome more Patterns. I should fancy small Skirmishes might do for Under-Petticoats, provided they had a Siege for the Upper. If our Adviser were well imitated, many industrious People might be put to Work. Little Mr. Dastile, now in the Room, who formerly writ a Song and a Half, is a Week gone in a very pretty Work upon this Hint: He is writing an Epigram to a young Virgin who knits very well ('tis a Thousand Pities he is a Jacobite): But his Epigram is by Way of Advice to this Damfel, to knit all the Actions of the Pretender and the Duke of Burgundy last Campagne in the Clock of a Stocking. It were endless to enumerate the many Hands and Trades that may be employed by Poets, of fo useful a Turn as this Adviser's. I shall think of it; and in this Time of Taxes, shall consult a great Critick employed in the Custom-house, in order to propose what Tax may be proper to put upon Knives, Seals, Rings, Hangings, Wrought-Knives, Seals, Rings, Hangings, Beds, Gowns and Petticoats, where any of those Commodities bear Motto's, or are worked upon Poetical Grounds.

St. James's Coffee-house, April 15.

Letters from Turin of the 3d Instant, N. S. inform us, That his Royal Highness employs all his Address in alarming the Enemy, and perplexing their Speculations, concerning his real Designs the ensuing Campaign. Contracts are entered into with the Merchants of Milan, for a great Number of Mules to transport his Provisions and Ammunition. His Royal Highness has ordered the Train of Artillery to be conveyed to Sula before the 20th of the next. Month. In the mean Time, all Accounts agree, that the Enemy are very backward in their Preparations, and almost incapable of defending themselves against an Invalion, by reafon of the general Murmurs of their own People; which, they find, are no way to be quieted, but by giving them Hopes of a speedy Peace. When these Letters were dispatched, the Marshal de Thesse was arrived at Genoa, where he has taken much Pains to keep the Correspondents of the Merchants of France in Hopes, that Measures will be found out to Support the Credit and Commerce between that State and Lyons; But the late Declaration of the Agents of Monsieur Bernard, that they cannot discharge the Demands made upon

From my own Apartment, April 15. It is a very natural Paffion in all good Members of the Commonwealth, to take what Care they can of their Families. Therefore I hope the Reader will forgive me, that I defire he would go to the Play called the Stratagem this Evening, which is to be acted for the Benefit of my near Kinsman Mr. John Bickerstaff. I protest to you, the Gentleman has not spoken to me to desire this Favour; but I have a Respect for him, as well in Regard to Confanguinity, as that he is an intimate Friend of that Famous and Heroick Actor, Mr. George Powell, who formerly played Alexander the Great in all Places, though he is lately grown fo referved, as to act it only on the Stage.

It is usual with Persons, who mount the Stage for the Cure or Information of the Crowd about 'em, to make solemn Professions of their being wholly disinterested in the Pains they take for the Publick Good. At the same Time, these very Men, who make Harangues in Plush Doublets, and extol their own Abilities and Generous Inclinations, tear their Lungs in vending a Drug, and show no Act of Bounty, except it be, that they lower a Demand of a Crown, to Six, nay, to One Penny. We have a Contempt for such Paultry Barterers, and have therefore all along along informed the Publick, that we intend to give them our Advices for our own Sakes, and are labouring to make our Lucubrations come to Some Price in Money, for our more convenient Support in the Service of the Publick. It is certain, that many other Schemes have been propo-Jed to me; as a Friend offered to show me a Treatise he had writ, which he called, The Whole Art of Life, or, The Introduction to Great Men, illustrated in a Pack of Cards. But being a Novice at all Manner of Play, I declined the Offer. Another advised me, for want of Money, to Set up my Coach and practife Physick. but having been bred a Scholar, I feared I should not succeed that Way neither; therefore resolved to go on in my present Project. But you are to understand, that I shall not pretend to raise a Credit to this Work, upon the Weight of my Politick News only, but as my Latin Sentence in the Title Page informs you, shall take any Thing that offers for the Subject of my Discourse. Thus, New Persons, as well as New Things, are to come under my Consideration; as, when a Toast, or a Wit, is first pronounced such, You shall have the freshest Advice of their Preferment from me, with a Description of the Beauty's Manner, and the Wit's Style, as also in whose Places they are advanced: For this Town is never good-natured enough to raise One, without depressing Another. But it is my Design, to avoid Saying any Thing, of any Person, which cught justly to dispease; but Shall endeavour, by the Variety of the Matter and Style, to give Entertainment for Men of Pleasure, without Offence to those of Business.

A L1. Hearts at present pant for Two Ladies only, who have for some Time engroffed the Dominion of the Town. They are indeed both exceeding Charming, but differ very much in their Excellencies. The Beauty of Clariffa is Soft, that of Chlor Piercing. When you look at Clariffa, you see the most exact Harmony of Feature, Complexion, and Shape; you find in Chloe nothing extraordinary in any one of those Particulars, but the whole Woman irrefiftible. Clariffa looks Languishing; Chloe, Killing. Clariffa never fails of gaining Admiration; Chlee of moving Defire. The Gazers at Chariffa, are at first unconcerned, as if they were observing a fine Picture. They who behold Chloe, at the first Glance, discover Transport, as if they met their dearest Friend. These different Perfections are suitably represented by the last great Paincer Italy has sent us, Mr. Jervase. Clarissa is, by that skilful Hand, placed in a Manner that looks artless and innocent of the Torments the gives; Chloe drawn with a Liveliness that shows she is conscious, but not affected, of her Perfections. Clariffa is a Shepherdess; Chloe a Country Girl. I must own, the Delign of Chloe's Picture shows, to me, great Mastery in the Painter; for nothing could be better imagined than the Dress he has given her, of a Straw-Hat and Ribband, to represent that Sort of Beauty which enters the Heart with a certain Familiarity and chears it into a Belief, that it has received a Lover as well as an Object of Love. Force of their different Beauties is seen also in the Effects it makes on their Lovers. The Admirers of Chloe are eternally gay and wellpleased: Those of Clariffs, melancholy and thoughtful.

thoughtful. And as this Passion always changed the natural Man into a quite different Creature from what he was before, the Love of Chlar makes Coxcombs; that of Clarissa, Madmen. There were of each Kind just now in this Room. Here was one that whistles, laughs, sings, and cuts Capers, for Love of Chloe. Another has just now writ Three Lines to Clarissa, then taken a Turn in the Garden, then came back again, then tore his Fragment, then called for some Chocolate, then went away without it.

Chlor had so many Admirers in the House at present, that there is too much Noise to proceed in my Narration: So that the Progress of the Loves of Clariss and Chlor, together with the Bottles that are drank each Night for the One, and the many Sighs which are uttered, and Songs written, on the Other, must be our Subject on future Occasions.

Will's Coffee-house, April 18. Letters from the Hay-market inform us, That on Saturday Night last the Opera of Pyrrhus and Demetrius was performed with great Applause. This Intelligence is not very acceptable to us Friends of the Theatre; for the Stage being an Enterrainment of the Reason and all our Faculties, this Way of being pleased with the Suspense of 'em for Three Hours together, and being given up to the shallow Satisfaction of the Eyes and Ears only, seems to arise rather from the Degeneracy of our Understanding, than an Improvement of our Diversions. That the Understanding has no Part in the Pleasure is evident, from what these Letters. very politively affert, to wit, that a great Part of the Performance was done in Italian: And a great Critick fell into Fits in the Gallery, at feeing, not only Time and Place, but Languages ges and Nations confused in the most incorrigible Manner. His Spleen is so extremely moved on this Occasion, that he is going to publish a Treatise against Opera's, which, he thinks, have already inclined us to Thoughts of Peace, and if tolerated, must intallibly dispirit us from carrying on the War. He has communicated his Scheme to the whole Room, and declared in what Manner Things of this Kind were first introduced. He has upon this Occasion considered the Nature of Sounds in general, and made a very elaborate Digression upon the London Cries, wherein he has shown from Reason and Philosophy, why Oysters are cried, Cardmatches sung, and Turneps and all other Vegetables neither cried, fung, nor faid, but fold, with an Accent and Tone neither natural to Man or Beaft. This Piece feems to be taken from the Model of that excellent Difcourse of Mrs. Manly the School-Mistress, concerning Samplers. Advices from the upper End of Picadilly fay, That May-Fair is utterly abolished; and we hear, Mr. Pinkethman has removed his ingenious Company of Scrollers to Greenwich: But other Letters from Depeford fay, the Company is only making thither, and not yet fettled ; but that feveral Heathen Gods and Goddesses, which are to descend in Machines, landed at the King's-Hend-Stairs last Saturday. Venus and Cupid went on Foot from thence to Greenwich; Mars got drunk in the Town, and broke his Landlord's Head, for which he fat in the Stocks the whole Evening; but Mr. Pinkethman giving Security that he should do nothing this ensuing Summer, he was fet at Liberty. The most melancholy Pare of all, was, that Diana was taken in the Act of Fornication with a Boar-man, and committed by Justice Wrathful, which has, it seems, put a Stop to the Diversions of the Theatre of Black-Heath. But there goes down another Diana and a Patient Griffel next Tide from Billing gate.

St. James's Coffee-house, April 18.

They write from Saxony of the 13th Instant, N. S. That the Grand General of the Crown of Poland was so far from entring into a Treaty with King Stanislaus, that he had written Circular Letters, wherein he exhorted the Palatinates to join against him; declaring, that this was the most favourable Conjuncture for afferting their Liberty.

Letters from the Hague of the 23d Instant, N. S. say, they have Advices from Vienna, which import, That his Electoral Highness of Hannover had signified to the Imperial Court, that he did not intend to put himself at the Head of the Troops of the Empire, except more effectual Measures were taken for acting vigorously against the Enemy the ensuing Campaign. Upon this Representation, the Emperor has given Orders to several Regiments to march towards the Rhine, and dispatched Expresses to the respective Princes of the Empire to desire an Augmentation of their Forces.

These Letters add, That an Express arrived at the Hague on the 20th Instant, with Advice, That the Enemy having made a Detachment from Tournay of 1500 Horse, each Trooper carrying a Foot-Soldier behind him, in order to surprise the Garrison of Alost; the Allies, upon Notice of their March, sent out a strong Body of Troops from Ghent, which engaged the Enemy at Asche, and took 200 of them Prisoners, obliging the rest to retire without making any further Attempt. On the 22d in the Morning, a Flect a Fleet of Merchant Ships coming from Scotland, were attacked by Six French Privateers at the Entrance of the Meuse. We have yet no certain Advice of the Event : But Letters from Rotterdam fay, That a Dutch Man of War of Forty Guns, which was Convoy to the faid Fleet, was taken, as were also Eighteen of the Merchants. The Swift Troops, in the Service of the States, have compleated the Augmentation of their respective Companies. Those of Wirtemberg and Pruffis are expected on the Frontiers within few Days; and the Auxiliaries from Saxony, as also a Battalion of Holstein, and another of Wolfembuttle, are advancing thither with all Expedition. On the 21st Instant, the Deputies of the States had a Conference near Woerden with the President Rouille, but the Matter which was therein debated is not made publick. His Grace the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene continue at the Hague.

I have lately been very studious for Intelligence, and have just now, by my Astrological Flying-Post, received a Packet from Felicia, an Island in America, with an Account that gives me great Satisfaction, and lets me understand that the Island was never in greater Prosperity, or the Administration in so good Hands, since the Death of their late glorious King. These Letters import, That the Chief Minister has enter'd into a firm League with the ablest and best Men of the Nation, to carry on the Cause of Liberty, to the Encouragement of Religion, Virtue, and Honour. Those Persons at the Helm are so useful, and in themselves of such Weight, that their strict Alliance must needs tend to the universal Prosperity of the People. Camillo, it seems, presides fides over the Deliberations of State; and is fo highly valued by all Men for his fingular Probity, Courage, Affability, and Love of Mankind, that his being placed in that Station has diffipated the Fears of that People, who of all the World are the most jealous of their Liberty and Happiness. The next Member of their Society is Horatio, who makes all the Publick Dispatches. This Minister is Master of all the Languages in Use to great Perfection : He is held in the highest Veneration imaginable for a severe Honesty, and Love of his Country: He lives in a Court, unfullied with any of its Artifices, the Refuge of the Oppressed, and Terror of Oppressors. Martio has joined himfelf to this Council; a Man of most undaunted Resolution and great Knowledge in Maritime Affairs; tamous for destroying the Navy of the Franks, and fingularly happy in one Particular, That he never preferred a Man who has not proved remarkably serviceable to his Country. Philander is mentioned with particular Distinction; a Nobleman who has the most refined Tast of the true Pleasures and Elegance of Life, joined to an indefatigable Industry in Bufiness. A Man eloquent in Assemblies, agreeable in Conversation, and dextrous in all Manner of Publick Negotiations. These Letters add, That Verono, who is also of this Council, has lately fet Sail to his Government of Patricia, with Delign to confirm the Affections of the People in the Interests of his Queen. This Minister is Master of great Abilities, and is as industrious and restless for the Preservation of the Liberties of the People, as the greatest Enemy can be to subvert them. The Influence of these Personages, who are Men of such diffinguished Parts and Virtues, makes makes the People enjoy the utmost Tranquility in the midst of a War, and gives them undoubted Hopes of a secure Peace from their Vigilance and Integrity.

White's Chocolate-house, April 20. (a Tear, W HO names that Lost Thing, Love, without Since so debauch'd by ill-bred Customs here, To an exact Perfection they have brought The Action, Love, the Passion is forgot.

This was long ago a witty Author's Lamentation, but the Evil still continues; and if a Man of any Delicacy were to attend the Discourses of the young Fellows of this Age, they would believe there were none but Prostitutes to make the Objects of Passion. So true it is what the Author of the above Verses said, a little before his Death, of the Modern Pretenders to Gallantry: "They fet up for Wits in this Age, by " faying when they are Sober, what they of the " last spoke only when they were Drunk. But Cupid is not only Blind at present, but Deaddrunk, he has loft all his Faculties: Else how should Celia be so long a Maid with that agreeable Behaviour? Comma, with that sprightly Wit ? Lesbia, with that Heavenly Voice? And Sachariffa, with all those Excellencies in one Person, frequent the Park, the Play, and murder the poor Tits that drag her to publick Places, and not a Man turn pale at her Appearance? But fuch is the fallen State of Love, that if it were not for honest Cynthie, who is true to the Cause, we should hardly have a Pattern left of the ancient Worthies that Way: And indeed he has but very little Encouragement to persevere; but he has a Devotion, rather than Love, for his Mistress; and says,

Only tell her that I love, Leave the rest to her, and Fate; Some kind Planet from Above, May, perhaps, her Passion move: Lovers on their Stars must wait.

But the Stars I am so intimately acquainted with, that I can affure him, he will never have her: For would you believe it, tho' Cynthio has Wit, Good Sense, Fortune, and his very Being depends upon her, the Termagant for whom he fighs, is in Love with a Fellow, who stares in the Glass all the Time he is with her, and lets her plainly see, she may possibly be his Rival, but never his Mistress. Yet Cynthio, the same unhappy Man whom I mentioned in my first Narrative, pleases himself with a vain Imagination, that with the Language of his Eyes, now he has found who the is, he thall conquer her, tho' her Eyes are intent upon one who looks from her; which is ordinary with the Sex. It is certainly a Mistake in the Ancients, to draw the Little Gentleman, Love, as a blind Boy; for his real Character is, a little Thief that squints. For ask Mrs. Meddle, who is a Confident, or Spy, upon all the Passions in Town, and she'll tell you, that the Whole is a Game of Cross Purposes. The Lover is generally pursuing one who is in Pursuit of another, and running from one that delires to meet him. Nay, the Nature of this Passion is so justly represented in a fquinting little Thief, (who is always in a Double Action) that do but observe Clariffs next next Time you see her, and you'll find, when her Eyes have made their soft Tour round the Company, she makes no Stay on him they say she is to marry, but rests Two Seconds of a Minute on Wildair, who neither looks nor thinks on her, or any Woman else. However, Cynthio had a Bow from her t'other Day, upon which he is very much come to himself; and I heard him send his Man of an Errand Yesterday without any Manner of Hæstation; a Quarter of an Hour after which he reckoned Twenty, remember'd he was to sup with a Friend, and went exactly to his Appointment. I sent to know how he did this Morning, and I find he hath not forgot that he spoke to me Yesterday.

Will's Coffee-house, April 20.

This Week being Sacred to Holy Things, and no l'ublick Divertions allowed, there has been taken Notice of, even here, a little Treatife, called, A Project for the Advancement of Reli-gion: Dedicated to the Countess of Berkeley. The Title was so uncommon, and promis'd so peculiar a Way of Thinking, that every Man here has read it, and as many as have done fo. have approved it. It is written with the Spirit of one, who has feen the World enough to undervalue it with good Breeding. The Author must certainly be a Man of Wisdom, as well as Piety, and have spent much Time in the Exercise of both. The Real Causes of the Decay of the Interest of Religion, are set forth in a clear and lively Manner, without unfeafonable Passions; and the whole Air of the Book, as to the Language, the Sentiments, and the Reasonings, show it was written by one whose Virtue fits easie about him, and to whom Vice is throughly contemptible. It was faid by one of this Company, alluding to that Knowledge of the World the Author feems to have, the Man writes much like a Gentleman, and goes to Heaven with a very good Mien.

St. James's Coffee-house, April 20.

Letters from Italy fay, That the Marquis de Prie, upon the Receipt of an Express from the Court of Vienna, went immediately to the Palace of Cardinal Paulucci, Minister of State to his Holiness, and demanded in the Name of his Imperial Majesty, that King Charles should be forthwith acknowledged King of Spain, by a solemn Act of the Congregation of Cardinals appointed for that Purpose: He declared at the same Time, That if the least Hestation were made in this most important Article of the late Treaty, he should not only be obliged to leave Rome himself, but also transmit his Master's Orders to the Imperial Troops to face about, and return into the Ecclenastical Dominions. When the Cardinal reported this Message to the Pope, his Holiness was struck with so sensible an Affliction, that he burst into Tears. His Sorrow was aggravated by Letters which immediately after arrived from the Court of Madrid, wherein his Nuncio acquainted him, That upon the News of his Accommodation with the Emperor, he had received a Message to forbear coming to Court; and the People were fo highly provoked, that they could hardly be restrain'd from infulring his Palace. Thefe Letters add, That the king of Demnark was gone from Florence to P.fa, and from Pila to Leghorn, where the Governour paid his Majesty all imaginable Honours. The King deligned to go, from thence to Lucca, where a Magnificent Tournament was prepared for his Divertion. An English Man of War, which came from Port Mahon to Leghorn in 6 Days, brought Advice, that the Fleet commanded by Admiral Whitaker was safely arrived at Barcelona, with the Troops and Ammunition which he had taken in at Naples.

General Boneval, Governor of Commacchio, had fummoned the Magistrates of all the Towns near that Place to appear before him, and take an Oath of Fidelity to his Imperial Majesty, commanding also the Gentry to pay him Homige, on Pain of Death and Confication of Goods. Advices from Swifferland inform us, That the Bankers of Geneva were utterly ruined by the Failure of Mr. Bernard. They add, That the Deputies of the swift Cantons were returned from Soleure, where they were affem-bled at the Instance of the French Ambassador; but were very much diffatisfied with the Reception they had from that Minister. 'Tis true, he omitted no Civilities, or Expressions of Friendship from his Master, but he took no Notice of their Pensions and Arrears; what further provoked their Indignation, was, That instead of 25 Pistoles formerly allowed to each Member, for their Charge in coming to the Diet, he had prefented 'em with 6 only. They write from Drefden, That King Augustus was still butie in recruiting his Cavalry, and that the Danish Troops, which lately served in Hungary, had Orders to be in Saxony in the Middle of May, and that his Majesty of Denmark was expected at Drefden in the Beginning of that Month. King Augustus makes great Preparations for his Reception, and has appointed Sixty Coaches, each drawn by Six Horses, for that Purpose: The Interview of these Princes affords great Matrer for Speculation. Letters. from Paris of the 22d of this Month fay, That Mareschal Harcourt and the Duke of Bermick CS were preparing to go into Alface and Dauphine. but that their Troops were in Want of all Manner of Necessaries. The Court of France had receiv'd Advices from Madrid, That on the 7th of this Month, the States of Spain had with much Magnificence acknowledged the Prince of Afturias Presumptive Heis of the Crown, This was performed at Buen Retiro; the Deputies took the Oaths on that Occasion from the Hands of Cardinal Portocarrero. Thefe Ad. vices add, That it was fignified to the Pope's Nuncio, by Order of Council, to depart from that Court in 24 Hours, and that a Guard was accordingly appointed to conduct him to Bayonne.

Letters from the Hague of the 26th Instant inform us, That Prince Eugene was to set out the next Day for Brussels, to put all Things in a Readiness for opening the Campaign. They add, That the Grand Pensioner having reported to the Duke of Marlborough what passed in the last Conference with Mr. Rouille, his Grace had taken a Resolution immediately to return to Great Britain, to communicate to Her Majesty all that has been transacted in that important Affair.

From my own Apartment, April 20.

The Nature of my Miscellaneous Work is such, that I shall always take the Liberty to tell for News such Things (ler 'em have happened never so much before the Time of Writing) as have escap'd publick Notice, or have been misrepresented to the World, provided that I am still within Rules, and trespass not as a Tatler any further than in an Incorrectness of Style, and writing in an Air of common Speech. Thus if any Thing that is said, even of old Anchises or Eness, be set by me in a different Light than has hitherhitherto been hit upon, in order to inspire the Love and Admiration of worthy Actions, you will, Gentle Reader, I hope, accept of it for Intelligence you had not before. But I am going upon a Narrative, the Matter of which I know to be true: It is not only doing Justice to the deceas'd Merit of such Persons, as, had they lived, would not have had it in their Power to thank me, but also an Instance of the Greatness of Spirit in the lowest of Her Majesty's Subjects.

Take it as follows:

At the Siege of Namur by the Allies, there were in the Ranks of the Company commanded by Captain Pincent, in Colonel Frederick Hamilton's Regiment, one Unnion a Corporal, and one Valentine a private Centinel: There happened between these Two Men a Dispute about a Matter of Love, which, upon fome Aggravations, grew to an irreconcileable Hatred. Unnion being the Officer of Valentine, took all Opportunities even to strike his Rival, and profess the Spite and Revenge which moved him to it. Centinel bore it without Relistance, but frequent. ly faid, He would die to be revenged of that Tyrant. They had fpent whole Months thus, one injuring, the other complaining; when in the Midst of this Rage towards each other, they were commanded upon the Attack of the Caftle, where the Corporal received a Shot in the Thigh, and fell; the French pressing on, and he expecting to be trampled to Death, called out to his Enemy, Ah, Valentine! Can you leave me here! Valentine immediately ran back, and in the Midst of a thick Fire of the French, took the Corporal upon his Back, and brought him thro' all that Danger as far as the Abbey of Salfine, where a Cannon Ball took off his Head: His Body fell under his Enemy whom he was carrying off. Umion immediately forgot his Wound, rofe up, tearing his Hair, and then threw himself upon the bleeding Carcafs, crying, Ah, Valentine! Was it for me, who have fo barbaroufly used thee, that thou hast died? I will not live after thee. He was not by any means to be forced from the Body, but was removed with it bleeding in his Arms, and attended with Tears by all their Comrades, who knew their Enmity. When he was brought to a Tent, his Wounds were dreffed by Force; but the next Day, still calling upon Valentine, and lamenting his Cruelties to him, he died in the Pangs of Remorfe and Despair.

It may be a Question among Men of Noble Sentiments, Whether of these unfortunate Perfons had the greater Soul; he that was fo generous as to venture his Life for his Enemy, or he who could not furvive the Manthat died, in laying upon him such an Obligation?

When we see Spirits like these in a People, to what Heights may we not suppose their Glory may arise, but (as it is excellently ob-served by Salust) it is not only to the general Bent of a Nation that great Revolutions are owing, but to the extraordinary Genio's that lead 'em. On which Occasion he proceeds to fay, That the Roman Greatness was neither to be attributed to their superior Policy, for in that the Carthaginians excelled; nor to their Valour, for in that the French were preferable; but to particular Men, who were born for the Good of their Country, and formed for great Attempts. This he favs, to introduce the Characters of Cafar and Cato. It would be entring into too weighty a Discourse for this Place, if I attempted to show, that our Nation has produced as great and able Men for pubpublick Affairs, as any other. But I believe, the Reader outruns me, and fixes his Imagination upon the Duke of Marlborough. It is, methinks, a pleasing Reflection, to confider the Dispensations of Providence in the Fortune of this Illustrious Man, who, in the Space of Forty Years, has pass'd through all the Gradations of Humane Life, 'till he has afcended to the Character of a Prince, and become the Scourge of a Tyrant, who fate in one of the greatest Thrones of Europe, before the Man who was to have the greatest Part in his Downfall had made one Step in the World. But fuch Elevations are the Natural Confequences of an exact Prudence, a calm Courage, a well-governed Temper, a patient Ambition, and an affable Behaviour. These Arrs. as they are the Steps to his Greatness, so they are the Pillars of it now it is raised. To this her Glorious Son, Great Britain is indebted for the happy Conduct of her Arms, in whom the can boalt, She has produced a Man formed by Nature to lead a Nation of Heroes.

The TATLER. [Nº 6.

From Thursd. April 21. to Saturd. April 23. 1709.

Will's Coffee-house, April 22.

I Am just come from visiting Sappho, a fine Lady, who writes Verses, tings, dances, and can fay and do whatever she pleases, without the Imputation of any Thing that can injure her Character; for she is so well known to have no Passion but Self-love; or Folly, but Affectation; that now upon any Occasion, they only cry, 'Tis ber Way, and That's so like her, without without further Reflection. As I came into the Room, the cries, Oh! Mr. Bickerstaff, I am utterly undone! I have broke that pretty Italian Fan I showed you when you were here last, wherein were so admirably drawn our First Parents in Paradife asleep in each other's Arms. But there is fuch an Affinity between Painting and Poetry, that I have been improving the Images which were raised by that Picture, by reading the same Representation in Two of our greatest Poets. Look you, here are the Passages in Milton and in Dryden. All Milton's Thoughts are wonderfully just and natural, in this inimitable Description which Adam makes of himself in the Eighth Book of Paradise Lost. But there is none of them finer than that contained in the following Lines, where he tells us his Thoughts when he was falling afleep a little after his Creation:

While thus I call'd, and stray'd I know not whiFrom whence I first drew Air, and first beheld
This happy Light; when Answer none return'd,
On a green shady Bank, prosuse of Flowers,
Pensive I sate me down, there gentle Sleep
First found me, and with soft Oppression seiz'd
My drowned Sense, untroubled, the I thought
I then was passing to my former State, Insensible and forthwith to dissolve.

But now I can't forgive this odious Thing: This Dryden, who, in his State of Immocence, has given my Great-Grandmother Eve the same Apprehension of Annihilation, on a very different Occasion; as Adam pronounces it of himself, when he was seized with a pleasing Kind of Stuper and Deadness, Eve fancies her felf falling away, and dissolving in the Hurry of a Rapture. However, the Verses are very good, and I don't know but it may be natural what she says. I'll read 'em:

When your kind Eyes look'd languishing on mine,
And wreathing Arms did soft Embraces join;
A doubtful Trembling seiz'd me first all o'er,
Then Wishes, and a Warmth unknown before:
What follow'd, was all Extasse and Trance, Immortal Pleasures round my swimming Eyes did

And speechless Joys, in whose sweet Tumults tost, I thought my Breath and my New Being lost.

She went on, and faid a Thousand good Things at Random, but so strangely mixed, that you would be apt to fay, All her Wit is meer good Luck, and not the Effect of Reason and Judgment. When I made my Escape hither, I found a Gentleman playing the Criticks on Two other great Poets, even Virgil and Homer. He was observing, that Virgil is more judicious than the other in the Epithets he gives his Hero. Homer's usual Epithet, said he, is Hofas a xue, or Hofas xue, and his Indiferetion has been often rallied by the Criticks, for mentioning the Nimbleness of Foot in Achilles, tho' he describes him standing, sitting, lying down, fighting, eating, drinking, or in any other Circumstance, however foreign or repugnant to Speed and Activity. Virgil's common Epithet to Eneas, is Pius or Pater. I have therefore considered, faid he, what Passage there is in any of his Hero's Actions, where either of these Appellations would have been most improper, to fee if I could catch him at the fame Fault with Homer: And this, I think, is his Meeting with Dide in the Cave, where Pins Encas Eneas would have been Absurd, and Pare Eneas a Burlesque: The Poet has therefore wisely dropped em both for Dux Trojanus.

Which he has repeated Twice in Juno's Speech, and his own Narration: For he very well knew, a loofe Action might be consistent enough with the usual Manners of a Soldier, tho' it became neither the Chastity of a Pious Man, nor the Gravity of the Father of a People.

Grecian Coffee-boule, April 22.

While other Parts of the Town are amused with the present Actions, we generally spend the Evening at this Table in Enquiries into Antiquity, and think any Thing News which gives us new Knowledge. Thus we are making a very pleasant Entertainment to our selves, in putting the Actions of Homer's Iliad into an exact Journal.

This Poem is introduced by Chryses, King of Chryses, and Priest of Apollo, who comes to redemand his Daughter, who was carried off at the Taking of that City, and given to Agamemnon for his Part of the Booty. The Reinfal he received enrages Apollo, who for Nine Days showered down Darts upon them, which occasioned the Pestilence.

The 10th Day Achitles affembles the Council, and encourages Calchas to speak for the Surrender of Chryseis to appeale Apolls. Agamemnon and Achilles storm at one another, notwithstanding which Agamemnon will not release his Prispner, unless he has Briseis in her stead. After long Contestations, wherein Agamemnon gives a glorious Character of Achiller's Valour, he determines to restore Briseis her her Father, and sends Two Heralds to setch away Chryseis from Achilles, who abandons himself to Sorrow and Despair. His Mother Thetis came to comfort him under his Affliction, and promises to represent his sorrowful Lamentations to Jupiter: But he could not attend it; for the Evening before, he had appointed to divert himself for Two Days beyond the Seas with the harmles Æthiopians.

'Twas the 21st Day after Chryseis's Arrival to the Camp, that Thetis went very early to demand an Audience of Jupiter. The Means he uses to satisfie her were, to perswade the Greeks to attack the Trojans; that so they might perceive the Consequence of contemning Achilles, and the Miseries they suffer if he does not head them. The next Night he orders Agamemmon, in a Dream, to attack them; who was deceived with the Hopes of obtaining a Victory, and also taking the City without sharing the Honour with Achilles.

On the 22d, in the Morning, he affembles the Council, and having made a Feint of raising the Seige and retiring, he declares to them his Dream; and, together with Nester and Ulysses, refolves on an Engagement.

This was the 23d Day, which is full of Incidents, and which continues from almost the Beginning of the Second Canto to the Eighth. The Armies being then drawn up in View of one another, Hellor brings it about, that Menelaus and Paris, the Two Persons concerned in the Quarrel, should decide it by a single Combat; which tending to the Advantage of Menelaus, was interrupted by a Cowardice insused by Minerva: Then both Armies engage, where the Trojans have the Disadvantage; but being afterwards animated by Apollo, they repulse the Enemy, yet they are once again forced to give Ground; but their Affairs were retrieved by Hettor, who has a fingle Combat with Ajax. The Gods threw themselves into the Battle, Juno and Minerva took the Gracians Part, and Apollo and Mars the Trojans: But Mars and Ve-mis are both wounded by Diomedes.

The Truce for burying the Slain ended the 23d Day; after which the Greeks threw up a great Intrenchment to secure their Navy from Danger. Councils are held on both Sides. On the Morning of the 24th Day, the Battle is renewed, but in a very difadvantagious Manner to the Greeks, who were beaten back to their Retrenchments. Agamemnon being in Despair at this ill Success, proposes to the Counsel to quit the Enterprize and retire from Troy. But by the Advice of Neftor, he is perswaded to regain Achilles, by returning Chryseis, and sending him considerable Presents. Hereupon, Ulyster and Ajax are fent to that Hero, who conti-Ulyffes, at his nues inflexible in his Anger. Return, joins himself with Diomedes, and goes in the Night to gain Intelligence of the Enemy: They enter into their very Camp, where, finding the Centinels afleep, they made a great Slaughter. Rhefus, who was just then arrived with Recruits from Thrace for the Trojans, was killed in that Action. Here ends the 10th Canto. The Sequel of this Journal will be inferted in the next Article from this Place.

We hear from Italy, that notwithstanding the Pope has received a Letter from the Duke of Anjou, demanding of him, to explain himself upon the Affair of acknowledging King Charles, his Holiness has not yet thought fit to send any Answer to that Prince. The Court of Rome appears very much mortified, that they are not to fee his Majesty of Denmark in that City, having perhaps given themselves vain Hopes from a Visit made by a Protestant Prince to that See. The Pope has dispatched a Gentleman to compliment his Majesty, and sent the King a Prefent of all the Curiofities and Antiquities of Rome, represented in Seventeen Volumes, very richly bound, which were taken out of the Vatican Library. Letters from Genoa of the 14th Instant say, A Felucca was arrived there in Five Days from Marfeilles, with an Account, That the People of that City had made an Infurrection, by Reason of the Scarcity of Provifions; and that the Intendant had ordered fome Companies of Marines, and the Men belonging to the Gallies, to stand to their Arms to protect him from Violence; but that he began to be in as much Apprehension of his Guards, as those from whom they were to defend him. When that Veffel came away, the Soldiers murmured publickly for Want of Pay; and it was generally believed, they would pillage the Magazines, as the Garrisons of Grenoble, and other Towns of France, had already done. A Vessel which lately came into Leghorn, brought Advice, That the British Squadron was arrived at Port Mahon, where they were taking in more Troops, in order to attempt the Relief of Alicant, which still made a very vigorous Defence. 'Tis said, Admiral Bing will be at the Head of that Expedition. The King of Denmark was gone from Leghern towards Lucca.

They write from Vienna, That in case the Allies should enter into a Treaty of Peace with France, Count Zinzenderf will be appointed First Plenipotentiary, the Count de Goes the Second cond, and Monsieur Van Konsbruch a Third, Major-General Palmes, Envoy Extraordinary from her Britannick Majesty, has been very ungent with that Court to make their utmost Estorts against France the ensuing Campaign, in order to oblige it to such a Peace, as may establish the Tranquility of Europe for the sucure.

We are also informed, That the Pope use all imaginable Shifts to elude the Treaty concluded with the Emperor, and that he demanded the immediate Restitution of Commacchio, insisting also, That his Imperial Majesty should ask Pardon, and desire Absolution for what has dormerly passed, before he would solemnly acknowledge King Charles: But this was utterly refused.

They hear at Vienna, by Letters from Confiantinople, dated the 22d of February last, That on the 12th of that Month the Grand Signior took Occasion, at the Celebration of the Festivals of the Musselmen, to set all the Christian Slaves which were in the Galleys at Liberty.

Advices from Swifferland import, That the Preachers of the County of Tockenburg continue to create new Jealouties of the Protestants, and some Disturbances lately happened there on that Account. The Protestants and Papilts in the Town of Hamman go to Divine Service one after another in the same Church, as is usual in many other Parts of Swifferland; but on Sunday the 10th Instant, the Popish Curate having ended his Service, attempted to hinder the Protestants from entring into the Church according to Custom; but the Protestants briskly attacked him and his Party, and broke into it by Force.

Last Night, between Seven and Eight, his Grace the Duke of Marlborough arriv'd at Court. From my own Apartment, April 22.

The present great Captains of the Age, the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene, having been the Subject of the Discourse of the ait Company I was in, it has naturally led me into a Confideration of Alexander and Cafar, the Two greatest Names which ever appeared before this Century. In order to enter into their Characters, there needs no more but examining their Behaviour in Parallel Circumstances. It must be allowed, That they had an equal Greatness of Soul; but Casar's was more corrected and allayed by a Mixture of Prudence and Circumspection. This is seen conspicuously in one Particular in their Histories, wherein they feem to have shown exactly the Difference of their Tempers. When Alexander, after a long Course of Victories, would still have led his Soldiers farther from Home, they unanimously refuse to follow him. We meet with the like Behaviour in Cafar's Army in the Midst of his March against Ariovistus. Let us therefore observe the Conduct of our Two Generals in fo nice an Affair: And here we find Alexander at the Head of his Army, upbraiding them with their Cowardice, and Meanness of Spirit; and in the End, relling them plainly, He would go forward himself, though not a Man followed him. This showed indeed an excessive Bravery; but how would the Commander have come off, if the Speech had not succeeded, and the Soldiers had taken him at his Word? The Project feems of a Piece with Mr. Bays's in the Rehearfal, who, to gain a Clap in his Prologue, comes out, with a terrible Fellow in a Fur-Cap following him, and tells his Audience, If they would not like his Play, he would lie down and have his Head ftruck off. If this gained a Clap, all was well; but if not, there was nothing left but for the Executioner to do his Office. But Cafar would not leave the Success of his Speech to such uncertain Events: He shews his Men the Unreafonableness of their Fears in an obliging Manner, and concludes, That if none else would march along with them, he would go himfelf with the Tenth Legion, for he was affured of their Fidelity and Valour, though all the rest forsook him; not but that in all Probability they were as much against the March as the rest. The Result of all was very natural: The Tenth Legion fired with the Praises of their General, fend Thanks to him for the just Opinion he entertains of 'em; and the rest, ashamed to be outdone, affure him, That they are as ready to follow where he pleases to lead them, as any other Part of the Army.

The TATLER. [Nº 7.

From Saturd. April 23. to Tueld. April 26. 1709.

IT is so just an Observation, That Mocking is Catching, that I am become an unbappy Instance of it, and am (in the same Manner that I have represented Mr. Partridge) my self a dying Man, in Comparison of the Vigour with which I first set out in the World. Had it been otherwise, you may be sure I would not have pretended to have given for News, as I did last Saturday, a Diary of the Siege of Troy. But Man is a Creature very inconsistent with himself: The Greatest Hereet

Heroes are sometimes Fearful; the Spriteliest Wits at some Hours Dull; and the Greatest Politicians on some Occasions Whimsical. But I shall not pretend to palliate, or excuse the Matter; for I find, by a Calculation of my own Nativity, that I cannot hold out with any tolerable Wit longer than Two Minutes after Twelve a Clock at Night, between the 18th and 19th of the next Month. For which Space of Time, you may still expect to hear from me, but no longer except you will transmit to me the Occurrences you meet withrelating to your Amours, or any other Subject within the Rules by which I have proposed to walk. If any Gentleman or Lady fends to Isaac Bickerstaff Efg at Mr. Morphew's near Stationer's-Hall, by the Penny-Post, the Grief or Joy of their Soul, what they think fit of the Matter shall be related in Colours as much to their Advantage, as those in which Gervale has drawn the Agreeable Chloe, But since, without such Assistance, I frankly con-fest, and am sensible, that I have not a Month's Wit more, I think I ought, while I am in my found Health and Senses, to make my Will and Testament; which I do in Manner and Form following :

Imprimis, I give to the Stock-jobbers about the Exchange of London, as a Security for the Trusts daily reposed in them, all my real Estate; which I do hereby west in the said Body of worthy Citszens for ever.

Item, For as much as it is very hard to keep Land in Repair without ready Cash, I do, out of my Personal Estate, bestow the Bear-skin, which I have frequently lent to several Societies about this Town, to supply their Necessities. I say, I give also the said Bear-skin, as an immediate Fund, to the said Citizens for ever.

Item, I do hereby appoint a certain Number of the the Said Citizens to take all the Custom-house or Customary Oaths, concerning all Goods imported by the whole City, strictly directing, That some select Members, and not the whole Number of a Body Corporate, should be perjured.

Item, I forbid all N-s and Persons of Q-ty, to watch Bargains near and about the Exchange, to the Diminution and Wrong of the Said Stockjubbers.

Thus far, in as brief and intelligible a Mamer as any Will can appear, till it is explained by the Learned, I have disposed of my Real and Personal Estate: But, as I am an Adept, I have by Birth an equal Right to give also an indefeasible Title to my Endowments and Qualifications; which I do in the following Manner:

Irem, I give my Chaftity to all Virgins who have withstood their Market.

Item, I give my Courage among all who are ashamed of their distressed Friends, all Sneakers in Assemblies, and Men who shew Valour in Common Conversation.

Item, I give my Wit (as Rich Men give to the Rich) among such as think they have enough already. And in case they shall not accept of the Legacy, I give it to Bentivolio, to defend his Works from Time to Time, as he shall think fit to publish 'em.

Irem, I bestow my Learning upon the Honourary

Members of the Royal Society.

Now for the Disposal of this Body.

As these Eyes must one Day scase to gaze on Teraminta, and this Heart shall one Day pant no more for her Indignation: That is to say, since this Budy must be Earth, I shall commit it to the Dust in a Manner suitable to my Character. Therefore, as there are those who dispute, Whether there is any such Real Person as Isaac Bickerstaff or not? I shall excuse all Persons who appear what they really are, from coming to my Funeral. But all those who are, in their Way of Life, Personæ, as the Latins have it, Persons assumed, and who appear what they really are not, are hereby invited to that Solemnity.

The Body Shall be carried by Six Watchmen, who are never feen in the Day.

Item, The Pall shall be held up by the Six most known Pretenders to Honesty, Wealth and Power, who are not possessed of any of them. The Two First, an Half Lawyer, a Compleat Justice. The Two next, a Chymist, a Projector. The Third Couple, a Treasury Solicitor, and a small Courtier.

To make my Funeral (what that Solemnity, when done to common Men, really is in it felf) a very Farce; and fince all Mourners are meer Actors on these Occasions, I shall desire those who are professedly such, to attend me. I humbly therefore befeech Afrs. Barry to all once more, and be my Widow. When she swoons away at the Church-Porch, Iappoint the Merry Sir John Falstaff, and the Gay Sir Harry Wildair, to Support her. I defire Mr. Penkethman to follow in the Halit of a Cardinal, and Mr. Bullock in that of a Privy-Councellor. To make up the rest of the Appearance, I defire all the Ladies from the Balconies to weep with Mrs. Barry, as they hope to be Wives and Widows themselves. I invite all, who have nothing elfe to do, to accept of Gloves and Scarves.

Thus, with the Great Charles V. of Spain, I relign the Glories of thus Transitory World: Yet, at the same Time, to show you my Indifference, and that my Desires are not too much fixed upon any Thing, I own to you, I am as willing to stay as go: Therefore leave it in the Choice of my Gentle Readers, whether I shall hear from them, er they hear no more from me.

White's Chocolate-house, April 25.

After-Day being a Time when you cannot well meet with a sime when you cannot well meet with any but humble Adventures; and there being fuch a Thing as low Gallantry, as well as a low Comedy, Colonel Ramble and my felf went early this Morning into the Fields, which were strewed with Shepherds and Shepherdesses, but indeed of a different Turn from the Simplicity of those of Areadia. Every Hedge was conscious of more than what the Representations of enamoured Swains admit of. While we were furveying the Crowd around us, we faw at a Distance a Company coming towards Pancras-Church; but tho' there was not much Disorder, we thought we saw the Figure of a Man stuck through with a Sword, and at every Step ready to fall, if a Woman by his Side had not supported him; the rest followed Two and Two. When we came nearer this Appearance, who should it be but Monsieur Guardeloop, mine and Ramble's French Taylor, attended by others, leading one of Madam Depingle's Maids to the Church, in order to their Espousals. It was his Sword tucked fo high above his Wast, and the Circumflex which Persons of his Profession take in their Walking, that made him appear at a Distance wounded and falling. But the Morning being rainy, methought the March to this Wedding was but too lively a Picture of Wedlock it felf. They feemed both to have a Month's Mind to make the best of their Way fingle; yet both tugged Arm in Arm; and when they were in a dirty Way, he was but deeper in the Mire, by endeavouring to pull out his Companion, and yet without helping her. The Bridegroom's Feathers in his Hat all drooped, one of his Shooes had loft an Heel.

In thort, he was in his whole Person and Dress fo extremely foufed, that there did not appear one Inch or fingle Thread about him unmarried. Pardon me, that the melancholy Object fill dwells upon me fo far, as to reduce me to Punning. However, we attended to the Chapel, where we flayed to hear the irrevocable Words pronounced upon our old Servant, and made the best of our Way to Town. I took a Resolution to forbear all married Persons, or any in Danger of being fuch, for Four and twenty Hours at least; therefore dreffed, and went to vifit Florimell, the vainest Thing in Town, where I knew would drop in Colonel Picket, just come from the Camp, her professed Admirer. He is of that Order of Men who has much Honour and Merit, but withal a Coxcomb; the other of that Set of Females, who has Innocence and Wit, but the First of Coquets. It is easy to believe, These must be Admirers of each other. She fays, The Colonel rides the best of any Man in England: The Colonel fays, She talks the best of any Woman. At the same Time, he understands Wie just as she does Horsemanship. You are to know. these extraordinary Persons see each other daily; and they themselves, as well as the Town, think it will be a Match: But it can never happen that they can come to the Point; for initead of addressing to each other, they spend their whole Time in Reports of themselves: He is fatisfied if he can convince her he is-a tine Gentleman, and a Man of Consequence; and the, in appearing to him an accomplished Lady and a Wit, without further Defign. he tells her of his Manner of posting his Men at fuch a Pass, with the Numbers he commanded on that Detachment: She tells him, D 2 how she was dressed on such a Day at Court, and what Offers were made her the Week following. She seems to hear the Repetition of his Men's Names with Admiration; and waits only to answer him with as false a Muster of Lovers. They talk to each other not to be informed, but approved. Thus they are so like, that they are to be ever distant, and the Parallel Lines may run together for ever, but never meet.

Will's Coffee-house, April 25.

This Evening, the Comedy, called Epfom-Wells, was acted for the Benefit of Mr. Bullock, who, though he is a Person of much Wit and Ingenuity, has a peculiar Talent of looking like a Fool, and therefore excellently well qualified for the Part of Bisket in this Play. I cannot indeed fufficiently admire his Way of bearing a Beating, as he does in this Drama, and that with fuch a Natural Air and Propriety of Folly, that one cannot help wishing the Whip in one's own Hand; fo richly does he feem to deserve his Chastisement. Skilful Actors think it a very peculiar Happiness to play in a Scene with such as Top their Parts. Therefore I cannot but fay, when the Judgment of any good Author directs him to write a Beating for Mr. Bullock from Mr. William Penkethman, or for Mr. William Penkethman from Mr. Bullock, those excellent Players seem to be in their most shining Circumstances, and please me more, but with a different Sort of Delight, than that which I receive from those Grave Scenes of Brutus and Caffius, or Anthony and Ventidius. The whole Comedy is very just, and the Low Part of Humane Life represented with much Humour and Wit.

St. James's Coffee-house, April 25.

We are advised from Vienna, by Letters of the 20th Instant, That the Emperor hath lately added 20 new Members to his Council of State, but they have not yet taken their Places at the Board. General Thaun is returned from Baden, his Health being so well re-established by the Baths of that Place, that he deligns to fet out next Week for Turin, to his Command of the Imperial Troops in the Service of the Duke of Savoy. His Imperial Majesty has advanced his Brother Count Henry Thaun to be a Brigadier, and a Councellor of the Aulick Council of War. These Letters import, That King Stanistans and the Swedish General Crassau are directing their March to the Nieper, to join the King of Sweden's Army in Ukrania: That the States of Austria have furnished Marshal Heister with a confiderable Sum of Money, to enable him to push on the War vigorously in Hungary, where all Things as yet are in perfect Tranquility: And that General Thungen has been very importunate for a speedy Reinforcement of the Forces on the Upper Rhine, representing at the fame Time, what Miseries the Inhabitants must necessarily undergo, if the Deligns of France on those Parts be not speedily and effectually prevented.

Letters from Rome, dated the 13th Instant, say, that on the preceding Sunday his Holiness was carried in an open Chair from St. Peter's to St. Mary's, attended by the Sacred College, in Cavalcade; and, after Mass, distributed several Dowries for the Marriage of poor and Distressed Virgins. The Proceedings of that Court are very dilatory concerning the Recognition of King Charles, notwithstanding the pressing Instances of the Marquis de Prie, who has declared, That if this Affair be not wholly concluded by the 15th Instant, he will retire from that Court, and order the Imperial Troops to return into the Ecclefiastical State. On the other Hand, the Duke of Anjou's Minister has, in the Name of his Master, demanded of his Holiness to explain himself on that Affair; which 'tis said, will be finally determined in a Confiftory to be held on Monday next; the Duke d'Uzeda de figning to delay his Departure till he fees the Issue. These Letters also say, That the Court was mightily alarmed at the News which they received by an Express from Ferrara, that General Boneval, who commands in Commachio, had fent Circular Letters to the Inhabitants of St. Alberto, Longastrino, Fillo, and other adjacent Parts, enjoining them to come and fwear Fealty to the Emperor, and receive new Investitures of their Fiefs from his Hands. Letters from other Parts of Italy fay, That the King of Denmark continues at Lucca; that four English and Dutch Men of War were seen off of Oneglia, bound for Final, in order to transport the Troops. deligned for Barcelona; and that her Majesty's Ship the Cotchester arrived at Leghorn the 4th In-Stant from Port Mahon, with Advice, That Major General Stanhope defigned to part from thence the 1st Instant with 6 or 7000 Men to attempt the Relief of the Castle of Alicant.

Our last Advices from Berlin, bearing Date the 27th Instant, import, That the King was gone to Linum, and the Queen to Mecklenburg; but that their Majesties deligned to return the next Week to Oranienburg, where a great Chase of Wild-Beasts was prepared for their Divertion, and from thence they intend to proceed together to Potsdam; That the Prince Royal was let out for Brabant, but intended to make some short Stay at Hanover. These Letters also inform us, That they are advised from Obory, that the King of Sweden, being on his March towards Holki, met General Reme with a Detachment of Muscovites, who placing some Regiments in Ambuscade, attacked the Swedes in their Rear, and putting them to Flight, killed 2000 Men, the King himself having his Horse shot under him.

We hear from Copenhagen, That the Ice being broke, the Sound is again open for the Ships; and that they hoped his Majesty would return fooner than they at first expected.

Letters from the Hague, dated May 4. N. S. fay, That an Express arrived there on the 1st from Prince Eugene to his Grace the Duke of Marlborough. The States are advised, That the Auxiliaries of Saxony were arrived on the Frontiers of the United Provinces; as also, That the Two Regiments of Wolfembuttel, and 4000 Troops from Wirtemberg, which are to serve in Flanders, are in full March thither. Letters from Flanders say, That the great Convoy of Ammunition and Provisions which set out from Ghent for Lifle, was fafely arrived at Courtray. We hear from Paris, That the King has ordered the Militia on the Coasts of Normandy and Bretagne to be in a Readiness to march; and that the Court was in Apprehension of a Deicent, to animate the People to rife in the midit of their present Hardships.

They write from Spain, That the Pope's Nuncio left Madrid the 10th of April, in order to go to Bayonne; that the Marquis de Bay was at Badajos to observe the Motions of the Portugueze; and that the Count d'Estain, with a Body of 500 Men, was on his March to attack Gironne. The Duke of Anjou has deposed the Bishop of Lerida, as being a Favourer of the Interest of King Charles; and has summoned a Convocation at Madrid, composed of the Arch.

HE Play of The London Cuckolds was acted this Evening before a fuitable Audience. who were extremely well diverted with that Heap of Vice and Absurdity. The Indignation which Eugenio, who is a Gentleman of a just Tast, has, upon Occasion of seeing humane Nature fall fo low in their Delights, made him, I thought, expatiate upon the Mention of this Play very agreeably. Of all Men living, faid he, I pity Players, (who must be Men of good Un-derstanding to be capable of being such) that they are obliged to repeat and assume proper Gestures for representing Things, of which their Reason must be ashamed, and which they must disdain their Audience for approving. The Amendment of these low Gratifications is only to be made by People of Condition, by encouraging the Presentation of the Noble Characters drawn by Shakespear and others, from whence it is impossible to return without strong Impresfions of Honour and Humanity. On these Occasions, Distress is laid before us with all its Causes and Consequences, and our Resentment placed according to the Merit of the Persons afflicted. Were Drama's of this Nature more acceptable to the Tast of the Town, Men who have Genius would bend their Studies to excel in em. how strongly we are touched by meer Pictures. Who can fee Le Brun's Picture of the Battle of Porus, without entring into the Character of that fierce gallant Man, and being accordingly spurred to an Emulation of his Constancy and Courage? When he is falling with his Wound, the Features are at the same Time very terrible and languishing; and there is such a stern Faintness diffused through all his Look, as is apt to move a kind of Horrour, as well as Pity, in the Be-This, I say, is an Effect wrought by meer Lights and Shades, consider also a Reprefentation made by Words only, as in an Account given by a good Writer: Catiline in Salluft makes just such a Figure, as Porus by Le Brun. It is faid of him, Catilina vero longe a fus inter Hostium Cadavera repertus est; paululum etiam Spirans, ferocitatemque Animi quam vivus habuerat in Vultu retinens. 'Catiline was found killed! far from his own Men among the dead Bodies of the Enemy : He seemed still to breath, and still retained in his Face the same Fierceness he had when he was living. You have in that one Sentence, a lively Impression of his whole Life and Actions. What I would infinuate from all this, is, That if the Painter and the Historian can do thus much in Colours and Language, what may not be performed by an excellent Poet? When the Character he draws is represented by the Person, the Manner, the Book, and the Motion, of an accomplished Player: If a Thing painted or related can irrelistibly enter our Hearts, what may not be brought to pals by feeing generous Things performed before our Eyes? Eugenie ended his Discourse, by recommending the apt Use of a Theatre, as the most agreeable and eatie Method of making a polite and moral Gentry, which would end in: rendring the rest of the People regular in their

Letters from Swifferland inform us, That the Effects of the great Scarcity of Corn in France were felt at Geneva; the Magistrates of which. City had appointed Deputies to treat with the Cantons of Bern and Zurich, for Leave to buy up fuch Quantities of Grain within their Territories as should be thought necessary. The Protestants of Tockenburg are still in Arms about the Convent of St. John, and have declared, That they will not lay them down, till they shall have fufficient Security from the Roman Catholicks, of living unmolested in the Exercise of their Religion. In the mean Time, the Deputies. of Bern and Tokenburg have frequent Conferences at Zurich with the Regency of that Canton, to find out Methods for the quieting thefe-Diforders.

Letters from the Hague of the 3d of May advise, That the Prefident Rouille, after his last Conference with the Deputies of the States, thad retired to Bedegrave, five Miles distant from.

Worden, and expected the Return of a Courier from France on the 4th, with new Instructions. It is faid, if his Answer from the French Court shall not prove Satisfactory, he will be defired to withdraw out of these Parts. In the mean Time it is also reported, That his Equipage, as an Ambassador on this great Occasion, is actually on the March towards him. They write from Flanders, That the great Convoy of Provisions, which fet out from Ghent, is safely arrived at Liste. Those Advices add, That the Enemy had affembled near Tournay a confiderable Body of Troops drawn out of the Neighbouring Garrisons. Their High Mightinesses having fent Orders to their Ministers at Hamburgh and Dantzick, to engage the Magistrates of those Cities to forbid the Sale of Corn to the French, and to fignify to them, That the Dutch Merchants will buy up as much of that Commodity as they can spare. The Hamburghers have accordingly contracted with the Dutch, and refused any Commerce with the French on. that Occasion.

From my own Apartment.

After the Lassitude of a Day spent in the strolling Manner, which is usual with Men of Pleasure in this Town, and with a Head full of a Million of Impertinencies, which had danced round it for Ten Hours together, I came to my Lodging, and haftened to Bed. My Valet de Chambre knows my University-Trick of reading there; and he being a good Scholar for a Gentleman, ran over the Names of Horace, Tiwould have. Bring Virgil, faid I, and if I tall afleep, take Care of the Candle. I read the Sixth Book over with the most exquisite Delight, and had gone half through it a fecond' Time, when the pleasing Ideas of Elyfan Fields, deceased deceased Worthies walking in 'em, fincere Lovers enjoying their Lauguishment without Pain. Compassion for the unhappy Spirits who had mispent their short Day-light, and were exiled from the Seats of Blifs for ever; I fay, I was deep again in my Reading, when this Mixture of Images had taken Place of all others in my Imagination before, and lulled me into a Dream, from which I am just awake, to my great Difadvantage. The happy Mantions of Elyfum by Degrees seemed to be wasted from me, and the very Traces of my late waking Thoughts began to fade away, when I was cast by a sudden Whirlwind upon an Island, encompassed with a roaring and troubled Sea, which shak'd its very Centre, and rocked its Inhabitants as in a The Islanders lay on their Faces without offering to look up, or hope for Preservation; all her Harbours were crowded with Mariners, and tall Vessels of War lay in Danger of being driven to Pieces on her Shores. Bless me! faid I, why have I lived in such a Manner, that the Convultion of Nature should be fo terrible to me, when I feel in my felf, that the better Part of me is to survive it? Oh! may that be in Happiness. A sudden Shriek, in which the whole People on their Faces joined, interrupted my Soliloquy, and turned my Eyes and Attention to the Object which had given us that sudden Start, in the Midit of an inconfolable and speechless Affliction. Immediately the Winds grew calm, the Waves subsided, and the People stood up, turning their Faces upon a magnificent Pile in the Midst of the Mand. There we beheld an Hero of a comely and erect Aspect, but pale and languid, sitting under a Canopy of State. By the Faces and dumb Sorrow of those who attended, we thought him in the Article of Death. At a Distance sate a Lady, whose Life seemed to hang hang upon the same Thread with his: She kept her Eyes fixed upon him, and seemed to smother Ten Thousand Thousand nameless. Things, which urged her Tenderness to class him in her Arms: But her Greatness of Spirit overcame those Sentiments, and gave her Power to forbear disturbing his last Moment; which immediately approached. The Hero looked up with an Air of Negligence, and Satiety of Being, rather than of Pain to leave it; and leaning

When the Horoine, who fate at a Distance, faw his last Instant come, she threw her self at his Feet, and kneeling, pressed his Hand to her Lips; in which Posture she continued under the Agony of an unutrerable Sorrow, till conducted from our Sight by her Attendants. That commanding Awe, which accompanies the Grief of great Minds, restrained the Multitude while in her Presence; but as soon as she retired, they gave Way to their Distraction, and all the Islanders called upon their deceased Hero. Tohim, methought, they cryed out, as to a Guardian Being, and I gathered from their broken Accents, That it was he who had the Empire over the Ocean and its Powers, by which he had long protected the Island from Shipwreck and Invation. They now give a Loofe to their Moan, and think themselves exposed without Hopes of Humane or Divine Affiftance. While the People ran wild, and expressed all the different Forms of Lamentation, methought a Sable Cloud over-shadowed the whole Land, and covered its Inhabitants with Darkness: No Glimpse of Light appeared, except one Ray from Heaven upon the Place in which the Heroine now fecluded her felf from the World, with her Eyes fixed on those Abodes to which her Confort was afcended. Methought a long Period of Time had passed away in Mourning and in Darkness, when a Twilight began by Degrees to enlighten the Hemisphere; and looking round me, I saw a Boat rowed towards the Shore, in which sate a Personage adorned with Warlike Trophies, bearing on his Left Arm a Shield, on which was engraven the Image of Mary, and in his Right Hand a Branch of Olive. His Visage was at once so winning and so awful, that the Shield and the Olive seemed equally fuitable to his Genius.

When this illustrious * Person touched on the Shore, he was received by the Acclamations of the People, and followed to the Palace of the Heroine. No Pleasure in the Glory of her Arms, or the Acclamations of her applauding Subjects, were ever capable to fulpend her Sorrow for one Moment, 'till the faw the Olive Branch in the Hand of that auspicious Messenger. At that Sight, as Heaven bestows its Bleffings on the Wants and Importunities of Mortals, out of its Native Bounty, and not to encrease its own Power or Honour, in Compassion to the World, the Celestial Mourner was then first seen to turn her Regard to Things below; and taking the Branch out of the Warrior's Hand, looked at it with much Satisfaction, and spoke of the Blef-fings of Peace, with a Voice and Accent, such as that in which Guardian Spirits whisper to dyring Penitents Assurances of Happiness. The Air was hushed, the Multitude attentive, and all-Nature in a Pause, while she was speaking. But as foon as the Messenger of Peace had made fome low Reply, in which, methought, I heard the Word Iberia, the Heroine affuming a. more severe Air, but such as spoke Resolution, without Rage, returned him the Olive, and

The TATLER. [Nº 9.

From Thursd. April 28. to Saturd. April 30. 170).

Will's Coffee-house, April 28. THis Evening we were entertained with The Old Batchelor, a Comedy of deserved Re-putation. In the Character which gives Name to the Play, there is excellently represented the Reluctance of a battered Debanchee to come into the Trammels of Order and Decency : He: neither languishes nor burns, but frets for Love. The Gentlemen of more regular Behaviour are drawn with much Spirit and Wir, and the Drama introduced by the Dialogue of the first Scene with uncommon, yet natural Conversation. The Part of Fondlemife is a lively Image of the unseafonable Fondness of Age and Impotence. But inflead of fuch agreeable Works as these, the Town has this half Age been tormented with Infects, called Easie Writers, whose Abilities Mr. Wicherly one Day described excellently well in one Word: That, faid he, among these Fellows is called Easy Writing, which any one may eafily write. Such Jantie Scribblers are so justly laughed at for their Sonnets on Phillis and Chleris, and Fantastical Descriptions in em, that an ingenious Kinsman of mine, of the Family of the Staffs, Mr. Humphrey. Wagstaff by Name, has, to avoid their Strain, run into a Way perfectly new, and described Things, exactly as they happen: He never forms Fields, or Nymphs, or Groves, where they are not, bur makes makes the Incidents just as they really appear. For an Example of it; I stole out of his Manuscript the following Lines: They are a Description of the Morning, but of the Morning in Town; nay, of the Morning at this End of the Town, where my Kinsman at present lodges.

Now hardly here and there an Hackney-Coach Appearing, show'd the ruddy Morn's Approach. Now Betty from her Mafter's Bed had flown And foftly stole to discompose her own. All that I apprehend is, that Dear Namps will be angry I have published these Lines; not that he has any Reason to be assumed of 'em, but for fear of those Rogues, the Bane to all excellent Performances, the Imitators. Therefore, beforehand, I bar all Descriptions of the Evenning; as, a Medley of Verses signifying, Grey-Peas are now cried warm: That Wenches now begin to amble round the Passages of the Playhouse: Or of Noon; as, That sine Ladies and great Beaux are just yawning out of their Beds and Windows in Pall-Mall, and so forth. I forewarn also all Persons from encouraging any Draughts after my Cousin; and soretell any Man

Man who shall go about to imitate him, that he will be very infipid. The Family Stock is embarked in this Defign, and we will not admit of Counterfeits: Dr. Anderson and his Heirs enjoy his Pills, Sir William Read has the Cure of Eyes, and Monfieur Rofelli can only cure the Gout. We pretend to none of these Things; but to examine who and who are together, to tell any mistaken Man he is not what he believes he is, to distinguish Merit, and expose false Pretences to it, is a Liberty our Family has by Law in 'em, from an Inter-Marriage with a Daughter of Mr. Scoggin, the famous Droll of the last Centu-This Right I defign to make of; but will not encroach upon the above-mentioned Adepts, or any other. At the same Time I shall take all the Privileges I may, as an Englishman, and will lay hold of the late Act of Naturalization to introduce what I shall think fit from France. The Use of that Law may, I hope, be extended to People the polite World with new Characters, as well as the Kingdom it felf with new Subjects. Therefore an Author of that Nation, called Le Bruyere, I shall make bold with on fuch Occasions. The last Person I read of in that Writer, was, Lord Timon. Timon, fays my Author, is the most generous of all Men; but is so hurried away with that strong Impulse of Bestowing, that he confers Benefits without Distinction, and is Munificent without laying Obligations. For all the Unworthy, who receive from him, have so little Sense of this noble Infirmity, that they look upon themselves rather as Partners in a Spoil, than Partakers of a Bounty. The other Day, coming into Paris, I met Timon going out on Horseback, attended only by one Servant. It struck me with a sudden Damp, to see a Man of so excellent a Disposition, and that understood making a Figure fo very well, fo much shorten'd in his Retinue. But passing by his House, I saw his great Coach break to Pieces before his Door. and, by a strange Inchantment, immediately turned into many different Vehicles. The first was a very pretty Chariot, into which step'd his Lordship's Secretary. The second was hung a little heavier; into that strutted the Fat Steward. In an Instant followed a Chaise, which was enter'd by the Butler. The rest of the Body and Wheels were forthwith changed into Go-carts, and ranaway with by the Nurses and Brats of the rest of the Family. What makes these Mistortunes in the Affairs of Timon the more aftonishing, is, That he has a better Understanding than those who cheat him; fo that a Man knows not which. more to wonder at, the Indifference of the Master, or the Impudence of the Servant.

White's Chocolate-house, April 29. It is Matter of much Speculation among the Beaus and Oglers, what it is that can have made fo fudden a Change, as has been of late observed, in the whole Behaviour of Pastorella, who never fate still a Moment till she was Eighteen, which she has now exceeded by Two Months. Her Aunt, who has the Care of her, has not been always fo rigid as she is at this present Date; but has so good a Sense of the Frailty of Woman, and Fallhood of Man, that The resolved on all Manner of Methods to keep Pastorella, if possible, in Safety, against her felf, and all her Admirers. At the same Time the good Lady knew by long Experience, that a gay Inclination, curbed too rashly, would but run to the greater Excesses for that Restraint : Therefore intended to watch her, and take fome Opportunity of ingaging her infentibly in her own Interests, without the Anguish of an Admonition. You are to know then, That Miss, with all her Flirting and Ogling, had also natu+

naturally a strong Curiosity in her, and was the greatest Eves-Dropper breathing. Parifatis (for to her prudent Aunt is called) observed this Humour, and retires one Day to her Closer, into which she knew Pastorella would peep, and liften to know how the was employed. It happened accordingly, and the young Lady faw her good Governante on her Knees, and after a mental Bahaviour, break into these Words: As for the dear Child committed to my Care, let her Sobriety of Carriage, and Severity of Behaviour, be such, as may make that Noble Lord, who is taken with her Beauty, turn his De-figns to fuch as are honourable. Here Parisatis. heard her Neece nestle closer to the Key-Hole: She then goes on; Make her the joyful Mother of a numerous and wealthy Offspring; and let her Carriage be fuch, as may make this Noble Youth expect the Bleffings of an happy Marriage, from the Singularity of her Life, in this loofe and cen-Jorious Age. Mils having heard enough, fneaks off for Fear of Discovery, and immediately, at her Glass, alters the Sitting of her Head; then pulls up her Tucker, and forms her felf into the exact Manner of Lindamira: In a Word, becomes a fincere Convert to every Thing that's commendable in a fine young Lady; and Two or Three fuch Matches as her Aunt feigned in her Devotions, are at this Day in her Choice. This is the History and Original Cause of Pastorella's Conversion from Coquettry. The Prudence in the Management of this young Lady's Temper, and good Judgment of it, is hardly. to be exceeded. I scarce remember a greater Instance of Forbearance of the usual peevish Way. with which the Aged treat the Young, than this, except that of our famous Noy, whose good Nature went fo far, as to make him put off his Admonitions to his Son, even till after his Death;

The TATLER. [No 10.

By Mrs. Jenny Distaff, Half-Sifter to Mr. Bickerstaff.

From Saturd. April 30. to Tuefd. May 3. 1709.

My Brother Isaac having a sudden Occasion to go out of Town, ordered me to take upon me the Dispatch of the next Advices from Home, with Liberty to speak it my own Way;

not doubting the Allowances which would be given to a Writer of my Sex. You may be fure. I undertook it with much Satisfaction: And I confess, I am not a little pleased with the Opportunity of running over all the Papers in his Closet, which he has left open for my Use on this Occasion. The first that I lay my Hands on, is, A Treatise concerning The Empire of Beauty, and the Effects it has had in all Nations of the World, upon the publick and private Actions of Men; with an Appendix, which he calls, The Batchelor's Scheme for Governing his Wife. The first Thing he makes this Gentleman propose is, That the shall be no Woman; for The is to have an Aversion to Balls, to Opera's, to Visits: She is to think his Company sufficient to fill up all the Hours of Life with great Satisfaction: She is never to believe any other Man Wife, Learned, or Valiant; or at least but in a second Degree. In the next Place, he intends she shall be a Cuckold; but expects, that he himself must live in perfect Security from that Terror. He dwells a great while on Instructions for her discreet Behaviour, in case of his Falshood. I have not Patience with these unreasonable Expectations, therefore turn back to the Treatise it self. Here, indeed, my Brother deduces all the Revolutions among Men from the Passion of Love; and in his Preface, answers that usual Observation against us, That there is no Quarrel without a Woman in it; with a gallant Affertion, That there is nothing elfe worth Quarrelling for. My Brother is of a Complexion truly Amorous; all his Thoughts and Actions carry in 'em a Tincture of that obliging Inclination; and this Turn has opened his Eyes to see, we are not the inconsiderable Creatures which unlucky Pretenders to our Favour would infinuate. He observes, That no Man begins to make any tolerable Figure, till he sets out with the Hopes of Pleasing some one of us. No sooner he takes that in Hand, but he pleases every one else by the by. It has an immediate Effect upon his Behaviour. There is Colonel Ranter, who never spoke without an Oath, till he saw the Lady Betty Modish; now never gives his Man an Order, but it is, Pray Tom, do it. The Drawers where he drinks, live in perfect Happiness. He asked Will at the George t'other Day, How he did? Where he used to say, Damn it, Is it so? He now believes there is some Mistake: He must confess, he is of another Opinion; but however he won't infift.

Every Temper, except downright infipid, is to be animated and foftned by the Influence of Beauty: But of this untractable Sort is a lifeless handsome Fellow that visits us, whom I have dreffed at this Twelvemonth; but he is as insentible of all the Arts I use, as if he conversed all that Time with his Nurse. He outdoes our whole Sex in all the Faults our Enemies impute to us; he has brought Laziness into an Opinion, and makes his Indolence his Philosophy: Infomuch, that no longer ago than Yesterday in the Evening he gave me this Account of himself: I am, Madam, perfectly unmoved at all that palles among Men, and seldom give my self the Fatigue of going among 'em; but when I do, I always appear the same Thing to those whom I converse with. My Hours of Existence, or being awake, are from Eleven in the Morning to Eleven at Night; half of which I live to my felf, in picking my Teeth, washing my Hands, paring my Nails, and looking in the Glass. The Insignificancy of my Manners to the rest of the World, makes the Laughers call me a Quid Nunc, a Phrase which I neither understand, or shall ever enquire what they mean by it. The last of me each Night is at St. James's Coffeehouse, house, where I converse, yet never fall into a Dispute on any Occasion, but leave the Understanding I have, Passive of all that goes through it, without entring into the Business of Life. thus, Madam, have I arrived by Lazines, to what others pretended to by Philosophy, a perfect Neglect of the World. Sure, if our Sex had the Liberty of frequenting Publick Houses and Conversations, we should put these Rivals of our Faults and Follies out of Countenance. However, we shall soon have the Pleasure of being acquainted with 'em one Way or other, for my Brother Isaac defigns, for the Use of our Sex, to give the exact Characters of all the Chief Politicians who frequent any of the Coffeehouses from St. James's to the Change; but defigns to begin with that Cluster of Wise Heads, as they are found fitting every Evening from the Left-side of the Fire, at the Smyrna, to the Door. This will be of great Service for us, and I have Authority to promise an exact Journal of their Deliberations; the Publication of which I am to be allowed for Pin-Money. In the mean Time, I cast my Eye upon a new Book, which gave me a more pleasing Entertainment, being a fixth Part of Miscellany Poems, published by Jacob Tonson; which I find, by my Brother's Notes upon it, no Way inferior to the other Volumes. There are, it feems, in this, a Collection of the best Pastorals that have hitherto appeared in England; but among them, none superior to that Dialogue between Sylvia and Dorinda, written by one of my own Sex; where all our little Weaknesses are laid open in a Manner more just, and with truer Raillery, than ever Man yet hit upon.

Only this I now discern, From the Things thou'st have me learn; That Womankind's peculiar Joys From past or present Beauties rise. Nº

But to reassume my first Design, there cannot be a greater Instance of the Command of Females, than in the prevailing Charms of the Heroine in the Play, which was acted this Night, call'd, All for Love; or, The World well loft. The enamoured Antony religns Glory and Power to the Force of the attractive Cleopatra, whose Charms were the Defence of her Diadem, against a People otherwise invincible. is so natural for Women to talk of themselves, that it is to be hoped, all my own Sex, at least, will pardon me, that I could fall into no other Discourse. If we have their Favour, we give our felves very little Anxiety for the rest of our Readers. I believe I see a Sentence of Latin in my Brother's Day-Book of Wir, which feems applicable on this Occasion, and in Contempt of the Criticks.

be followed by 6 Battalions more.

Letters from Naples of the 16th of April say, That the Marquis de Prie's Son was arrived there, with Instructions from his Father, to signify to the Viceroy the Necessity his Imperial Majesty was under, of desiring an Aid from that Kingdom, for carrying on the extraordinary Expences of the War. On the 14th of the same Month, they made a Review of the Spanish Troops in that Garrison, and afterwards of the Marines; one Part of whom will embark with those designed for Barcelona, and the rest are to be sent on Board the Gallies appointed to convoy I rovisions to that Place.

We hear from Rome, by Letters dated the 20th of April, That the Count de Mellos, Envoy from the King of Portugal, had made his Publick Entry into that City with much State and Magnificence. The Pope has lately held two other Consistories, wherein he made a Promotion of two Cardinals; but the Acknowledgment of King Charles is still deferr'd.

Letters from other Parts of Italy advise us, That the Doge of Venice continues dangerously Ill: That the Prince de Carignan having relaps'd into a violent Fever, died the 23d of April, in his 80th Year.

Advices from Vienna of the 27th of April import, That the Archbishop of Saltzburg is dead, who is succeeded by Count Harrach, formerly Bishop of Vienna, and for these last Three Years Coadjutor to the said Archbishop; and that Prince Maximilian of Lichtenstein has likewise departed this Life, at his Country Seat call'd Gromaw in Moravia. These Advices add, That the Emperor has nam'd Count Zinzendorf, Count Goes, and Monsieur Construck, for his Plenipotentiaries tentiaries in an ensuing Treaty of Peace; and they hear from Hungary, That the Imperialists have had several successful Skirmishes with the Malecontents.

Letters from Paris, dated May the 6th, fay, That the Mareschal de Thesse arriv'd there on the 29th of the last Month; and that the Chevalier de Beuil was sent thither by Don Pedro Ronquillo with Advice, That the Confederate Squadron appeared before Alicant the 17th, and having for some Time cannonaded the City, endeavoured to land fome Troops for the Relief of the Cafile; but General Stanbope finding the Passes well guarded, and the Enterprize dangerous, demanded to capitulate for the Castle; which being granted him, the Garrison, consulting of 600 Regular Troops, march'd out with their Arms and Baggage the Day following; and being received on Board, they immediately fet Sail for Barcelona. These Letters add, That the March of the French and Swifs Regiments is further deferr'd for a few Days; and that the Duke of Noailles was just ready to set out for Rouffillon, as well as the Count de Bezons for Casalonia.

The same Advices say, Bread was sold at Paris for 6 d. per Pound; and that there was not half enough, ev'n at that Rate, to supply the Necessities of the People, which reduced them to the utmost Despair; that 300 Men had taken up Arms, and having plunder'd the Market of the Suburb of St. Germain, pressed down by their Multitude the King's Guards who oppos'd them. Two of those Mutineers were afterward seiz'd, and condemn'd to Death; but Four others went to the Magistrate who pronounced that Sentence, and told him, He must expect to answer with his own Life, for those of their Comrades. All Order and Sense of Government being thus loft among the enraged People, to keep up a Show of Authority; the Captain of the Guards. who faw all their Infolence, pretended, That he had represented to the King their deplorable Condition, and had obtained their Pardon. It is further reported, That the Dauphin, and Dutchess of Burgundy, as they went to the Opera, were surrounded by Crowds of People, who upbraided them with their Neglect of the general Calamity, in going to Divertions, when the whole People were ready to perish for want of Bread. Edicts are daily published to suppress thefe Riots; and Papers, with Menaces against the Government, as publickly thrown about. Among others, these Words were dropt in a Court of Justice, France wants a Ravilliac or a Tesuit ro deliver her. Besides this universal Diitress, there is a conragious Sickness, which, it is feared, will end in a Pestilence. Letters from Bourdeaux bring Accounts no less lamentable; The Pealants are driven by Hunger from their Abodes into that Ciry, and make Lamentations in the Streets without Redrefs.

We are advised by Letters from the Hague, dated the 10th Instant, N. S. That on the oth, the Marquis de Torcy arrived there from Paru; but the Pailport, by which he came, having been fent blank by Monsieur Rouille, he was there two Days before his Quality was known. That Minister offered to communicate to Monf. Henfins the Proposals which he had to make; but the Pensionary refused to see 'em, and said, He would fignify it to the States, who deputed fome of their own Body to acquaint him, That they would enter into no Negotiation till the Arrival of his Grace the D. of Marlborough, and the other Ministers of the Alliance. Prince Eugene was expected there the 12th Instant from Bruffels. Tis faid, That belides Monlieur de Torcy, and Monlieur Monsieur Pajor, Director General of the Posts, there are two or three Persons at the Hague whose Names are not known; but'tis supposed, that the Duke d'Alba, Ambassador from the Duke of Anjou, was one of them. The States have sent Letters to all the Cities of the Provinces, desiring them to send their Deputies to receive the Propositions of Peace made by the Court of France.

By Isaac Bickerstaff Esq;

From Tuesday May 3. to Thursday May 5. 1709.

Mil's Coffee-house, May 3.

A Kinsman has sent me a Letter, wherein he informs me, He had lately resolved to write an Heroick Poem; but by Business has been interrupted, and has only made one Similitude, which he should be afflicted to have wholly lost, and begs of me to apply it to something, being very desirous to see it well placed in the World. I am so willing to help the Distressed, that I have taken it in: But though his greater Genius might very well distinguish his Verses from mine, I have marked where his begin. His Lines are a Description of the Sun in Eclipse, which I know nothing more like than a brave Man in Sorrow, who bears it as he should, without imploring the Pity of his Friends, or being dejected with the Contempt of his Enemies: As in the Case of Cato:

With Inborn Strength alone oppos'd Mankind, With Heav'n in View, to all below it blind: Regardless of his Friend's Applause, or Moan, Alone Triumphant, since he falls alone.

Thus when the Ruler of the Genial Day,
Behind some dark ning Planet forms his Way,

The Concave Drum, and Magick Brass pre(pare;

Implore him to fustain th'important Fight,
And save depending Worlds from endless (Night.

Fondly they hope their Labour may avail,
To ease his Conflict, and affift his Toil.

Whilst he in Beams of Native Splendor bright (Tho' dark his Orb appear to Humane Sight)
Shines to the Gods with more diffusive Light.

To distant Stars with equal Glory burns, Inflames their Lamps, and feeds their Gol(den Ums.

Sure to retain his known superior Tract,
And proves the more illustrious by defect.

This is a very lively Image; but I must take the Liberty to say, My Kinsiman drives the Sun a little like Phaeton: He has all the Warmth of Phaebus, but won't stay for his Direction of it. Avail and Toil, Defect and Trast, will never do for Rhimes. But however, he has the true Spirit in him; for which Reason I was willing to entertain any Thing he pleased to send me. The Subject which he writes upon, naturally raises great Resections in the Soul, and puts us in Mind of the mixed Condition which we Mortals are to support; which, as it varies to Good or Bad, adorns or defaces our Actions to the Beholders: All which Glory and Shame must end in what we so much repine at, Death, But Doctrines on this this Occasion, any other than that of living well, are the most infignificant and most empty of allthe Labours of Men. None but a Tragedian can die by Rule, and wait till he discovers a Plot, or fays a fine Thing upon his Exit. In real Life, this is a Chimæra; and by Noble Spirits, it will be done decently, without the Ostentation of it. We see Men of all Conditions and Characters go through it with equal Resolution: And if we consider the Speeches of the mighty Philosophers, Heroes, Law-givers, and Great Captains, they can produce no more in a discerning Spirit, than Rules to make a Man a Fop on his Death-bed. Commend me to that natural Greatness of Soul, expressed by an innocent, and consequently resolute Country Fellow, who said in the Pains of the Cholick, If I once get this Breath out of my Body, you shall hang. me before you put it in again. Honest Ned! and fo he died.

But it is to be supposed, from this Place you may expect, an Account of fuch a Thing as a New Play is not to be omitted. That acted this Night is the newest that ever was writ. The Author is my ingenious Friend Mr. Thomas D-y. This Drama is called, The Modern Prophets, and is a most unanswerable Satyr against the late Spirit of Enthusiasm. The Writer had by long Experience observed, That in Company, very grave Discourses have been followed by Bawdry; and therefore has turned the Humour that Way with great Success, and taken from his Audience all Manner of Superstirion, by the A? gitations of pretty Mrs. Bignel, whom he has with great Subtilty, made a Lay Sifter, as well as a Prophetess; by which Means, the carries on the Affairs of both Worlds with great Suc. cefs. My Friend deligns to go on with another Work against Winter, which he intends to call, F. 4

The Modern Poets; a People no less mistaken in their Opinions of being inspired, than the other. In order to this, he has by him feveral Songs, befides many Ambiguities, which cannot be mistaken for any Thing but what he means 'em. Mr. D .-- y generally writes State-Plays, and is wonderfully useful to the World in such Repre-fentations. This Method is the same that was fentations. used by Old Athenians, to laugh out of Countenance, or promote Opinions among the People. My Friend has therefore, against this Play is acted for his own Benefit, made Two Dances, which may be also of an universal Benefit. In the First, he has represented Absolute Power, in the Per-Son of a Tall Man with an Hat and Feather, who gives his first Minister, that stands just before him, an huge Kick; the Minister gives the Kick to the next before; and fo to the end of the Stage. In this Moral and Practical left, you are made to understand, That there is, in an Absolute Government, no Gratification, but giving the Kick you receive from one above you, to one below you. This is performed to a grave and melancholy Air; but on a sudden the Tune moves quicker, and the whole Company fall into a Circle, and take Hands; then, at a certain sharp Note, they move round, and kick as kick can. This latter Performance he makes to be the Representation of a Free State; where, if you all mind your Steps, you may go round and round very jollily, with a Motion pleafant to your felves and those you dance with: Nay, if you put your selves out, at the worst you only kick and are kicked, like Friends and Equals.

From my own Apartment, May 4.

Of all the Vanities under the Sun, I confess that of being proud of one's Birth is the greatest. At the same Time, since in this unreasonable Age, by the Force of prevailing Custom,

Things

Things in which Men have no Hand, are imputed to em; and that I am used by some People, as if Isaac Bickerstaff; tho' I write my self Esquire, was no Body: To set the World right in that Particular, I shall give you my Geneal logy, as a Kinsman of ours has sent it me from the Heralds-Office. It is certain, and observed by the wisest Writers, That there are Women who are not nicely Chast, and Men not severely Honest, in all Families; therefore let those who may be apt to raise Aspersions upon ours, please to give us as Impartial Account of their own, and we shall be satisfied. The Business of Heralds is a Matter of so great Nicety, that, to avoid Mistakes, I shall give you my Cousin's Letten Verbatim, without altering a Syllable.

Dear Coufin, CInce you have been pleased to make your self so I famous of late, by your ingenious Writings, and fome Time ago by your learned Predictions: Since.
Partridge of Immortal Memory is dead and gone, who Poetical as he was, could not understand his own Poetry; and Philomathical as he was, could not read his own Destiny : Since the Pope, the King of France, and great Part of his Court, are either literally or metaphorically defuntt : Since, I Say, these Things (not foretold by any one but your self) have come to pass after so surprising a Manner; 'tis with no Small Concern I fee the Original of the Staffian Race so little known in the World as it is at this Time; for which Realon, as you have employed your Studies in Astronomy, and the occult Sciences; So I, my Mother being a Welch Woman, dedicated mine to Genealogy, particularly that of our own Family, which, for its Antiquity and Number, may challenge any in Great Britain. The Staffs are originally of Staffordshire, which took its Name from them: The First that I find of the E 5 Staffs

Staffs was one Jacobstaff. a famous and renowned Astronomer, who by Dorothy his Wife, bad Iffue Seven Sons; viz. Bickerstaff, Longstaff, Wagstaff, Quarterstaff, Whitestaff, Falstaff, and Tip. Staff. He also had a Younger Brother who was twice married, and had frue Sons ; viz. Diffaff, Pikestaff, Mopstaff, Broomstaff, and Ragged-staff. As for the Branch from whence you pring, I Shall fay very little of it, only that 'tis the Chief of the Staffs, and called Bickerstaff, quali Biggerstaff is as much as to fay, the Great Staff, or Staff of Staffs; and that it has applied it self to Altronomy with great Success, after the Exemple of our aforelaid Forefather. The Descendants from Longstaff, the Icond Son, were a rakish disorderly Sort of People, and rambled from one Place to another, till in Harry II.'s Time whey fittled in Kent, and were called Long-Tails, from the Long-Tails which were fent 'em as a Punishment for the Murden of Thomas a Becket, as the Legends fay. They have been always feeked after by the Ladies, but whether it be to show their Aversion to Popery, or their Love to Miracles, Lean't Say. The Wagstaffs are a merry thoughtless Surs of People, who have always been opinionated of their own Wit; they have turned them-Selves mostly to Poetry. This is the most numerous Branch of our Family, and the pooreft. The Quarverstaffs are mift of 'em Prize fighters, or Deerrealers: There have been so many of 'em hanged lately, that there are very few of that Branch of our Family left. The Whitestaffs are all Courtiers, and have nad very confiderable Places. There have been some of them of that Strength and Dexserity, that five hundred of the ablest Men in the Kingdom have often tugged in vain to pull a Staff out of their Hands. The Falltaffs are frangely given to Whoring and Drinking : There are abundance of 'em in and about London. And one Thing is very remarkable of this Branch, and that is, There are just as many Women as Men in it. There was a wicked Stick of Wood of this Name in Harry IV !s Time, one Sir John Falltaff. As for Tipstaff, the youngest son, he was an honest fellow; but his Sons and his Sons Sons, have all of em been the veriest Rogues living: 'Tis this unlucky Branch has stock'd the Nation with that ! Swarm of Lawyers, Attorneys, Serjeants, and Bailiffs, with which the Nation is over-run. Tipstaff, being a Seventh Son, used to cure the King's-Evil; but his rascally D. scendants are so far from. having that bealing Quality, that by a Touch upon the Shoulder, they give a Man such an ill Habit of Body, that he can never come abroad afterwards. This is all I know of the Line of 12cobitaff : His younger Brother Mazeltaff, as I told you before, had Five Sons, and was married twice; his First Wife was a Staff, (for they did not stand upon false Heraldry in those Days) by whom he had one Son, who in Process of Time being a School-master, and well read in the Greek, called himself Distast or Twicestast. He was not very rich, so he put his Children out to Trades; and the Diftaffs have ever fince been employed in the Woollen and Linnen Manufactures, except my felf, who am a Genealogist. Pikestass, the eldest son by the Second Vencer, was a Man of Business, a downright plodding Fellow, and withal so plain, that he became a Proverb. Most of this Family are at pre-Jent in the Army. Raggedstaff was an unlucky Boy, and used to tear his Clothes a getting Birds Nefts, and was always playing with a tame Bear his Father kept. Mopstaff fell in Love with one of his Father's Maids, and used to help her cleans the House. Broomstaff was a Chimney-Sweeper. The Mopltaffs and Broomstaffs are naturally as civil People as ever went out of Doors; but alas! If they once get into ill Hands, they knock down all before em. As Politick News is not the principal Subject on which we treat, we are so happy as to have no Occasion for that Art of Cookery; which our Brother Newsmongers so much excel in; as appears by their excellent and inimitable Manner of dreffing up a fecond Time for your Tast the same Dish which they gave you the Day before, in case there come over no new Pickles from Holland. Therefore, when we have nothing to fay to you from Courts and Camps, we hope still to give you somewhat new and curious from our selves: The Women of our House, upon Occasion, being capable of carrying on the Bufinels, according to the laudable Custom of the Wives in Holland; but, without further Preface, take what we have not mentioned in our former Relations.

Letters from Hangver of the 30th of the last Month fay, That the Prince Royal of Pruffia arrived there on the 15th, and left that Court on the Second of this Month, in Pursuit of his Journey to Flanders, where he makes the enfuing Campaign. Those Advices add, That the young Prince Nasan, Hereditary Governour of Friestand, consummated on the 26th of the last Month his Marriage with the beauteous Princels of Heffe-Caffel, with a Pomp and Magnificence furtable to their Age and Quality.

Letters

Letters from Paris say, His most Christian Majesty retired to Marly on the first Instant, N. S. and our last Advices from Spain inform us. That the Prince of Assurias had made his publick Entry into Madrid in great Splendor. The Duke of Anjou has given Don Joseph Harsado de Amaraga the Government of Terra-Firma de Veragua; and the Presidency of Panama in America. They add, That the Forces commanded by the Marquis de Bay hath been reinforced by Six Battalions of Spanish and Walloon Guards. Letters from Lisbon advise, That the Army of the King of Portugul was at Elvas on the 22d of the last Month, and would decamp on the 24th, in order to march upon the Enemy, who lay at Badajos.

Yesterday, at Four in the Morning, his Grace the Duke of Marlborough set our for Margate, and embarked for Holland at Eight this Morn-

the British Nation might make us expect, that we should rife in our Publick Divertions, and Manner of enjoying Life, in Proportion to our Advancement in Glory and Power. Instead of that, take and furvey this Town, and you'll find, Rakes and Debauchees are your Men of Pleasure; Thoughtless Atheists, and Illiterate Drunkards, call themselves Free-Thinkers; and Gamesters, Banterers, Biters, Swearers, and Twenty new-born Infects more, are, in their feveral Species, the Modern Men of Wit. Hence it is, that a Man who has been out of Town but one-half Year, has lost the Language, and must have some Friend to stand by him, and keep him in Countenance for talking common Sense. To Day I saw a short Interlude at White's of this Nature, which I took Notes of, and put together as well as I could in a Publick Place. The Persons of the Drama are, Pip, the last Gentleman that has been made so ar Cards; Trimmer, a Person half undone at 'em, and is now between a Chear and a Gentleman; Acom, an honest English Man, of good plain Sense and Meaning; and Mr. Friendly, a reasonable Man of the Town.

White's Chocolate-house, May 5. Enter Pip, Trim. and Acorn.

Ac. What's the Marter, Gentlemen? What! Take no Notice of an old Friend?

Pip. Pox on it! Don't talk to me, I am Vowel'd by the Count, and curfedly out of Humour.

Ac. Vowel'd! Prithee; Trimmer, What does he mean by that?

Pip. Why! Don't you know what Biting is?
Nay you are in the Right on't. However, one would learn it only to defend ones felf against Men of Wit, as one would know the Tricks of Play, to be secure against the Cheats. But don't you hear, Acorn. that Report, That some Potentates of the Alliance have taken Care of themselves, exclusive of us?

Ac. Bite! How?

Trim. Nay, he has Bit you fairly enough; that's certain.

At. Pox! I don't feel it — How? Where? Exit Pip and Trimmer laughing.

Ac. Ho! Mr. Friendly, your most humble Servant; you heard what passed between those fine Gentlemen and me. Pip complained to me, That he has been Vowel'd; and they tell me, I am Bit.

Briend. You are to understand, Sir, That Simplicity of Behaviour, which is the Perfection of good Breeding and good Sense, is utterly lost in the World; and in the Room of it, there are flarted a Thousand little Inventions, which Men, barren of better Things, take up in the Place of in Thus for every Character in Converfation that used to please, there is an Impo-flor put upon you. Him whom we allow'd formerly for a certain pleasant Subrilry, and natural Way of giving you an unexpected Hit, called a Droll, is now mimick'd by a Biter, who is adull Fellow, that tells you a Lye with a grave Face, and laughs at you for knowing him no. better than to believe him. Instead of that Sort of Companion, who could rally you, and keep his Countenance, 'till he made you fall intointo some little Inconsistency of Behaviour, at which you your self could laugh with him, you have the Sneerer, who will keep you Company from Morning to Night, to gather your Follies of the Day, (which perhaps you commit out of Considence in him) and expose you in the Evening to all the Scorners in Town. For your Man of Sense and free Spirit, whose Set of Thoughts were built upon Learning, Reason, and Experience, you have now an impudent Creature made up of Vice only, who supports his Ignorance by his Courage, and Want of Learning by Contempt of it.

Ac. Dear Sir, hold: What you have told me already of this Change in Conversation, is too miserable to be heard with any Delight; but, methinks, as these new Creatures appear in the World, it might give an excellent Field to Writers for the Stage, to divert us with the Repre-fentarion of them there.

Friend. No, No: As you say, there might be some Hopes of Redress of these Grievances, if there were proper Care taken of the Theatre; but the History of that is yet more lamentable, than that of the Decay of Conversation I gave you.

Ac. Pray, Sir, a little: I han't been in Town these Six Years, till within this Fortnight.

Friend. It is now some Years, since several Revolutions in the Gay World had made the Empire of the Stage subject to very fatal Convultions, which were too dangerous to be cured by the Skill of little King Oberon, who then sate in the Throne of it. The Laziness of this Prince threw him upon the Choice of a Person who was fit to spend his Life in Contentions, an able and profound Attorney, to whom he mortgaged his whole Empire. This Divise is the most skilful of all Politicians. He has a persect.

But he having no Understanding in this polite Way, brought in upons, to get in his Money, Ladder-dancers, Ropedancers, Jugglers, and Montebanks, to strut in the Place of Shakespear's Heroes, and Johnson's Humourists. When the Seat of Wit was thus mortgag'd, without Equity of Redemption, an Architect arose, who has built the Muse a new Palace, but secured her no Retinue; so that instead of Action there, we have been put off by Song and Dance. This latter Help of Sound has also began to fail for want of Voices; therefore the Palace has since been put into the Hands of a Surgeon, who cuts any Foreign Fellow into an Eunuch, and passes him upon us for a Singer of Italy.

Ac. I'll go out of Town to Morrow.

Trim. Things are come to this Pass; and yet the World will not understand, that the Theatre has much the same Effect on the Manners of the Age, as the Bank on the Credit of the Nation. Wit and Spirit, Humour and good Sense, can never be revived, but under the Government of those who are Judges of such Talents, who know, that whatever is put up in their Stead, is but a short and trising Expedient, to support the Appearance of ten for a Season. It is possible, a Peace will give Leisure to put these Matters under new Regulations; but at present all the Assistance we can see towards our Recovery, is as far from giving us Help, as a Poultice is from performing what can be done only by the Grand Elixir.

made proper to the Place in which they were written. The following Poem comes from Gapenhagen, and is as fine a Winter-piece, as we have ever had from any of the Schools of the most learned Painters. Such Images as these give us a new Pleasure in our Sight, and fix upon our Minds Traces of Reflection, which accompany us whenever the like Objects occur. In Mort, excellent Poetry and Description dwell upon us so agreeably, that all the Readers of em are made to think, if not write, like Men of Wit. But it would be Injury to detain you longer from this excellent Performance, which is addressed to the Earl of Dorfet by Mr. Philips; the Author of several choice Poems in Mr. Tonon's new Miscellany.

Copenhagen, March 9. 1709.
From Frozen Climes, and endless Tracks of Snow,
From Streams that Northern Winds ferbid to flow;
What Present shall the Muse to Dorset bring;
Or how, so near the Pole, attempt to sing?
The hoary Winter here conceals from Sight,
All pleasing Objects that to Verse invite.
The Hills and Dales, and the delightful Woods,
The Flowry Plains, and Silver Streaming Floods,
By Snow disguisd, in bright Consuson lye,
And with one dazling Waste fatigue the Eye.

No gentle breathing Breeze prepares the Spring;
No Birds within the Defart Region sing.
The Ships unmou'd the boist rous Winds desie, While rattling Chariots o'er the Ocean sty.
The wast Leviathan wants Room to play,
And spout his Waters in the Face of Day.
The starwing Wolves along the main Sea prowl,
And to the Moon in sey Valleys howl.
For many a shining League the level Main Here spreads it self into a Ghassy Plain:

There

There folid Billows of enormous Size, Alpes of green Ice, in wild Diforder rife.

And yet but lately have I feen e'en here, The Winter in a lovely Dress appear. E'er yet the Clouds let fall the treasur'd Snow, Or Winds begun thro hazy Skies to blow. At Ev'ning a keen Eastern Breeze arose; And the descending Rain unsullied froze. Soon as the filent Shades of Night withdrew, The ruddy Morn disclos'd at once to View The Face of Nature in a rich Disguise, And brighten'd ev'ry Object to my Eyes ! For ev'ry Shrub, and ev'ry Blade of Grass, And ev'ry pointed Thorn, feem'd wrought in Glass. In Pearls and Rubies rich the Hawthorns show, While through the Ice the Crimfon Berries glow. The thick-firung Reeds the watry Marshes yield, Seem polish'd Lances in a hostile Field. The Stag in limpid Currents with Surprize, Sees Chrystal Branches on his Forehead rife. The spreading Oak, the Beech, and tow ring Pine, Glaz'd over, in the freezing Æsher shine. The frighted Birds the rattling Branches shun, That wave and glitter in the diffant Sun.

When if a sudden Gust of Wind arise;
The bristle Forrest into Atoms slies:
The crackling Wood beneath the Tempest bends,
And in a spangled Show'r the Prospect ends.
Or, if a Southern Gale the Region warm,
And by Degrees unbind the Wintry Charm,
The Traveller a miry Country sees,
And Journeys sad beneath the dropping Trees.

Like Jome deluded Peasant, Merlin leads Thro' fragrant Bow'rs and thro' delicious Meads; While here inchanted Gardens to him rise, And airy Fabricks there attract his Eyes,

His wand'ring Feet the Magick Paths pursue; And while he thinks the fair Illusion true, The trackless Scenes disperse in stud Air, And Woods, and Wilds, and Thorny Ways appear: A tedious Road the meary Wretch returns, And, as He goes, the transient Vision mouns.

From my own Apartment, May 6.

There has a Mail this Day arrived from Hilland; but the Matter of the Advices importing rather what gives us great Expectations, than any politive Alfurances, I shall, for this Time, decline giving you what I know, and apply the following Veries of Mr. Dryden, in the Second Part of Almanzor, to the present Circumstances of Things, without discovering what my Knowledge in Astronomy suggests to me.

When Empire in its Childhood first appears,
A watchful Fate o'erses its tender Tears;
Till grown more strong, it thrusts and stretches out,
And elbows all the Kingdoms round about.
The Place thus made for its first breathing free,
It moves again for Ease and Luxury;
Till swelling by Degrees it has possess
The greater Space, and now crowds up the rest.
When from behind there starts some petry State,
And pushes on its now unweildy Fate.
Then down the Precipice of Time it goes.
And sinks in Minutes, which in Ages rose.

From Saturd. May 7. to Tuefd. May 10, 1709.

From my own Apartment, May 8. Uch Hurry and Bufiness had to Day perplex'd me into a Mood too thoughtful for going into Company; for which Reason, in-flead of the Tavern, I went into Lincoln-Inn-Walks; and having taken a Round or Two, I fate down, according to the allowed Familiarity of these Places, on a Beach, at the other End of which face a venerable Gentleman, who speaking with a very affable Air, Mr. Bickerstaff, faid he, I take it for a very great Piece of good Fortune, that you have found me out. Sir. faid I, I had never, that I know of, the Honour of feeing you before. That, replied he, so what I have often lamented; but I affure, I have for many Tears done you good Offices, without being observed by you; or elfe, when you had any little Glimpfe of my being concerned in an Affair, you have fled from me, and shumed me tike an Enebut however, the Part I am to act in the World is such, that I am to go on in doing Good, though I meet with never so many Repulses, even from those I oblige. This, thought I, shows a great good Nature, but little Judgment in the Persons upon whom he confers his Favours. He immediately took Notice to me, That he observed by my Countenance I thought him indifferent in his Beneficence, and proceeded to tell me his Quality in the following Manner: I know thee, Isac, to be fo well vers d in the Occult Sciences, that I need not much Preface, or make long Preparations to gain your Faith that there are Airy Beings, who are employed in the Care and Actendance dance of Men, as Niv fes are to Infants, till the come to an Age in which they can act of themselves. These Beings are usually called amongst Men, Guar. dian-Angels; and, Mr. Bickerstaff, I am 10 ac. quaint you, that I am to be yours for some Time to come; it being our Orders to vary our Stations. and sometimes to have one Patient under our Pn. tection, and fometimes another, with a Power affirming what Shape we please, to enfnare our Wards into their own Good. I have of late ben sipon Juch hard Duty, and know you have fo mich Work for me, that I think fit to appear to you Fan to Face, to desire you would give me as little Oc casion for Vigilance as you can. Sir, said I, it will be a great Instruction to me in my Behaviur, if you please to give me some Account of your late Employments, and what Hardships or Satisfaction you have had in 'em, that I may govern my felf accordingly. He answer'd: To give you an Erample of the Drudgery we go through, I will entertain you only with my Three last Stations: I was on the First of April last, put to mortife a great Beauty, with whom I was a Week; from her I went to a common Swearer, and have been last with a Gamester. When I first came to my Lady, I found my great Work was to guard well her Eyes and Ears, but her Flattezers were fo numerous, and the House, after the modern Way, fo full of Looking-glasses, that I seldom had her safe but in her Sleep. Whenever we went abroad, we were furrounded by an Army of Enemies: When a well-made Man appeared, he was fure to have a Side-glance of Observation: If a disagreeable Fellow, he had a full Face, out of meer Inclination to Conquests. But at the close of the Evening, on the Sixth of the last Month, my Ward was situng on a Couch, reading Ovid's Epiftles; and as the came to this Line of Helen to Paris, enter'd Philander, who is the most skilful of ved at the Perfection of that Art which gains em, which is, To talk like a very miserable Man, but look like a very happy One. I saw Dictinna blush at his Entrance, which gave me the Alarm; but the immediately faid fomething fo agreeable on her being at Study, and the Nowelty of finding a Lady employed in fo grave a Manner, that he on a sudden became very fami-liarly a Man of no Consequence; and in an Instant laid all her Suspicions of his Skill asleep, as he almost had done mine, till I observed him very dangerously turn his Discourse upon the Elegance of her Drefs, and her Judgment in the Choice of that very pretry Mourning. Having had Women before under my Care, I trembled at the Apprehension of a Man of Sense, who could talk upon Trifles, and resolved to stick to my Post with all the Circumspection imaginable. In short, I prepossessed her against all he could fay to the Advantage of her Dress and Person; but he turned again the Discourse, where I found I had no Power over her, on the abusing her Friends and Acquaintance. He allowed in deed, That Flora had a little Beauty, and a great deal of Wit; but then she was so ungainly in her Behaviour, and fuch a laughing Hoyden-Paftorella had with him the Allowance of being Blameless: But what was that towards being Praise-worthy? To be only Innocent, is not to be Virtuous. He afterwards spoke so much against Mrs. Dipple's Forehead, Mrs. Prim's Mouth, Mrs. Dentifrice's Teeth, and Mrs. Fidget's Cheeks, that the grew downright in Love with him: For it is always to be understood, That a Lady takes all you detract from the rest of her Sex to be a Gift to her. In a Word, Things went fo far, that I was difmified, and the will remember that Evening Nine Months, from the Sixth of April, by a very remarkable Token. The next, as I faid, I went to was a common Swearer: Never was Creature to puzzled as my felf when I came first to view his Brain; half of it was worn out, and filled up with meer Expletives, that had nothing to do with any other Parts of the Texture; therefore, when he called for his Clothes in a Morning, he would cry John? - John does not answer. What a Plague! No Body there? What the Devil, and rot me! John, for a lazy Dog as you are. I knew no Way to cure him, but by writing down all he faid one. Morning as he was dreffing, and laying it before him on the Toilet when he came to pick his Teeth. The last Recital I gave him of what he faid for half an Hour before, was, What, a Pox rot me! Where is the Walbball? Call the Chairmen: Damn'em, I warrant the are at the Ale-house already! Zounds, and Cmfound 'em. When he came to the Glass, he takes up my Note - Ha! This Fellow is worfe than me: What, Does be swear with Pen and Ink? But reading on, he found em to be his own Words. The Stratagem had fo good an Effect upon him, that he grew immediately a new Man, and is learning to speak without an Oath, which makes him extremely short in his Phrases; for, as I observed before, a Common Swearer has a Brain without any Idea on the Swearing Side; therefore my Ward has yet mighty little to fay, and is forced to substitute some other Vehicle of Nonfence to Supply the Defect of his usual Expletives. When I left him, he madeuse of, Odsbedikins! Ob me! and Never fir alive, and to forth; which gave me Hopes of his Recovery. So I went to the next I told you of,

I was with him no longer than one Day, which was Yesterday. In the Morning at Twelve, we were worth Four Thousand Pounds: at Three we were arrived at Six Thousand; half an Hour after, we were reduced to One Thousands at Four of the Clock we were down to Two Mundred at Five, to Fifty; at Six, to Five; at Seven, to One Guil nea; the next Bet, to Nothing : This Morning: he borrowed Half a Crown of the Maid who cleans his Shooes : and is now gaming in Lincolns-Inn-Fields among the Boys for Farthings and Oranges, till he has made up Three Pieces and then he returns to White's into the beff Company in Town. We hear from the Hague of the 14th Instant, N.S.
That Monsieur de Torcy hath had frequent Conferences with the Grand Pensioner, and the other Ministers who were heretofore commissioned to treat with Monsieur Rouille. The Preliminaries of a Peace are almost settled, and the Proceedings wait only for the Arrival of the Duke of Marlborough; after whose Approbation of the Articles proposed, it is not doubted but the Methods of the Treaty will be publickly known. In the mean Time, the States have declared an Abhorrence of making any Step in this great Affair, but in Concert with the Court of Great Britain, and other Princes of the Alliance. The Posture of Affairs in France does necessarily oblige that Nation to be very much in Earnest in their Offers; and Monsieur de Torcy hath professed to the Grand Pensioner That he will avoid all Occasions of giving him the least scalouse of his using any Address in private Conversations for accomplishing the Ends of his Embaffy. It is faid, That as foon as the Preliminaries are adjusted, that Minister is to return to the French Court. The States of Holland have resolved to make it an Instruction to all their Men of War and Privateers, to bring into their Ports whatever Neutral Ships they shall meet with laden with Corn, and bound for France; and to avoid all Cause of Complaint from the Potentates to whom these Ships shall belong, their full Demand for their Freight shall be paid them there. The French Protestants reliding in that Country have applied themselves to their respective Magistrates, deliring that there may be an Article in the Treaty of Peace, which may give Liberty of Conscience to the Protestants in France, Monfieur Bosnage, Minister of the Walloon Church at Ruterdam, has been at the Hague, and hath had some Conferences with the Deputies of the States on that Subject. It is reported there, That all the French Refugies in those Dominions are to be naturalized, that they may enjoy the fame good Effects of the Treaty with the Hollanders themselves, in respect to France.

great Hopes of a fudden Peace, from Monlieur Treey's being employed in the Negatistion, & being a Minister of too great Weight in that Court, to be sent on any Employment in Which his Master would not act in a Manner whereigh he might justly promise himself Success. The French Advices add, That there is an Insurrection in Posters; 3000 Men having taken up Arms, and beaten the Troops which were appointed to disperse them: Three of the Mutineers being raken, were immediately executed; and as many of the King's Parry were used after the same Manner.

Our late Act of Naturalization hath had so great an Effect in Foreign Parts, that some Princes have prohibited the Brench Refugees in their Dominions to sell or transfer their Estates to any other of their Subjects; and at the same Time have granted them greater Immunities than they hitherto enjoyed. It has been also thought necessary to restrain their own Subjects from leaving their Native Country, on Pain of Death.

From Tuesday May 10. to Thursd. May 12. 1709.

From my own Apartment, May 10. Vot III A D it not been that my Familiar had appeared to me, as I told you in my laft, in Perion, I had certainly been unable to have found even Words, without Meaning, to keep up my Intelligence with the Town: But he has checked me feverely for my Despondence, and ordered me to go on in my Design of observing apon Things, and forbearing Persons; for, faid he, the Age you live in is such, that a good Picture of any Vice or Virtue will infallibly be mifrepresented; and though none will take the kind Descriptions you make so much to them-felves, as to wish well to the Author, yet all will refent the ill Characters you produce, out of Fear of their own Turn in the Licence you must be obliged to take, if you point at particular Persons. I took his Admonition kindly, and immediately promifed him to beg Pardon of the Author of the Advice to the Poets, for my Raillery upon his Work; though I aimed at no more in that Examination, but to convince him, and all Men of Genius, of the Folly of laying them selves out on such Plans as are below their Characters. I hope too it was done without Ill-Breeding, and nothing spoken below what a Civilian (as it is allowed I am) may utter to a Physician. After this Preface, all the World may be fafe from my Writings; for if I can find nothing to commend, I am filent, and will forbear the Subject : For though I am a Reformer. I fcorn to be an Inquilitor.

It would become all Men as well as me, to lay before 'em the noble Character of Verus the Magistrate, who always sate in Triumph over, and Contempt of Vice; He never searched after it, or spared it when it came before him: At the fame Time, He could fee thro' the Hypocrify and Disguise of those, who have no Pretence to Virtue themselves, but by their Severity to the Vicious. This fame Verus was, in Times long past, Chief Justice (as we call it amongst us) in Falicia. He was a Man of profound Knowledge of the Laws of his Country, and as just an Obferver of 'em in his own Person. He confidered Justice as a Cardinal Virtue, not as a Trade for Maintenance. Wherever he was Judge, he neever forgot that he was also Council. The Criminal before him was always fure he frood be-Fore his Country, and, in a Sort, a Parent of it.

The Prisoner knew, that the his Spirit was broken with Guilt, and incapable of Language to defend it felf, all would be gathered from him which could conduce to his Safety; and that his Indge would wrest no Law to destroy him. nor conceal any that could fave him. In his Time, there were a Nest of Pretenders to Justice, who happen'd to be employed to put Things in a Method for being examined before him at his usual Selfrons: Thefe Animals were to Verus, as Mone keys are to Men; so like, that you can hardly disown them; but so base, that you are ashamed of their Fraternity. It grew a Phrase, Who would do Justice on the Justices ? That certainly would Verus. I have feen an old Trial where he fate Judge on Two of 'em; one was called Tricks Track, the other Tearshift : one was a dearned Judge of Sharpers, the other the quickest of all Men at finding out a Wench. Trick-Track never fpared a Pick-pocket, but was a Companion to Chears: Tearshift would make Compliments to Wenches of Quality, but certainly commit poor ones. If a poor Rogue wanted a Lodging, Tricks Track fent him to Gaol for a Thief: If a poor Whore went only with one thin Petricoat, Tearshift would imprison her for being loose in her Drefs. These Patriots infested the Days of Velrus, while they alternately committed and releafed each others Prisoners. But Verus regarded them as Criminals, and always look'd upon Men as they stood in the Eye of Justice, without respecting whether they sate on the Bench, or flood at the Bar, of Will's Coffee house, May 11. 200 146

Yesterday we were entertained with the Trained of The Earl of Essex, in which there is not one good Line, and yet a Play which was never feen without drawing Tears from some Part of the Audience: A remarkable Instance, that he

Soul is not to be moved by Words, but Things ! for the Incidents in this Drama are laid together so happily, that the Speciator makes the Play for himself, by the Force which the Circumstance has upon his Imagination. Thus, in spight of the most dry Discourses, and Expressions almost ridiculous with respect to Propriety, it is imposfible for one unprejudic'd to fee it untouch'd with Pity. I must confess this Effect is not wrought on fuch as examine why they are pleased; but it never fails to appear on those who are not too learned in Nature, to be moved by her first Suggestions. It is certain, the Perfon and Behaviour of Mr. Wilks has no small Share in conducing to the Popularity of the Play; and when an handsome Fellow is going to a more course Exit than Beheading, his Shape and Countenance makes every tender one reprieve him with all her Heart, without waiting till the hears his dying Words.

This Evening The Alcymist was played. This Comedy is an Example of Ben's extensive Genius and Penetration into the Passions and Follies of Mankind. The Scene in the Fourth Act, where all the cheated People oppose the Man that would open their Eyes, has something in it so inimitably excellent, that it is certainly as great a Master-piece as has ever appeared by any Hand. The Author's great Address in showing Coveronsness the Monve of the Actions of the Puritan, the Epicure, the Gamester, and the Trader; that all their Endeavours, how differently soever they seem to tend, center only in that one Point of Gain, shows he had to a great Perfection that Discernment of Spirit, which conftitutes a Genius for Comedy. A 17 10 102

White's Checolate-boule, May 11.

It is not to be imagined how far the Violence of our Doures will carry us towards our own Deceit

Deceit in the Pursuit of what we wish for. A Gentleman here this Evening was giving me an Account of a dumb Fortune-Teller, who outdoes Mr. Partridge, my felf, or the Unborn-Doctor, for Predictions. All his Vintants come to him full of Expectations, and pay his own Rate for the Interpretations they put upon his Shrugs and Nods. There is a fine rich City-Widow stole thirher the other Day, (though it is not Six Weeks fince her Husband's Departure from her Company to rest) and, with her tru-fly Maid, demanded of him, Whether she should marry again, by holding up Two Fingers, like Horns on her Forehead. The Wizard held up both her Hands forked. The Relict defired to know, Whether he meant by his holding up both Hands, to represent that the had one Husband before, and that the thould have another? Or that he intimated, the should have Two more? The Cunning Man look'd a little four a upon which Betty jogged her Mistress, who gave t'other Guinea; and he made her understand, She should positively have Two more; but sha ked his Head, and hinted, that they should not live long with her. The Widow sighed, and gave him t'other half Guinea. After this Prepoffestion, all that she had next to do, was to make Sallies to our End of the Town, and find out . who it is her Fate to have. There are Two who frequent this Place, whom the takes for Men of Vogue, and of whom her Imagination has given her the Choice. They are both the Appearances of fine Gentlemen, to fuch as do not know when they fee Persons of that Turn; and indeed, they are industrious enough to come at that Chara cter, to deferve the Reputation of being fuchs But this Town will not allow us to be the Thing we feem to aim at, and are too discerning to be fobb'd off with Presences. One of these presey

Fellows fails by his laborious Exactness; the other, by his as much studied Negligence. Frank Careless, assoon as his Valet has helped on and adjusted his Clothes, goes to his Glass, sets his Wig awry, tumbles his Cravat; and in short, undresses himself to go into Company. Will, Nice is so little satisfied with his Dress, that all the Time he is at a Visit, he is still mending it, and is for that Reason the more insufferable; for he who studies Carelesness, has, at least, his Work the fooner done of the Two. The Widow is diffracted whom to take for her First Man; for Nice is every Way fo careful, that the fears his Length of Days; and Frank is fo loofe, that she has Apprehentions for her own Health with him. I am puzzled how to give a just Idea of them; but in a Word, Careles is a Cox-comb, and Nice a Fop: Both, you'll say, very hopeful Candidates for a gay Woman just set at Liberty. But there is a Whisper, her Maid will give her, to Tom Terrour the Gamester. This Fel, low has undone fo many Women, that he'll certainly fucceed if he is introduced; for nothing so much prevails with the vain Part of that Sex; as the Glory of deceiving them who have deceived others.

Desunt Multa,

St. James's Coffee-house, May 11.

Letters from Berlin, bearing Date May 11. N. S. inform us, That the Birth-day of her Prussian Majesty has been celebrated there with all possible Magnificence; and the King made her, on that Occasion, a Present of Jewels to the Value of Thirty Thousand Crowns. The Marquis de Quesne, who has distinguished himself by his great Zeal for the Protestant Interest, was, at the Time of the Dispatch of these Letters, at that Court, suliciting the King to take Care.

that an Article in Behalf of the Refugees, admitting their Return to France, should be interted in the Treaty of Peace. They write from Hanover of the 14th, That his Electoral Highness had received an Express from Count Merci, representing how necessary it was to the Common Cause, that he would please to hasten to the Rhine; for that nothing but his Presence could quicken the Measures rowards bringing the Imperial Army into the Field. There are very many Speculations upon the intended Interview of the King of Denmark and King Augustus. The latter has made such Preparations for the Reception of the other, that it is said, his Danish Majesty will be entertained in Saxony with much more Elegance than he met with in

Letters from the Hague of the 18th Instant. N.S. fay, That his Grace the Duke of Marlborough landed the Night before at the Brill, after having been kept out at Sea by adverse Winds two Days longer than is usual in that Passage. His Excellency the Lord Townshend, her Majesty's Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the State General, was driven into the Veer in Zealand on Thursday last, from whence he came to the Hague within few Hours after the Arrival of his Grace. The Duke, foon after his coming to the Hague, had a Vilit from the Penfioner of Holland. All Things relating to the Peace were in Suspence rill this Interview; nor is it yet known what Resolutions will be taken on that Subject; for the Troops of the Allies have fresh Orders dispatched to them to move from their respective Quarters, and march with all Expedition to the Frontiers, where the Enemy are making their utmost Efforts for the Defence of their Country. These Advices further inform us, That the Marquis de Torcy had recoived -4421284 ceivid an Answer from the Court of France to his Letters which he had sent thither by an Express on the Friday before.

Mr. Bickerstaff has received Letters from Mr. Coltstaff, Mr. Whipstaff, and Mrs. Redecca Wegstaff; all which relate chiefly to their being left out in the Genealogy of the Family lately published; but my Cousin being a Clerk in the Herald's Office who writ that Draught, and being at prefent under the Displeasure of the Chapter; it is feared, if that Matter should be touched upon at thus Time, the young Gentleman would lose his Place for Treason against the Kings at Arms.

The TATLER. [Nº 15

From Thursd. May 12. to Saturd. May 14. 1709.

I Have taken a Refolution hereafter, on any Want of Intelligence, to carry my Familiar abroad with me, who has promifed to give me very proper and just Notices of Persons and Things, to make up the History of the passing Day. He is wonderfully skilful in the Knowledge of Men and Manners, which has made me more than ordinary curious to know how he came to that Perfection, and I communicated to him that Doubt. Mr. Pacolet, faid I, I am mightily surprized to see you so good a Judge of our Nature and Circumstances, inne you are a meer Spirit, and have no Knowledge of the Bodily Part of us. He answered, smiling, You are mistaken, I have been one of you, and lived a Month amongst you, which gives me an exact Sense of your Condition. You are to know, That all who enter into Humane Life, have a certain Date or Scamen given to their Being, which which they only who die of Age may be faid to have arrived at; but it is ordered sometimes by Fate, that such as die Infants, are after Death to attend Mankind to the End of that Stamen of Being in themselves, which was broke off by Sickness or any other Disaster. These are proper Guardians to Men, as being fensible of the Infirmity of their State. You are Philosopher enough to know, that the Difference of Men's Understanding proceeds only from the various Dispositions of their Organs; so that he who dies at a Month old, is in the next Life as knowing (tho' more innocent) as they who live to Fifty; and after Death, they have as perfect a Memory and Judgment of all that pass'd in their Life-time, as I have of all the Revolutions in that uneasie, turbulent Condition of yours & and, you'd fay, I had enough of it in a Month were I to tell you all my Misfortunes. A Life of a Month, can't have, one would think, much-Variety; but pray, faid I, let us have your Story.

Then he proceeds in the following manner: It was one of the most wealthy Families in Great Britaininto which I was born, and it wasa very great Happiness to me that it so happen'd, otherwise I had still, in all Probability, been living: But I shall recount to you all the Occurrences of my short and miserable Existence. just as, by examining into the Traces made in my Brain, they appeared to me at that Time. The First Thing that ever struck my Senses, was a Noise over my Head of one shricking; after which, methought I took a full Jump, and found my felt in the Hands of a Sorceress, who seem'd as if the had been long waking, and employed in some Incantation: I was throughly frightned, and cried out, but the immediately feem'd to go on in fome Magical Operation, and anointed anointed me from Head to Foot. What they meant, I could not imagine; for there gather'd a great Crowd about me, crying, An Heir, an "Hur; upon which I grew a little still, and be-Hev'd this was a Ceremony to be us'd only to great Persons, and such as made them, what they call'd. Heirs. I lay very quier; but the Witch, for no Mauner of Reason or Provocation in the World, takes me and binds my Head as hard as possibly she could, then ties up both my. Legs, and makes me swallow down an horrid Mixture; I thought it an harsh Entrance into Life to begin with taking Phyfick; but I was forc'd to it, or elfe must have taken down a great Instrument in which she gave it me. When I was thus dress'd, I was carried to a Bed-side, where a fine young Lady (my Mother I wor) had like to have hugg'd me to Death. From her, they fac'd me about, and there was a Thing with quite another Look from the rest of the Room, to whom they talk'd about my Nofe. He feem'd wonderfully pleas'd to fee me; but I knew fince, my Nose belong'd to another Family. That into which I was born, is one of the most numerous amongst you; therefore Crowds of Relations came every Day to congratulate my Arrival; among others, my Coufin Betty, the greatest Rompin Nature: She whisks me fuch a Height over her Head, that I cry'd out for fear of falling. She pinch'd me, and called me fquealing Chit, and threw me into a Girls Arms that was taken in to tend me. The Girl was very proud of the Womanly Employment of a Nurse, and took upon her to strip. and dress me a-new, because I made a Noise, to see what ailed me: She did so, and stuck a Pin in every Joint about me. I still cried: Upon which, the lays me on my Face in her Lap; and to quiet me, fell a nailing in all the Pins, by clapping me on the Back, and skreaming a Lullaby. But my Pain made me exalt my Voice above hers, which brought up . the Nurse, the Witch I fiest saw, and my. Grandmother. The Girl is turn'd down Stairs, and I stripp'd again, as well to find what ail'd me, as to fatisfy my Granam's further Curiofity. This good old Woman's Visit was the Caufe of all my Troubles. You are to understand. That I was hitherto bred by Hand, and any Body that stood next, gave me Pap, if I did but open my Lips; infomuch, that I was grown fo cunning, as to pretend my felf afleep when I was not, to prevent my being cramm'd. But my Grandmother began a loud Lecture upon the Idleness of the Wives of this Age, who, for Fear. of their Shape, forbear fuckling their own Offfpring: And Ten Nurses were immediately fent for; one was whisper'd to have a wanton Eye, and would foon spoil her Milk; another was in a Confumption; the Third had an ill Voice, and would frighten me, inflead of lulling me to fleep. Such Exceptions were made against all but one Country Milch-Wench, to whom I was committed, and put to the Breast. This careless Jade was eternally romping with the Footmen, and downright starved me; insomuch that I daily pined away, and should never have been reliev'd, had it not been, that on the Thirtieth Day of my Life, a Fellow of the Royal Society, who had writ upon Cold Baths, came to vifit me, and folemnly protested, I was utterly lost for want of that Method: Upon which he fous'd me Head and Ears into a Pail of Water, where I had the good Fortune to be drowned, and so escap'd being lash'd into a Linguist till Sixteen, running after Wenches till Twenty-five, and being married to an ill-natur'd Wife till Sixty: Which had certainly been my Fare, had not the Inchantment ment between Body and Soul been broke by this Philosopher. Thus, till the Age I should have otherwise liv'd, I am oblig'd to watch the Steps of Men; and if you please, shall accompany you in your present Walks, and get you Intelligence from the Aerial Lacquey, who is in Waiting, what are the Thoughts and Purposes of any whom you enquire for. I accepted his kind Offer, and immediately took him with me in an Hack to White's.

White's Chocolate-bouse, May 13.

We got in hither, and my Companion threw a Powder round us, that made me as invisible as himself; so that we could see and hear all others, our selves unseen and unheard.

The First Thing we took Notice of, was a Nobleman of a goodly and frank Aspect, with his generous Birth and Temper visible in it. playing at Cards with a Creature of a black and horrid Countenance, wherein were plainly delineated the Arts of his Mind, Coulenage and Falshood. They were marking their Game with Counters, on which we could fee Inscriptions, imperceptible to any but us. My Lord had fcor'd with Pieces of Ivory, on which were writ, Good Fame, Glory, Riches, Honour, and Poferity. The Spectre over-against him had on his Counters the Inscriptions of, Dishonour, Impudence, Poverty, Ignorance, and Want of Shame. Bless me! said I sure my Lord does not fee what he plays for! As well as I do, fays Pacoler. He despises that Fellow he plays with, and scorns himself for making him his Companion. At the very Instant he was speaking, I saw the Fellow who play'd with my Lord, hide Two Cards in the Roll of his Stocking: Pacoles immediately stole 'em from thence; upon which the Nobles man foon after won the Game. The little Triumph he appeared in, when he got such a tri-fling Stock of ready Money, tho he had ventured fo great Sums with Indifference, increas'd my Admiration. But Pacolet began to talk to me. Mr. Haac, This to you looks wonderful, but not at all to us higher Beings: That Noble has as many good Qualities as any Man of his Order, and feems to have no Faults but what. as I may fay, are Excrescencies from Virtues. He is Generous to a Prodigality, more Affable than is confiftent with his Quality, and Couragious to a Rashness. Yer, after all this, the Source of his whole Conduct is (tho' he would hate himself if he knew it) meer Avarice. The Ready Cash laid before the Gamester's Counters makes him venture, as you see, and lay Distinction against Infamy, Abundance against Want; in a Word, all that's defirable against all that's to be avoided. However, faid I, be fure you difappoint the Sharpers to Night, and steal from em all the Cards they hide. Pacoles obey'd me, and my Lord went Home with their whole Bank in his Pocket.

Will's Coffee-bouse, May 13. To Night was acted a Second Time a Comedy, call'd, The Bufie Body: This Play is written by a Lady. In old Times, we us'd to fit uport a Play here after it was acted; but now the Entertainment is turn'd another Way; not but there are considerable Men appear in all Ages, who, for some eminent Quality or Invention, deserve the Efteem and Thanks of the Publick. Such a Benefactor is a Gentleman of this House, who is observed by the Surgeons with much Envy; for he has invented an Engine for the Prevention of Harms by Love-Adventures, and by great Care and Application, hath made it an Immodesty to name his Name. gain'd this worthy Member of the Commonwealth a great Reputation. Some Law-givers have departed from their Abodes for ever, and commanded the Observation of their Laws till their Return; others have us'd other Artifices to fly the Applause of their Merit; but this Perfon thuns Glory with greater Address, and has, by giving his Engine his own Name, made it obscene to speak of him more. However, he is rank'd among, and receiv'd by the modern Wits, as a great Promoter of Gallantry and Pleasure. But I fear, Pleasure is less underflood in this Age, which fo much pretends to it, than in any fince the Creation. 'Twas admirably faid of him who first took Norice, That (Res eft Severa Voluptas) there is a certain Severity in Pleasure. Without that, all Decency is banished; and if Reason is not to be present at our greatest Satisfactions, of all the Races of Creatures, the Humane is the most miserable. It was not fo of old; when Virgil describes a Wit, he always means a virtuous Man; and all his Sentiments of Men of Genius are fuch as show Perfons distinguished from the common Level of Mankind; fuch as placed Happiness in the Contempt of low Fears, and mean Gratifications: Fears, which we are subject to with the Vulgar; and Pleasures which we have in common with Beafts. With these illustrious Personages, the Wisest Man was the Greatest Wit; and none was thought worthy of that Character, unless he answered this excellent Description of the Poet:

White's Chocolate-house, May 15:

SIR Thomas, of this House, has show'd me fome Letters from the Bath, which give Accounts of what passes among the good Company of that Place; and allow'd me to transcribe one of them, that seems to be writ by some of Sir Thomas's particular Acquaintance, and is as follows:

Dear Knight,

I Defire you would give my humble Service to all our Friends, which I speak of to you (out of Method) in the very Beginning of my Epistle, lest the present Disorders, by which this Seat of Gallantry and Pleasure is torn to Pieces, should make me forget it. You keep so good Company, that you know Bath is stock'd with such as come hither to be relieved from luxuriant Health, or imaginary Sickness, and confequently is always as well stowed with Gallants as Invalids, who live together in a very good. Under Understanding. But the Season is so early, that our fine Company is not yet arrived; and the Warm Bath, which in Heathen Times was dedi-cated to Venus, is now used only by such as really want it for Health's Sake. There are however a good many Strangers, among whom are Two ambitious Ladies, who being both in the Autumn of their Life, take the Opportunity of placing themselves at the Head of such as we are, before the Chloe's, Clariffa's, and Paftorella's come down. One of these Two is excessively in Pain, that the ugly Being called Time will make Wrinkles in Spite of the Lead Forehead-Cloth; and therefore hides with the Gaiety of her Air, the Volubility of her Tongue, and Quickness of her Motion, the Injuries which it has done her. The other Lady is but Two Years behind her in Life, and dreads as much being laid afide as the former, and consequently has taken the necessary Precautions to prevent her Reign over us. But the is very dif-· creet, and wonderfully turned for Ambition, being never apparently transported either with Affectation or Malice. Thus, while Florimel is talking in Publick, and spreading her Graces in Assemblies, to gain a Popular Dominion over our Diversions, Prudentia visits very cunningly all the Lame, the Splenatick, and the Superannuated, who have their distinct Classes of Followers and Friends. Among thefe, she has found that some Body has sent down printed Certificates of Florimel's Age, which the has read and distributed to this unjoyful Set of People, who are always Enemies to those in Posfession of the good Opinion of the Company. This unprovoked Injury done by Prudentia, was the first Occasion of our fatal Divisions here, and a Declaration of War between these Rivals. Florimel has abundance of Wit, which the has lavish'd lavish'd in decrying Prudentia, and giving Dehance to her little Arts. For an instance of her superior Power, she bespoke the Play of Alexander the Great, to be acted by the Company of Strollers, and defired us all to be there on Thursday last. When she spoke to me to come. As you are, faid the, a Lover, you will not fail the Death of Alexander: The Paffion of Love is wonderfully hit - Statira! Oh that bappy Woman --- To have a Conqueror at her Feet ---But you'll be fure to be there. I, and feveral others, refolv'd to be of her Party. But fee the irrefiltible Strength of that unfuspected Creature, a Silent Woman. Prudentia had counterplotted us, and had bespoke on the same Evening the Poppet-Show of The Creation of the World. She had engaged every Body to be there, and, to turn our Leader into Ridicule. had fecretly let 'em know, that the Poppet Eve was made the most like Florimel that ever was feen. On Thursday Morning the Poppet Drummer, Adam and Eve, and several others who lived before the Flood, pass'd thro' the Streets on Horseback, to invite us all to the Pastime, and the Representation of such Things as we all knew to be true; and Mr. Mayor was for wife as to prefer these innocent People the Poppets, who, he faid, were to represent Christians, before the wicked Players, who were to show Alexander, an Heathen Philophers To be short, this Prudentia had fo laid it, that at Ten of the Clock Footmen were fent to take Places at the Popper-Show, and all we of Florimel's Party were to be out of Fashion, or defert her. We chose the latter. All the World crowded to Prudentia's Honfe, because it was given out, no Body could get in. When we came to Noah's Flood in the Show, Punch and his Wife were introduced dancing in the Ark. An honest plain Friend of Florimel's.

mel's, but a Critick withal, rose up in the midst of the Representation, and made many very good Exceptions to the Drama it felf, and told us, That it was against all Morality, as well as Rules of the Stage, that Punch should be in Jest in the Deluge, or indeed that he should appear at all. This was certainly a just Remark, and I thought to fecond him; but he was hiss'd by Prudentia's Party; upon which, really, Sir Thomas, we who were his Friends, his'd him too. Old Mrs. Petulant defired both her Daughters to mind the Moral; then whispered Mrs. Mayoress, This is very proper for young People to See. Punch at the End of the Play made Madam Prudentia a Compliment, and was very civil to the whole Company, making Bows till his Buttons touch'd the Ground. All was carried triumphantly against our Party. In the mean Time Florimel went to the Tragedy, dress'd as fine as Hands could make her, in hopes to see Prudentia pine away with Envy. Instead of that, the fat a full Hour alone, and at last was entertained with this whole Relation from Stati-74, who wiped her Eyes with her Tragical-cut Handkerchief, and lamented the Ignorance of the Quality. Florimel was flung with this Affront, and the next Day bespoke the Poppet-Show. Prudentia, infolent with Power, befpoke Alexander. The whole Company came then to Alexander. Madam Petulant defired her Daughters to mind the Moral, and believe no Man's fair Words; For you'll fee Children, faid the thefe Soldiers are never to be depended upon; they are sometimes here; sometimes there ---Don't you fee, Daughter Betty, Colonel Clod, our next Neighbour in the Country, pulls off his Hat to you? Court'sie, good Child, his Estate is just, by us. Florimel was now mortified down to Prudentia's Humour; and Prudentia exalted into hers. This was observed: Florimel invites us to the Play a Second Time, Prudentia to the Show. See the Uncertainty of Humane Affairs! The Beaux, the Wits, the Gamesters, the Prues, the Coquets, the Valitudinarians, and Gallants, all now wait upon Florimel. Such is the State of Things at this present Date; and if there happens any new Commotions, you shall have immediate Advice from,

But indeed, I dare not go further in this Matter, than just this bare Mention; for though it was taking your Place of Right, rather than Place of Precedence, yet it is fo tender a Point, and on which the very Life of Female Ambition depends, that it is of the last Consequence to meddle in it: All my Hopes are from your beautiful Sex; and those bright Eyes, which are the Bane of others, are my only Sunshine. My Writings are Sacred to you; and I hope, I shall always have the good Fortune to live under your Protection; therefore take this publick Opportunity to fignify to all the World, That I delign to forbear any Thing that may in the least tend to the Diminution of your Interest, Reputation, or Power. St. James's Coffee-house, May 16. Letters from the Hague, bearing Date the 21st Instant, N. S. advise, That his Grace the Duke of Marlborough, immediately after his Arrival, sent his Secretary to the President and the Pentionary, to acquaint them therewith. Soon after, these Ministers visited the Duke, and made him Compliments in the Name of the States General; after which they enter'd into a Conference with bim on the present Posture of Affairs, and gave his Grace Affurances of the firm Adherence of the States to the Alliance: At the fame Time acquainting him, That all Overtures of Peace were rejected, 'till they had an Opportunity of acting in Concert with their Allies on that Subject. After this Interview, the Pensionary and the Prefident returned to the Affembly of the States. Monsieur Torcy has had a Conference at the Pensioner's House with his Grace the Duke of Marlborough, Prince Eugene, and his Excellency the Lord Townshend. The Refult of what was debated at that Time is kept fecret; but there appears an Air of Satisfaction and good Understanding between these Minifters.

sters. We are apt also to give our selves very hopeful Prospects from Monsieur Torcy's being employed in this Negotiation, who has been afways remarkable for a particular Way of Thinking, in his Senfe of the Greatness of France: which he has always faid, Was to be promoted rather by the Arts of Peace, than those of War. His delivering himself freely on this Subject, has formerly appeared an unfuccelsful Way to Power in that Court; but in its present Circumstances, those Maxims are better received; and it is thought a certain Argument of the Sincerity of the French King's Intentions, that this Minister is at present made use of. The Marquis is to return to Paris within few Days, who has fent a Courier thither to give Notice of the Reasons of his Return, that the Court may be the sooner able to dispatch Commissions for a formal Treaty.

The Expectations of Peace are increased by Advices from Paris of the 17th Instant, which fay, The Dauphin hath altered his Resolution of commanding in Flanders the ensuing Campaign. The Saxon and Prussian Reinforcements, together with Count Mara's Regiment of Imperial Horse, are encamped in the Neighbourhood of Brusses; and sufficient Stores of Corn and Forage are transported to that Place and Ghent for the Service of the Confederate Army.

They write from Mons, That the Elector of Bavaria had Advice, That an advanced Party of the Portugueza Army had been defeated by the Spaniards.

We hear from Languedac, That their Corn, Olives, and Figs, were wholly destroyed; but that they have a hopeful Prospect of a plentiful Vintage.

Will's Coffee-house, Muy 18. HE Discourse has happened to turn this Evening upon the true Nature of Panegyrick, the Perfection of which was afferted to confift in a certain artful Way of conveying the Applause in an indirect Manner. There was a Gentleman gave us feveral Instances of it: Among others, he quoted (from Sir Francis Bacon, in his Advancement of Learning) a very great Compliment made to Tiberius, as follows: In a full Debate upon Publick Affairs in the Sepate, one of the Assembly rose up, and with a very grave Air said, He thought it for the Ho-nour and Dignity of the Commonwealth, that Tiberius should be declared a God, and have Divine Worship paid him. The Emperor was furprized at the Proposal, and demanded of him to declare whether he had made any Application to incline him to that Overture? The Senator answered, with a bold and haughty Tone, Sir, In Matters that concern the Gommonwealth, I will be governed by no Man. Another Gentleman mentioned something of the same Kind fpoken by the late Duke of Bto the late Earl of O-y: My Lord, (fays the Duke, after his Libertine Way) you will certainly be Damn'd. How, my Lord! fays the Earl with some Warmth. Nay, sald the Duke, there's no Help for it, for it is positively said, Cursed is he of whom all Men speak well. This is taking a Man by Surrous. Man by Surprize, and being welcome when you have fo surprized him. The Person flattered receives you into his Closet at once; and the fudden fudden Change in his Heart, from the Expectation of an Hi-wisher, to find you his Friend, makes you in his full Favour in a Moment. The Spirits that were raised so suddenly against you, are as suddenly for you. There was another Instance given of this Kind at the Table: A Gentleman who had a very great Favour done him, and an Employment bestowed upon him, without so much as being known to his Benefactor, waited upon the Great Man who was so Generous, and was beginning to say, he was infinitely obliged. Not at all, says the Patron, turning from him to another, Had I known a more deserving Man in England, be should not have had it.

Secre

We should certainly have had more Examples, had not a Gentleman produced a Book which he thought an Instance of this kind : It was a Pamphler, call'd, The Naked Truth. The Idea any one would have of that Work from the Title, was, That there would be much Plain Dealing with People in Power, and that we should see Things in their proper Light, stripped of the Ornaments which are usually given to the Actions of the Great: But the Skill of this Author is fuch, that he has, under that rugged Appearance, approved himself the finest Gentleman and Courtier that ever writ. The Language is extremely sublime, and not atall to be understood by the Vulgar : The Sentiments are fuch as would make no Figure in ordinary Words; but fuch is the Art of the Expression, and the Thoughts are elevated to fo high a Degree, that I question whether the Discourse will sell much. There was an ill-na-tured Fellow present, who bates all Panegy-rick mortally. P— take him! faid he, What the Devil means his Naked Truth, in speaking nothing but to the Advantage of all whom he mentions? This is just such a great Action as that of the Champion's on a Coronation Day, who challenges all Mankind to dispute with bim the Right of the Sovereign, surrounded with his Guards. The Gentleman who produced the Treatife, defired him to be cautious, and faid, it was writ by an excellent Soldier, which made the Company observe it more narrowly: And (as Criticks are the greatest Conjurers at finding our a known Truth) one faid, he was fure it was writ by the Hand of his Sword-Arm. I could not perceive much Wir in that Expression; but it rais'd a Laugh, and I suppose, was meant as a Sneer upon valiant Men. The same Man pretended to see in the Style, that it was an Horse-Officer; but sure that's being too nice: For though you may know Officers of the Cavalry by the Turn of their Feet, I can't imagine how you should discern their Hands from those of other Men. But it is always thus with Pedants; they will ever be carping, if a Gentleman or a Man of Honour puts Pen to Paper. I don't doubt, but this Author will find this Affertion too true, and that Obloquy is not repulled by the Force of Arms. I will therefore fer this Excellent Piece in a Light too glaring for weak Eyes, and, in Imitation of the Critick Longinus, shall, as well as I can, make my Observations in a Style like the Author's, of whom I treat; which perhaps I am as capable of as another, having an unbounded Force of Thinking, as well as a most exquisite Address, extensively and wifely indulged to me by the su-preme Powers. My Author, I will dare to affert, shows the most Universal Knowledge of any Writer who has appeared this Century. He is a Poet, and Merchant, which is feen in Two Master-Words, Credit Blossoms. He is a Grammarian, and a Politician; for he fays, The Uniting ting the Two Kingdoms, is the Emphasis of the Security to the Protestant Succession. Some would be apt to say, he is a Conjuter; for he has found, That a Republick is not made up of every Body of Animals, but is composed of Men only, and not of Horses. Liberty and Property have chosen their Retreat within the Emulating Circle of an Humane Commonwealth. He is a Physician; for he says, I observe a constant Equality in its Pulse, and a just Quickness of its vigorous Circulation. And again: I view the Strength of our Constitution plainty appear in the Sanguine and ruddy Complexion of a well-contented City. He is a Divine: For he says, I cannot but bless my self. And indeed, this Excellent Treatise has had that good Effect upon me, who am far from being Superstitious, that I, also, can't but bless my self.

St. James's Coffee-house, May 18.

This Day arrived a Mail from Lisbon, with Letters of the 13th Instant, N. S. containing a particular Account of the late Action in Portugal. On the 7th Instant, the Army of Portugal, under the Command of the Marquis de Frontera, lay on the Side of the Caya, and the Army of the Duke of Anjou, commanded by the Marquis de Bay, on the other. The latter Commander having an Ambition to ravage the Country, in a Manner in Sight of the Portu gueze, made a Motion with the whole Body of his Horse toward Fort St. Christopher, near the Town of Badajos. The Generals of the Portugueze, disdaining that such an Insult should be offered to their Arms, took a Resolution to pass the River, and oppose the Designs of the Enemy. The Earl of Galway represented to them, That the present Posture of Affairs was such on the Side of the Allies, that there needed no more to be done at prefent in that Country, G 2 but to carry on a Defensive Part. But his Arguments could not avail in the Council of War. Upon which, a great Detachment of Foot, and the whole of the Horse of the King of Portugal's Army, passed the River, and with some Pieces of Cannon did good Execution on the Enemy. Upon observing this, the Marquis de Bay advanced with his Horse, and attacked the Right Wing of the Portugueze Cavalry, who faced about, and fled, without standing the first Encounter. But their Foot repulsed the fame Body of Horse in three successive Charges, with great Order and Resolution. While this was transacting, the British General commanded the Brigade of Pearce, to keep the Enemy in Divertion by a new Attack. This was fo well executed, that the Portugueze Infantry had Time to retire in good Order, and repass the River. But that Brigade, which refcued 'em, was it felf furrounded by the Enemy, and Major-General, Sarkey, Brigadier Pearce, together with both their Regiments, and that of the Lord Galway, lately raised, were taken Prisoners.

During the Engagement, the Earl of Barrymore having advanced too far to give some necessary Order, was hemmed in by a Squadron of the Enemy; but found Means to gallop up to the Brigade of Pearce, with which he remains also a Prisoner. My Lord Galway had his Horse short under him in this Action; and the Conde de St. Juan, a Portugueze General, was taken Prisoner. The same Night the Army encamped at Aronches, and on the 9th moved to Elvas, where they lay when these Dispatches came away. Colonel Stanwix's Regiment is also taken. The whole of this Assair has given the Portugueze a great Idea of the Capacity and Courage of my Lord Galway, against gainst whose Advice they entered upon this unfortunate Affair, and by whose Conduct they were rescued from it. The prodigious Constancy and Resolution of that great Man is hardly to be parallel'd, who, under the Oppression of a maimed Body, and the Resection of repeated ill Fortune, goes on with an unspeakable Alacrity in the Service of the Common Cause. He has already put Things in a very good Posture after this ill Accident, and made the necessary Dispositions for covering the Country from any further Attempt of the Enemy, who lie still in the Camp they were in before the Battle.

Letters from Bruffels, dated the 25th Instant, advise, That notwithstanding the Negotiations of a Peace seem so far advanced, that some do confidently report the Preliminaries of a Treaty to be actually agreed on; yet the Allies haften their Preparations for opening the Campaign; and the Forces of the Empire, the Pruffians, the Danes, the Wirtembergers, the Palatines, and Saxon Auxiliaries, are in Motion towards the General Rendevous, they being already are rived in the Neighbourhood of Bruffels. Thef-Advices add, That the Deputies of the States of Holland, having made a General Review of the Troops in Flanders, fet out for Antwerp on the 21st Instant from that Place. On the same Day the Prince Royal of Pruffia came thither incognito, with a Delign to make the ensuing Campaign under his Grace the Duke of Marlborough.

This Day is published a Treatise, call'd, The Disterence between Scandal and Admonition. By Isaac Bickerstaff Esq; And on the 1st of July next, you may expect A Prophecy of Things past; wherein the Art of Fortune-telling is laid opento the meanest Capacity. And on the Monday G 3 following.

following, Choice Sentences for the Company of Masons and Bricklayers, to be put upon new Houses, with a Translation of all the Latin Sentences, that have been built of late Years, together with a Comment upon Stone Walls, by the Same Hand.

The TATLER. [Nº 18.

From Thursd. May 19. to Saturd. May 21. 1709.

T is observed too often, that Men of Wit do fo much employ their Thoughts upon fine. Speculations, that Things useful to Mankind are wholly neglected; and they are busy in making Emendations upon some Encliticks in a Greek Author, while obvious Things, that every Man may have use for, are wholly overlooked. It would be an happy Thing, if such as have real Capacities for Publick Service, were employed in Works of general Use; but because a Thing is every Body's Business, it is no Body's Business; This is for Want of publick Spirit. As for my Part, who am only a Student, and a Man of no great Interest, I can only remark. Things, and recommend the Correction of 'em to higher Powers. There is an Offence I have a Thousand Times lamented, but fear I shall never see remedy'd; which is, That in a Nation where Learning is so frequent as in Great Britain, there should be so many gross Errors as there are in the very Directions of Things, wherein Accuracy is necessary for the Conduct of Life. This is notoriously observed by all Men of Letters when they first come to Town (at which which Time they are usually curious that Way) in the Inscriptions on Sign-Posts. I have Cause to know this Matter as well as any Body; for I have (when I went to Merchant-Taylor's School) fuffered Stripes for spelling after the Signs I observed in my Way; tho' at the same Time, I must confess, staring at those Inscriptions first gave me an Idea and Curiolity for Medals; in which I have fince arrived at some Knowledge. Many a Man has loft his Way and his Dinner by this general Want of Skill in Orthography; For, confidering that the Painters are usually so very bad, that you cannot know the Animal under whose Sign you are to live that Day, How must the Stranger be missed, if it be wrong spelled, as well as ill painted? I have a Cousin now in Town, who has answered under Batchelor at Queen's College, whose Name is Humphrey Mopftaff: (He is a Kin to us by his Mother.) This young Man going to see a Relation in Barbekin, wandered a whole Day by the Miltake of one Letter, for it was written, This is the BEER, instead of, This is the BEAR. He was fet right at last, by enquiring for the House, of a Fellow who could not read, and knew the Place mechanically, only by having been often drunk there. But, in the Name of Goodness, let us make our Learning of Use to us, or not. Was not this a Shame, that a Philosopher should be thus directed by a Cobler ? I'll be fworn, if it were known how many have fuffered in this Kind by falle Speeling time the Union, this Matter would not long lie thus. What makes these Evils the more insupportable, is, That they are so easily amended, and nothing done in it. But it is so far from that, that the Evil goes on in other Arts as well as Orthography. Places are confounded, as well for want of proper Distinctions, as Things for Want of true Characters. Had I not come by the other Day very early in the Morning, there might have been Mischief done; for a worthy North-Britain was Iwearing at Stocks-market. that they would not let him in at his Ludgings; but I knowing the Gentleman, and obferving him look often at the King on Horseback, and then double his Oaths, that he was fure he was right, found he mistook that for Charing-Cross, by the Erection of the like Statue in each Place. I grant, private Men may diftinguish their Abodes as they please; as one of my Acquaintance who lives at Marybone, has put a good Sentence of his own Invention upon his Dwelling-place, to find out where he lives : He is fo near London, that his Conceit is this, The Country in Town; or, The Town in the Country; for you know, if they are both in one, they are all onc. Bendes that, the Ambiguity is not of great Consequence; if you are safe at the Place, 'tis no Matter if you do not distinctly know where to fay the Place is. But to return to the Orthography of Publick Places: I propose, That every Tradesman in the Cities of London and Westminster, shall give me Sixpence a Quarter for keeping their Signs in Repair, as to the Grammatical Part; and I will take into my House a Swifs Count of my Acquaintance, who can remember all their Names without Book, for Dispatch sake, setting up the Head of the faid Foreigner for my Sign; the Features being strong, and fit for hanging high.

St. James's Coffee-house, May 20.

This Day a Mail arrived from Holland, by which there are Advices from Paris, That the Kingdom of France is in the utmost Misery and Distraction. The Merchants of Lions have been at Court, to remonstrate their great Sufferings. by the Failure of their Publick Credit; but have received no other Satisfaction, than Promises of a sudden Peace; and that their Debts will be made good by Funds out of the Revenue, which will not answer, but in case of the Peace which is promised. In the mean Time, the Cries of the common People are loud for Want of Bread, the Gentry have loft all Spirit and Zeal for their Country, and the King himself seems to languish under the Anxiety of the pressing Calamities of the Nation, and retires from hearing those Grievances which he hath not Power to redrefs. Instead' of Preparations for War, and the Defence of their Country, there is nothing to be feen but evident Marks of a general Despair. Processions, Faftings, Publick Mournings, and Humiliations, are become the fole Employments of a People, who were lately the most vain and gay of any in the Universe.

The Pope has written to the French King on the Subject of a Peace, and his Majetty has anfwered in the lowliest Terms, That he entirely submits his Affairs to Divine Providence, and shall soon show the World, that he prefers the Tranquillity of his People to the Glory of his Arms, and Extent of his Conquests.

Letters from the Hague of the 24th say, That his Excellency the Lord Townshend delivered his Credentials on that Day to the States-General, as Plenipotentiary from the Queen of Great-Britain; as did also Count Zinzendorf, who bears the same Character from the Emperor.

Prince Eugene intended to set out the next Day for Brussels, and his Grace the Duke of Marlborough on the Tuesday following. The Marquis de Torcy talks daily of going, but still.

continues here. The Army of the Allies is to assemble on the 7th of the next Month at Helahin; though 'tis generally believed, that the Preliminaries to a Treaty are fully adjusted.

The Approach of a Peace strikes a Pannick shro' our Armies, tho' that of a Battle could never do it, and they almost repent of their Bravery, that made fuch haft to humble themfelves and the French King. The Duke of Marlborough, tho' otherwise the greatest General of the Age, has plainly shown himself unacquainted with the Arts of Husbanding a War. He might have grown as old as the Duke of Alva, or Prince Waldeck, in the Low-Countries, and yet have got Reputation enough every Year for any reasonable Man : For the Command of General in Flanders hath been ever looked upon as a Provision for Life. For my Part, I can't fee how his Grace can answer it to the World, for the great Eagerness he hath shown to fend a Hundred Thousand of the bravest Fellows in Europe a begging. But the private Gentlemen of the Infantry will be able to shift for themselves; a brave Man can never starve in a Country stock'd with Hen-roofts. There is not a Fard of Linnen, says my honoured Progenitor, Sir John Falftaff, in my whole Company; but as for that, fays this worthy Knight, I am in no great Pain, we shall find Shirts on every Hedge. There is another Sort of Gentlemen whom I am much more concerned for, and that is, the ingenious Fraternity of which I have the Honour to be an unworthy Member: I mean the News Writers of Great Britain, whether Post-Men or Post-Boys, or by what other Name or Title foever dignified or diffinguished. The Case of these Gentlemen is, I think, more hard than that of the Soldiers, considering that shey have taken more Towns, and fought more Battels: They have been upon Parties and Skirmishes, when our Armies have lain still; and given the General Affault to many a Place, when the Besiegers were quiet in their Trenches. They have made us Mafters of feveral ftrong Towns many Weeks before our Generals could do it; and compleated Victories, when our greatest Captains have been glad to come off with a drawn Battle. Where Prince Eugene has flain his Thousands, Boyer has flain his Ten Thousands. This Gentleman can indeed be never enough commended for his Courage and Intrepidity during this whole War: He has laid about him with an inexpressible Fury, and like the offended Marius of Ancient Rome made fuch Havock among his Countrymen, as must be the Work of two or three Ages to repair. It must be confess'd, the Redoubted Mr. Buckley has shed as much Blood as the former; but I cannot forbear faying, (and I hope it will not look like Envy) that we regard our Brother Buckley as a kind of Drawcanfir, who spares neither Friend or Foe: But generally kills as many of his own Side as the Enemy's. It is impossible for this ingenious Sort of Men to subsist after a Peace: Every one remembers the Shifts they were driven to in the Reign of King Charles the Second, when they could not furnish out a single Paper of News, without lighting up a Comet in Germany, or a Fire in Moscom. There searce appeared a Letter without a Paragraph on an Earthquake. Pradigies were grown to familiar, that they had loft their Name, as a great Poet of that Age has it. I remember Mr. Dyer; who is justly look'd upon by all the Fox-hunters in the Nation as the greatest Statesman our Country has produced, was particularly famous for dealing in Whales; infomuch that in Five Months Time ftor (for I had the Curiosity to examine his Letters on that Occasion) he brought Three into the Mouth of the River Thames, besides Two Porpusses and a Sturgeon. The judicious and wary Mr. I. Dawks hath all along been the Rival of this great Writer, and got himself a Reputation from Plagues and Famines, by which, in those Days, he destroyed as great Multitudes, as he has lately done by the Sword. In every Dearth of News, Grand Cairo was sure to be un-

It being therefore visible, that our Society will be g eater Sufferers by the Peace than the Soldiery it felf; infomuch that the Daily Courant is in Danger of being broken, my Friend Dyer of being reformed, and the very best of the whole Band of being reduced to Half-pay; Might I prefume to offer any Thing in the Behalf of my distressed Brethren, I would humbly move, That an Appendix of proper Apartments furnished with Pen, Ink, and Paper, and other Necessaries of Life, should be added to the Hospital of Chelsea, for the Relief of such decay'd News-Writers as have leiv'd their Country in the Wars; and that for their Exercise, they should compile the Annals of their Brother Veterans, who have been engaged in the fame Service, and are still obliged to do Duty after the fame Manner.

I cannot be thought to speak this out of an Eye to any private Interest; for, as my chief Scenes of Action are Cossee houses, Play-houses, and my own Apartment, I am in no need of Camps, Fortifications, and Fields of Battle, to support me; I don't call out for Heroes and Generals to my Assistance. Though the Officers are broken, and the Armies disbanded, I shall still be safe as long as there are Men or Women, or Politicians, or Lovers, or Poets, or

From Saturd. May 21. to Tuefd. May 24. 1709.

From my own Apartment, May 23.

THERE is nothing can give a Man of any Consideration greater Pain, than to see Order and Distinction laid aside amongst Men, especially when the Rank (of which he himself is a Member) is intruded upon by such as have no Pretence to that Honour. The Appellation of Esquire is the most notoriously abused in this Kind of any Class amongst Men, insomuch that it is become almost the Subject of Derision; but I will be bold to say, This Behaviour towards it proceeds from the Ignorance of the People in its true Origine. I shall therefore, as briefly as possible, do my self and all true Esquires the Justice to look into Antiquity upon this Subject.

In the First Ages of the World, before the Invention of Jointures and Settlements, when the noble Passion of Love had Possession of the Hearts of Men, and the Fair Sex were not yet cultivated into the merciful Disposition which they have showed in latter Centuries, it was natural for Great and Heroick Spirits to retire to Rivulets, Woods, and Caves, to lament their Destiny, and the Cruelty of the sair Persons who were deaf to their Lamentations. The Hero in this Distress was generally in Armour, and in a Readiness to sight any Man he met with, especially if distinguished by any extraordinary Qualifications, it being the Nature of Heroick Love to hate all Merit, lest it should come within the Observation of the Cruel One. by whom its own Perfections are neglected. A Lover of this Kind had always about him a Perfon of a Second Value, and fubordinate to him, who could hear his Afflictions, carry an Inchantment for his Wounds, hold his Helmet when he was eating (if ever he did eat); or in his Absence, when he was retired to his Apartment in any King's Palace; tell the Prince himself, or Adventures, of his valiant Master. This trusty Companion was styled his Efquire, and was always fit for any Offices about him; was as gentle and chaft as a Gentleman-Usher, quick and active as an Equerry, smooth and eloquent as a Master of the Ceremonies. A Man thus qualified was the first, as the Ancients affirm, who was called an Efguire; and none without these Accomplishments ought to assume our Order: But, to the utter Dilgrace and Confusion of the Heralds, every Pretender is admitted into this Fraternity, even Persons the most Foreign to this courteous Institution. taken an Inventory of all within this City, and looked over every Letter in the Post-Office for my better Information. There are of the Middle-Temple, including all in the Buttery Books, and in the Lists of the House, 5000. In the Inner, 4000. In the King's Bench-Walks, the whole Buildings are inhabited by Esquires only. adjacent Street of Effex, from Morris's Coffeehouse, and the Turning towards the Grecian, you cannot meet one who is not an Esquire, 'till you take Water. Every House in Norfolk and Arundel Streets is governed also by a Squire, or his Lady. However, if this were the worst of the Evil, it were to be supported, because they are general. ly Men of some Figure and Use; tho' I know no Pretence they have to an Honour which had its Rife from Chivalry. But if you travel into the Counties of Great Britain, we are still more imposed upon by Innovation. We are indeed derived from the Field: But shall that give Title to all that ride mad after Foxes, that holloo when they see an Hare, or venture their Necks full Speed after an Hawk, immediately to commence Esquires ? No; our Order is Temperate. Cleanly, Sober, and Chaft; but these Rural Esquires commit Immodesties upon Hay-cocks, wear Shirts half a Week, and are drunk Twice a Day. These Men are also to the last Degree excessive in their Food: An Esquire of Norfolk eats Two Pounds of Dumplin every Meal, as if oblig'd to it by our Order: An Esquire of Hamphire is as ravenous in devouring Hogs-flesh: One of Effex has as little Mercy on Calves. But I must take the Liberty to protest against them. and acquaint those Persons, that it is not the Quantity they eat, but the Manner of eating, that shows a Squire. But above all, I am most offended at finall Quill-men, and Transcribing Clerks, who are all come into our Order, for no Reason that I know of, but that they can easily flourish it at the End of their Name. Pil undertake, that if you read the Superscriptions to all the Offices in the Kingdom, you will not find Three Letters directed to any but Efquires. I have my felf a Couple of Clerks, and the Rogues make nothing of leaving Messages uponeach other's Desk : One directs, To Degory Goofequill Esq; to which the other replies by a Note, To Nehemiah Dashwell Esq; with Respect. In a Word, it is now Populus Armigerorum, A People of Esquires. And I don't know, but, by the late Act of Naturalization, Foreigners will affume that Title, as Part of the Immunity of being Englishmen. All these Improprieties flow from the Negligence of the Heralds-Office. Those Gentlemen in Party-colour'd Habits do not fo rightly, as they ought, understand themfelves; though they are dress'd Cap-a-pe in Hieroglyphicks, they are inwardly but ignorant Men. I asked an Acquaintance of mine, who is a Man of Wit, but of no Fortune, and is forced to appear as Jack-pudding on the Stage to a Mountebank. Prethee, Jack, Why is your Coat of fo many Colours? He reply'd, I act a Fool, and this sported Dress is to signifie, that every Man living has a weak Place about him; for I am Knight of the Shire, and represent you all. I wish the Heralds would know as well as this Man does, in his Way, that they are to act for us in the Case of our Arms and Appellations: We should not then be jumbled together in so promiscuous and absurd a Manner. I design to take this Matter into further Consideration, and no Man shall be received as an Esquire, who cannot bring a Certificate, That he has conquered some Lady's obdurate Heart; That he can lead up a Country Dance, or carry a Meffage between her and her Lover, with Address, Secrecy, and Diligence. A Squire is properly born for the Service of the Sex, and his Credentials shall be figned by Three Toasts, and One Prude, before his Title shall be receiv'd in my Office.

On Saturday last was presented, The Busie Body, a Comedy, written (as I have heretofore remark'd) by a Woman. The Plot and Incidents of the Play are laid with that Subrilty of Spirit which is peculiar to Females of Wit, and is very feldom well performed by those of the other

Sex, in whom Craft in Love is an A& of Invention, and not, as with Women, the Effect of Nature and Instinct.

To Morrow will be acted a Play, call'd, The Trip to the Jubilee. This Performance is the greatest Instance that we can have of the irreinstible Force of proper Action. The Dialogue in it self has something too low to bear a Criticism upon it: But Mr. Wilks enters into the Part with so much Skill, that the Gallantry, the Youth, and Gaiety of a young Man of a plentiful Fortune, is looked upon with as much Indulgence on the Stage, as in sreal Life, without any of those Intermixtures of Wit and Humour, which usually preposses us in Favour of such Characters in other Plays.

St. James's Coffee-house, May 23.

Letters from the Hague of the 23d Instant, N. S. fay, Mr. Walpole (who is fince arrived) was going with all Expedition to Great Britain, whither they doubted not but he carried with him the Preliminaries to a Treaty of Peace. The French Minister, Monsieur Torcy, has been observed in this whole Negotiation to turn his Difcourfe upon the Calamities fent down by Heaven upon France, and imputed the Necessities they were under to the immediate Hand of Providence, in inflicting a general Scarcity of Provision, rather than the superior Genius of the Generals, or the Bravery of the Armies against them. It would be impious not to acknowledge, the Indulgence of Heaven to us; but at the fame Time, as we are to love our Enemies, we are glad to fee em mortified enough to mix Christianity with their Politicks. An Authentick Letter from Madam Maintenen to Monsieur Torcy has been stolen by a Person about him, who has communicated a Copy of it to some of the Dependants of a Minister of the Ala lies.

That Epistle is writ in the most Pathetick Manner imaginable, and in a Style which shows her Genius, that has fo long engroffed the Heart of this great Monarch.

SIR.

I Reserved yours, and am sensible of the Address and Capacity with which you have hitherto transacted the great Affair under your Management. You well observe, that our Wants here are not to be concealed; and that it is Vanity to use Artifices with the knowing Men with whom you are to deal. Let me beg you therefore, in this Representation of our Circumstances, to lay aside Art, which ceases to be such when it is seen, and make use of all your Skill, to gain us what Advantages you can from the Enemy's Jealousie of each other's Greatness; which is the Place where only you have Room for any Dexterity. If you have any Passion for your unhappy Country, or any Af-fection for your distressed Master, come bome with Peace. Oh Heaven! Do I live to talk of Lewis the Great as the Object of Pity? The King shews a great Uneasiness to be informed of all that passes; but at the same Time, is fearful of every one who appears in his Presence, lest be should bring an Account of some new Calamity. I know not in what Terms to represent my Thoughts to you, when I speak of the King with Relation to his Bodily Health. Figure to your felf that Immortal Man, who stood in our Publick Places, represented with Trophies, Armour, and Terrors, on his Pedestal: Consider, the Invincible, the Great, the Good, the Pious, the Mighty, which were the usual Epithets we gave him, both in our Language and Thoughts. There is such a Veneration due from all Men to the Persons of Princes, that it were a Sort of Dishonesty to represent further the Condition which the King is in; but it is certain, That soon after the Receipt of these Advices, Monsieur Torcy waited upon his Grace the Duke of Marlborough and the Lord Townshend, and in that Conference gave up many Points, which he had before said were such, as he must return to France before he could answer.

will run away with People's Understandings, in Cases wherein they are under present Uneasiness. The following Narration is a sufficient Testimony of the Truth of this Observation.

I had the Honour the other Day of a Visit from a Gentlewoman (a Stranger to me) who seemed to be about Thirty. Her Complexion is Brown; but the Air of her Face has an Agrecableness, which surpasses the Beauties of the Fairest Women. There appeared in her Look and Mien a sprightly Health; and her Eyes had too much Vivacity to become the Language of Complaint, which she began to enter into. Madam, faid I, your Grievance is of fuch a Nature, that you must be very ingenuous in reprefenting the Caules of your Complaint, or I cannot give you the Satisfaction you defire. Sir, the answers, I believed there would be no need of half your Skill in the Art of Divination, to guess why a Woman would part from her Husband. 'Tis true. faid I, but Suspicions, or Gueffes at what you mean, nay, Certainty of it, except you plainly speak it, are no Foundation for a formal Suit. Madam, faid I, the Affliction you complain of, is to be redressed by Law; but at the same Time, consider what Mortifications you are to go through in bringing it into open Court; how you will be able to bear the impertinent Whispers of the People present at the Tryal, the licentious Resections of the Pleaders, and the Interpretations that will in general be put upon your Conduct by all the World: How little (will they say) could that Lady command her Passions. Besides, consider, that curbing our Desires is the greatest Glory we can arrive at in this World, and will be most rewarded in the next. She answered, like a prudent Matron, Sir, if you please to remember the Office of Matrimony, the first Cause of its Institution is that of having Posterity: Therefore, as to the Observing she was learned, and knew to well the Duties of Life, I turned my Arguments rather to dehort her from this Publick Procedure by Examples, than Precepts. Do but confider, Madam, what Crowds of beauteous Women live in Numeries, fecluded for ever from the Sight and Conversa-tion of Men, with all the Alacrity of Spirit imaginable; they spend their Time in Heavenly Raptures, in conftant and frequent Devotion, and at proper Hours in agreeable Conversations. Sir, said she hastily, Tell not me of Papists, or any of their Idolatries. Well then, Madam, confider how many fine Ladies live innocently in the Eye of the World, and this gay Town, in the midst of Tempration ; There's the Witty Mrs. W-- is a Virgin of 44, Mrs. T-s is 39, Mrs. L-ce 33; yet you fee, they laugh and are gay, at the Park, at the Play-house, at Balls, and at Visits; and so much at Ease, that all this seems hardly a Self-denial. Mr. Bickerstaff, said she, with some Emotion, you are an excellent Cafuilt; but the last Word destroyed your whole Argument; if it is not Self-denial, it is no Virtue. I presented you with an Half-Guinea, in Hopes not only to have my Conscience eas'd, but my Fortune Age is your Husband? Will's Coffee-bouse, May 25.

This Evening was acted, The Recruiting Officer, in which Mr. Efteour's proper Senie and Observation is what supports the Play. There is not, in my bumble Opinion, the Humour hit in Serjeant Kite; but it is admirably supply'd by his Action. If I have Skill to judge, that Man is an excellent Actor; but the Crowd of the Audience are fitter for Representations Fair is now broke, as well as the Theatre is breaking: But it is allowed still to fell Animals Therefore, if any Lady or Gentleman have Occasion for a tame Elephant, let them enquire of Mr. Penkethman, who has one to difpose of at a reasonable Rate. The Downfal of May-Fair has quite funk the Price of this noble Greature, as well as of many other Curiofities of Nature. A Tyger will fell almost as cheap as an Ox; and I am credibly informed, a Man may purchase a Cat with Three Legs, for very near near the Value of one with Four. I hear likewife, That there is a great Defolation among the Gentlemen and Ladies who were the Ornaments of the Town, and used to shine in Plumes and Diadems; the Heroes being most of them press'd, and the Queens bearing Hemp. Mrs. Sarabrand, fo famous for her ingenious Puppet-Show, has fet up a Shop in the Exchange. where the fells her little Troop under the Term of Jointed-Babies. I could not but be folicitous to know of her, how the had disposed of that Rake-hell Punch, whose lewd Life and Conversation had given so much Scandal, and did not a little contribute to the Ruin of the Fair. She told me, with a Sigh, That despairing of ever reclaiming him, the would not offer to place him in a Civil Family, but got him in a Post upon a Stall in Wapping, where he may be feen from Sun-rifing to Sun-ferring, with a Glass in one Hand, and a Pipe in the other, as Centry to a Brandy-Shop. The great Revolutions of this Nature bring to my Mind the Distresses of the unfortunate Camilla, who has had the ill Luck to break before her Voice, and to disappear at a Time when her Beauty was in the Heighth of its Bloom. This Lady enter'd to throughly into the great Characters the acted, that when she had finished her Part, she could not think of retrenching her Equipage, but would appear in her own Lodgings with the same Magnificence that she did upon the Stage. This Greatness of Soul has reduced that unhappy Princess to an involuntary Retirement, where the now passes her Time among the Woods and Forrests, thinking on the Crowns and Scepters the has loft, and often humming over in her Solitude,

I was born of Royal Race, Yet must wander in Disgrace, &c. But for Fear of being over-heard, and her Quality known, the usually sings it in Italian;

Naqui al Regno, naqui al Trono E pur sono Iventurata Pastorella—

Since I have touched upon this Subject, I shall communicate to my Reader Part of a Letter! have received from an Ingenious Friend at Amsterdam, where there is a very noble Theatre; though the Manner of furnishing it with Actor is something peculiar to that Place, and gives we Occasion to admire both the Politeness and Fragality of the People.

M' Friends have kept me here a Week longor than ordinary to see one of their Plays, which was performed last Night with great Applause. The Actors are all of them Tradefmen, who, after their Day's Work is over, earn about a Gilder a Night by personating Kings and Generals. The Hero of the Tragedy I saw, was a Journey-man Taylor, and bus First Minister of State a Coffee man. The Empress made me think of Parthenope in the Rehearfal; for her Mother keeps an elebouse in the Suburbs of Amsterdam. When the Tragedy was over, they entertained us with a short Farce, in which the Cobler did his Part to a Miracle; but upon Enquiry, I found he had really been working at his own Trade, and representing on the Stage what he afted every Day in his Shop. The Profits of the Theatre maintain an Holpital: For as here they do not think the Profession of an Actor the only Trade that a Man ought to exercise, so they will not allow any Body to grow rich on a Profession that, in their Opinion, so little conduces to the Good of the Commonwealth. If I am not mistaken, your Play-houses in England have dom the Same Thing; for, unless I am misinformed,

The Hague is agreed upon for the Place of Treaty, and the 15th of the next Month the Day on which it is to commence. The Terms whereon this Negotiation is founded, are not yet declared by publick Authority; but what is most generally received, is as follows:

Her Majesty's Right and Title, and the Proteltant Succession to those Dominions, is forthwith to be acknowledged. King Charles is to be owned the lawful Sovereign of Spain. The French King shall not only recall his Troops. out of that Kingdom, and deliver up to the Allies the Towns of Roses, Fonterabia, and Pampelona; but in case the Duke of Anjou shall not retire out of the Spanish Dominions, he shall be obliged to affift the Allies to force him from A Ceffation of Arms is agreed upon for Two Months from the first Day of the Treaty. The Port and Fortifications of Dunkirk are to be demolished within four Months; but the Town it self left in the Hands of the French. The Pretender is to be obliged to leave France. All Newfoundland is to be restored to the English. As to the other Parts of America, the French are to referre whatever they may have taken from the English, as the English in like Manner to give up what they may have taken from the French before the Commencement of the Treaty. The Trade between Great-Britain and France shall be settled upon the same Foundation as in the Reign of King Charles the Second.

The Dutch are to have for their Barriers, Newport, Berg, St. Vinox, Furnes, Ipres, Lille, Tournay, Doua, Valenciennes, Conde, Maubeuge, Mons, Charleroy, Namur, and Luxemburg; all which Places shall be delivered up to the Allies be fore the End of June. The Trade between Holland and France shall be on the same Foot as in 1664. The Cities of Strasburg, Brifac, and Allatia, shall be restored to the Emperor and Empire; and the King of France, pursuant to the Treaty of Westphalia in 1648, shall only retain the Protection of Ten Imperial Cities, wiz. Colmar, Schleftat, Haguenau, Munfter, Turkeim, Keisemberg, Obrenheim, Rosheim, Weisemburg, and Landau, Huninguen, Fort Louis, Fort Khiel, and New Brilac, shall be demolished, and all the Fortifications from Bafil to Philipsburg. The King of Pruffia shall remain in the peaceable Possession of Newfebatel. The Affair of Orange, as also the Pretentions of his Prussian Majesty in the French Comte, shall be determined at this general Negotiation of Peace. The Duke of Saver shall have a Restitution made of all that has been taken from him by the French, and remain Master of Exilles, Chamont, Fenefirelles, and the Valley of Pragelas.

A Gentleman has writ to me out of the Country a very civil Letter, and said things which I suppress with great Violence to my Vanity. There are many Terms in my Narauves which he complains want explaining, and has therefore defired, that, for the Benefit smy Country Readers, I would let him know what I mean by a Gentleman, a Pretty-Fellow, a hast, a Coquet, a Critick, a Wit, and all other appellations of those in the gayer World, who are now in Possession of these several Characters; magether with an Account of those who unformately pretend to'em. I shall begin with him we usually call a Gentleman, or Man of Convertation.

It is generally thought, That Warmth of Imapination, quick Relish of Pleasure, and a Manmer of becoming it, are the most essential Qualimes for forming this Sort of Man. But any one mat is much in Company will observe, that the height of good Breeding is shown rather in nemer giving Offence, than in doing obliging Things. Thus he that never Shocks you, tho me is seldom entertaining, is more likely to keep your Favour, than he who often entertains, and sometimes displeases you. The most necesfary Talent therefore in a Man of Conversation, which is what we ordinarily intend by a Fine Gentleman, is a good Judgment. He that has his in Perfection, is Master of his Companion, without letting him see it; and has the same devantage over Men of any other Qualifications whatsoever, as one that can see would have over bolind Man of Ten times his Strength.

This is what makes Sophronius the Darling of all who converie with him, and the most Powerful with his Acquaintance of any Man in Town. By the Light of this Faculty, he acts with great Ease and Freedom among the Men of Pleasure, and acquire himself, with Skill and Dispatch among the Men of Business. All which he performs with fuch Succels, that, with as much Discretion in Life as any Man ever had, he neither is nor appears Comming. But as he does a good Office; if he ever does it, with Readiness and Alacrity; to he denies what he does not care to engage in, in a Manner that convinces you, that you ought not to have asked it. His Judgment is to good and unerring, and accompanied with so chearful a Spirit, that his Convertation is a continual Feath, at which he helps some, and is Helped, by others, in such a Manner, that the Equality of Society is perfectly kept up, and every Man obliges as much as he is obliged. For it is the greatest and justest Skill in a Man of Superior Understanding, to know how to be on a Lovel with his Companions. This sweet Disposition runs through all the Actions of Sophranius, and make his Company defired by Women, without being envied by Men. Sophra-Law; and would be as discreet as he is, if there were no fuch Thing as Calumny.

In Imitation of this agreeable Being, is made that Animal we call a Pretty Fellow; who being just able to find out, that what makes Sophonius acceptable, is a Natural Behaviour; in order to the fame Reputation, makes his own an Arrificial one. Fox ; but I wonder the Modern Writers do not wie their Interest in the House to suppress such Reprefentations MA Man that has been at this. will hardly like any other Play during the Seafor: Therefore I humbly move, That the Writings, as well as Drefles, of the laft Age, fhould give Way to the present Fastion. We are come into a good Method enough fif we were not interrupted in our Mirth by fuch an Apparition as a Play of Johnson's) to be entertained at more Ease, both to the Spectaror and the Writer, than in the Days of Old. It is no Difficulty to get Hats, and Swords, and Wigs, and Shooes, and every Thing elfe, from the Shops in Town, and make a Man show himself by his Habit, without more ado, to be a Counfellor, a Fop, a Courtier, or a Citizen, and not be obliged to make those Characters talk in different Dialects to be diffinguished from each other. This is certainly the furest and best Way of Writing: But fuch a Play as this makes a Man for a Month after over-run with Criticism, and enquire, What every Man on the Stage Said? What had such a one to do to meddle with such a Thing? How came t'other, who was bred after this or that Manner, to speak so like a Man conversant among a different People? These Questions rob us of all our Pleasure; for at this Rate, no Sentence in a Play should be spoken by any one Character, which could possibly enter into the Head of any other Man represented in it; but H 3 every

But I don't know how they did in those old Times: This same Ben Jolmson has made every one's Passion in this Play be towards Money, and yet not one of them expresses that Desire, or endeavour to obtain it any Way but what is peculiar to him only: One sacrifices his Wise, another his Profession, another his Posterity, from the same Motive; but their Characters are kept so skilfully apart, that it seems prodigious their Discourses should rise from the Intention of the same Author.

But the Poets are a Nest of Hornets, and I'll drive these Thoughts no farther, but must mention some hard Treatment I am like to meet with from my Brother Writers. I am credibly informed, that the Author of a Play, call'd, Love in a Hollow Tree, has made some Remarks upon my late Discourse on The Naked Truth. I cannot blame a Gentleman for writing against any Error; it is for the Good of the learned World. But I would have the Thing fairly left between us Two, and not under the Protection of Patrons. But my Intelligence is, that he has dedicated his Treatise to the Honourable Mr. Ed-d H-rd.

From my own Apartment, May 27.

To Isaac Bickerstaff Esq;

SIR, York, May 16. 1709.

Being convinced, as the whole World is, how infallible your Predictions are, and having the Honour to be your near Relation, of the Staffian Family, I was under great Concern at one of your Predictions dictions relating to your felf, wherein you foretolist yeur own Death would happen on the 17th Instant, unless it were prevented by the Assistance of well-disposed People: I have therefore prevailed on my own Modesty to Send you a Piece of News, which may lerve instead of Goddard's Drops, to keep you alive for two Days, till Nature be able to recover it felf, or till you meet with some better Help from other Hands. Therefore, without further Ceremony, I will go on to relate a singular Adventure just happened in the Place where I am writing, wherein it may be highly useful for the Publick to be informed.

Three young Ladies of our Town were on Saturday last indicted for Witchcraft. The Wienesses against the First deposed upon Oath before Justice Bindover, That she kept Spirits locked up in Veffels, which sometimes appeared in Flames of blue Fire ; That foe used Magical Herbs, with some of which the drew in Hundreds of Men daily to her, who went out from ber Presence all instamed, their Mouths parched, and a bot Steam iffuing frome them, attended with a grievous Stench; That many of the faid Men were by the Force of that Herb met amorphosed into Swine, and lay wallowing in the Kennels for Twenty four Hours, before they could reassime their Shapes or their Senses.

It was proved against the Second, That fbe cut off by Night the Limbs from dead Bodies that were hanged, and were seen to dig Holes in the Ground, to mutter some conjuring Words, and bury Pieces of the Flesh, after the usual Manner of Witches.

The Third was accused for a notorious Piece of Sorcery, long practifed by Hags, of moulding up Pieces of Dough into the Shapes of Men, Women and Children; then heating them at a gentle Fire, which had a Sympathetick Power to torment the Bowels of those in the Neighbourhood. This HIL

This was the Sum of what was objected against the Three Ladies, who indeed had nothing to lay in their own Defence, but downright denying the Facts, which is like to avail very little when they come upon their Trials.

But the Parson of our Parish, a strange refractory Man, will believe nothing of all this; so that the whole Town cries out, Shame! That one of his Coat should be such an Atheist? And design to complain of him to the Bishop. He goes about very odly to solve the Matter. He supposes, That the First of these Ladies keeping a Brandy and Tobacco Shop, the Fellows went out smoaking, and got drunk towards Evening, and made themselves Beafts. He fays, The Second is a Butcher's Daughter, and sometimes brings a Quarter of Mutton from the Staughter-houle over Night against a Market-Day, and once buried a Bit of Beef in the Ground, as a known Receipt to cure Warts on her Hands. The Parson affirms, That the Third sells Gingerbread, which, to please the Children, she as forced to stamp with Images before 'tis baked; and if it burns their Guts, his because they ent too much, or do not drink after it.

These are the Answers he gives to solve these wonderful Phænomena; upon which I shall not animadvert, but leave it among Philosophers: And so wishing you all Success in your Undertakings for the Amendment of the World, I remain,

From Saturd. May 28. to Tuesd. May 31. 1709.

White's Chocolate-house, May 28. I Came hither this Evening to fee Fashions, and who should I first encounter but my old Friend Cynthio (encompassed by a Crowd of young Fellows) dictating on the Passion of Love with the gayest Air imaginable. Well, says he,
As to what I know of the Matter, there is nothing but Ogling with Skill carries a Woman; but indeed it is not every Fool that is capable of this Art: You will find Twenty can speak eloquently, Fifty can fight manfully, and a Thousand that can dress genteely at a Mistress, where there is one that can gaze skilfully. This requires an exquisite ' Judgment, to take the Language of her Eyes to yours exactly, and not let yours talk too falt for hers; as at a Play between the Acts, when Beau Frisk stands upon a Bench full in Lindamira's Face, and her dear Eyes are fearthing round to avoid that flaring open Fool; the meets the watchful Glance of her true Lover, and fees his Heart attentive on her Charms, and waiting for a second Twincle of her Eye for its next Motion. Here the good Company fneer'd; but he goes on. Nor is this Attendance a Slavery, when a Man meets Encouragement, and her Eye comes often in his Way: For, after an Evening so spent, and the Repetition of four or five lignificant Looks at him. the happy Man goes Home to his Lodging, full of Ten Thousand pleasing Images: His Brain ' is dilated, and gives him all the Idea's and Profpects which it ever lets in to its Seat of Pleafure. fure. Thus a kind Look from Lindamira revives in his Imagination all the Beauteous Launs, Green Fields, Woods, Forests, Rivers, and Solitudes, which he had ever before feen in Picture, Description, or Real Life : And all with this Addition, that he now fees 'em with the Eyes of an happy Lover, as before only with those of a common Man. You laugh Gentlemen: But confider your felves, (you common People that were never in Love) and compare your felves in good Humour with your felves out of Humour, and you will then acknowledge, that all External Objects affect you according to the Disposition you are in to receive their Impressions, and not as those Objects are in their own Nature. How much more shall all that passes within his View and Obfervation, touch with Delight a Man who is preposies'd with successful Love, which is an Assemblage of fost Affections, gay Defires, and hopeful Resolutions?

Poor Cynthio went on at this Rate to the Crowd about him, without any Purpole in his Talk, but to vent an Heart overflowing with Sense of Succels. I wondered what could exalt him from the Distress in which he had long appear'd, to so much Alacrity. But my Familiar has given me the State of his Affairs. It feems then, that lately coming out of the Play-house, his Mistress, who knows he is in her Livery, as the Manner of infolent Beauties, is resolved to keep him still so, and gave him so much Wages, as to complain to him of the Crowd she was to pass thro'. He had his Wits and Refolution enough about him to take her Hand, and fay, He would attend her to her Coach. All the Way thither, my good young Man stammer'd at every Word, and stumbled at every Step. His Mistress, wonderfully pleased

ons, to make a Man of his natural Wit fpeak with Helitation, and let drop her Fan, to fee him recover it aukwardly. This is the whole Foundation of Cynthio's Recovery to the Spright.

ly Air he appears with at present.

I grew mighty curious to know formething more of that Lady's Affairs, as being amaz'd how the could dally with an Offer of one of his Merit and Fortune. I fent Pacolet to her Lodg. ings, who immediately brought me back the following Letter to her Friend and Confident A manda in the Country, wherein the has open'd her Heart and all its Folds.

Dear Amanda,

HE Town grows fo empty, that you must exme to talk of my self instead of others: You can-not imagine what Pain it is, after a whole Day Ipens in Publick, to want your Company, and the Ease which Friendship allows in being wain to bach other, and speaking all our Minds. An Assount of the Slaughter which thefe unhappy Eyes have made within Ten Days last past, would make me appear too great a Tyrant to be allowed in a Christian Country. I Thall therefore confine my felf to my Principal Conquests, which are the stearts of Beau Frisk, and Jack Freeland, be-fides Cynthio, who, you know, wore my fetters before you went out of Town. Shall I tell you my Weaknes? I begin to love Frisk: It is the best humoured Impertinent Thing in the World : He is always too in waiting, and will certainly carry me off one Time or other. Freeland's Father and mine have been upon Treaty without consulting me; and Cynthio has been eternally watching my Maid, or any one about met. He hopes to get me, I believe, as they fay the Rattle-Snake thet Mouth he th high will Cyn ing ? Vene at bet the Squirrel, by staring at me till I dropinto his Mouth. Freeland demands me for a Jointure which he thinks deserves me; Cynthio thinks nothing high enough to be my Value: Freeland therefore will take it for no Obligation to have me; and Cynthio's Idea of me, is what will vanish by knowing me better. Familiarity will equally turn the Veneration of the one, and the Indifference of the: other, into Contempt. I will flick therefore to my old Maxim, To bave that Sort of Man, who can have no greater Views than what are in my Power to give him Poffession of. The utmost of my Dear Frisk's Ambition is, to be thought a Man of Fashion; and therefore has been fo much in Mode. as to refolve upon me, because the whole Town likes me. Thus I choose rather a Man who loves: me because others do, than one who approves me on his own Judgment. He that judges for him-felf in Love, will often change his Opinion; but he that follows the Senfe of others, must be conflant, as long as a Woman can make Advances: The Vifits I make, the Entertainments I give,. and the Addresses I receive, will be all Arguments for me with a Man of Frisk's second-hand Genius; but would be fo many Bars to my Happiness with any other Man. However, fince Frisk tan wait, I shall enjoy a Summer or Two longer, and remain a single Woman, in the sublime Plea-sure of being followed and admired; which nothing can equal, except that of being beloved by you.

My chief Businels here this Evening was to speak to my Friends in Behalf of honest Gave Underhill, who has been a Comick for Three Generations: My Father admired him extremely when he was a Boy. There is certainly Nature ture excellently represented in his Manner of Action; in which he ever avoided that gene. ral Fault in Players, of doing too much. It must be confess'd, he has not the Merit of some ingenious Persons now on the Stage, of adding to his Authors; for the Actors were fo dull in the last Age, that many of them have gone out of the World, without having ever spoke one Word of their own in the Theatre. Poor Cave is fo mortified, that he quibbles, and tells you, he pretends only to act a Part fit for a Man who has one Foot in the Grave, viz. a Grave-dig. ger. All Admirers of true Comedy, it is hop'd, will have the Gratitude to be present on the last Day of his Acting, who, if he does not happen to please them, will have it even then to fav.

That it is his first Offence.

But there is a Gentleman here, who fays he has it from good Hands, that there is actually a Subscription made by many Persons of Wit and Quality, for the Encouragement of new Comedies. This Delign will very much contribute to the Improvement and Diversion of the Town; But as every Man is most concerned for himfelf, I, who am of a Saturnine and Melancholy Complexion, cannot but murmur, that there is not an equal Invitation to write Tragedies, having by me, in my Book of Common Places, enough to enable me to finish a very Sad one by the Fifth of the next Month. Thave the Farewell of a General, with a Truncheon in his Hand, dying for Love, in Six Lines. I have the Principles of a Politician, (who does all the Mischief in the Play,) together with his Declaration on the Vanity of Ambition in his last Moments, express'd in a Page and an half. have all my Oaths ready, and my Similes want nothing but Application. fame Defign upon which all Tragedies have been writ for feveral Years last past; and from the Beginning of the First Scene, the Frequenters of the House may know, as well as the Author, when the Battle is to be fought, the Lady to yield, and the Hero proceed to his Wedding and Belides these Advantages which Coronation. I have in Readiness, I have an eminent Tragedian very much my Friend, who shall come in, and go through the whole Five Acts, without troubling me for one Sentence, whether he is to kill or be killed, love or be loved, win Battles or lofe them; or whatever other Tragical Performance I shall please to assign him.

From my own Apartment, May 30. I have this Day received a Letter, subscribed Fidelia, that gives me an Account of an Inchantment under which a young Lady fuffers, and defires my Help to exorcife her from the Power of the Sorcerer. Her Lover is a Rake of Sixty; the Lady a virtuous Woman of Twenty five: Her Relations are to the last Degree afflicted, and amazed ar this irregular Paftion: Their Sorrow I know not how to remove, but can their Aftonishment; for there is no Spirit in Woman half fo prevalent as that of Contradiction, which is the fole Cause of her Perseverance. Let the whole Family go dress'd in a Body, and call the Bride to Morrow Morn ing to her Nuptials, and I'll undertake, the Inconstant will forget her Lover in the midst of all his Aches. But if this Expedient does not fuccced, dimust be fol just to the young Lady's dir stinguishing Sense, as to applated her Choice, A fine young Woman, at last, is but what is due from Fare to an honest Fellow, who has suffered so unmercifully by the Sex; and I think we cannot enough relebrate her Heroick Virtue, who (like the Patriot that ended a Pestilence by plunging

White's Chocolate-houfe, May 31. THE Generality of Mankind are fo very fond of this World, and of staying in it, that a Man cannot have eminent Skill in any one Art. but they will, in Spire of his Teeth, make him a Physician also, that being the Science the Worldlings have most need of. I pretended, when I first set up, to Astrology only; but I am told, I have deep Skill also in Medecine. I am applied to now by a Gentleman for my Advice in Behalf of his Wife, who, upon the least Matrimonial Difficulty, is excessively troubled with Fits, and can bear no Manner of Passion without falling into immediate Convulsions. I must confels, it is a Case I have known before; and remember the Party was recovered by certain Words pronounced in the midit of the Fig. by the Learned Doctor who performed the Cure. These Ails have usually their Beginning from the Affections of the Mind: Therefore you must have Patience to let me give you an Instance, whereby you may discern the Cause of the Distemper, and then proceed in the Cure as follows: A fine Town Lady was married to a Gentleman of ancient Descent in one of the Counties of Great Britain, who had good Humour to a Weakness, and was that Sort of Person, of whom it is usually faid, He is no Man's Encmy but his own: One who had too much Tenderness of Soul to have any Authority with his Wife; and the too little Sense to give him Authority for that Reason. His kind Wife observed this Temper in him, and made proper Use of it. But knowing it was below a Gentlewoman to wrangle, the refolved upon an Expedient to fave Decorum, and wear her Dear to her Point at the fame Time. She therefore took upon her to govern him, by falling into Fits whenever the was repulsed in a Request, or contradicted in a Difcourse. It was a Fish-Day, when in the midst of her Husband's good Humour at Table, fire bethought her felf to try her Project. She made Signs that fhe had fwallowed a Bone. The Man grew pale as Ashes, and ran to her Assistance, calling for Drink. No, my Dear, faid the, recovering, It is down; don't be frightened. This Accident betrayed his Softness enough. The next Day she complained, a Lady's Chariot. whose Husband had not half his Estate, had a Crane-Neck, and hung with twice the Air thathers did. He answered, Madam, You know my Income, you know I have lost Two Coach-Horses this Spring .- Down she fell .-- Harrsborn! Betry, Sufan, Alice, throw Water in ber-Face. With much Care and Pains the was at last brought to her felf, and the Vehicle in which the vilited was amended in the nicelt Manner, to prevent Relapses; but they frequently happen'd during that Husband's whole Life, which he had the good Fortune to end in few Years after. The Disconsolate soon pitched upon a very agreeable Successor, whom the very prudently deligned to govern by the same Method. This Man knew her little Arts, and refolved to break through all While every Servant was thus helping or lamenting their Mistress, he, fixing his Cheek to hers, seemed to be following her in a Trance of Sorrow; but fecretly whispers her, My Dear, This will never do: What is within my Power and Fortune, you may always command, but none of your Artifices : You are quite in other Hands than those you passed these pretty Passions upon. This made her almost in the Condition she pretended; her Convultions now come thicker, nor was the to be held down. The kind Man doubles his Care, helps the Servants to throw Water in her Face by full Quarts; and when the finking Part of the Fit came again, Well, my Dear, (faid he) I appland your Action; but I must take my Leave of you till you are more sincere with me. London, May 31.

Isaac Bickerstaff Efq; of Great Britain, to Lewis

THE furprising News which arrived this Day, of your Majesty's having refused to sign the Treaty your Ministers have in a Manner such for, is what gives Ground to this Application to your Majesty, from one whose Name, perhaps, is too obscure to have ever reached your Territories; but one, who with all the European World, is affected with your Determinations. Therefore, it is mine and the common Cause of Mankind, I prefume to expoltulate with you on this Occasion. It will, I doubt not, appear to the Vulgar extravagant, that the Actions of a mighty Prince should be ballanced by the Censure of a private Man, whose Approbation or Dislike are equally contemptible in their Eyes, when they regard the Thrones of Sovereigns. But your Majesty has shown, through the whole Course of your Reign, too great a Value for Liberal Arts to be infentible, that true Fame lies only in the Hands of Learned Men, by whom it is to be transmitted to Futurity, with Marks of Honour or Reproach to the End of Time. The Date of Humane Life is too short to recompence the Cares which attend the most private Condition: Therefore it is, that our Souls are made as it were too big for it, and extend themselves in the Prospect of a longer Existence, in a good Fame and Memory of worthy Actions after our Decease. The whole Race of Men have this Paffion in fome Degree implanted in their Bofoms, which is the Itrongest and noblest Incitation to honest Attempts; But the base Use of the Arts of Peace, Eloquence, Poetry, and all the Parts of Learning, have been possessed by Souls fo unworthy those Faculties, that the Names and Appellations of Things have been confounded by the Labours and Writings of prostiruted Men, who have stamp'd a Reputation upon fuch Actions, as are in themselves the Objects of Contempt and Difgrace. This is that which has missed your Majesty in the Conduct of your Reign, and made that Life, which might have been the most imitable, the most to be avoided. To this it is, that the great and excellent Qualities of which your Majesty is Master, are loft in their Application; and your Majeft has been carrying on for many Years the most cruel Tyranny, with all the noble Methods which are used to support a just Reign. Thus it is, that it avails nothing that you are a Bountiful Malter: that you are fo Generous as to reward even the Unfuccessful with Honour and Riches; that no laudable Action passes unrewarded in your Kingdoms; that you have fearched all Nations for obscure Merit. In a Word, that you are in your private Character endowed with every Princely Quality, when all this is subjected to unjust and ill-taught Ambition, which to the Injury of the World, is gilded by those Endowments. However, if your Majesty will-condescend to look into your own Soul, and confider all its Faculties and Weaknefles with Impartiality; if you will but be convinced, that Life is supported in you by the ordinary Methods of Food, Reft, and Sleep; you would think it impossible that you could ever be fo much imposed on, as to have been wrought into a Belief, that so many Thoufands of the same Make with your felf, were formed by Providence for no other End, but by the Hazard of their very Being to extend the Conquests and Glory of an Individual of their own Species. A very little Reflection will conwince your Majesty, that such cannot be the Intent of the Creator; and if not, What Horror must it give your Majesty to think of the wast Devastations your Ambition has made among your Fellow-Creatures? While the Warmth of Youth, the Flattery of Crowds, and a continual Series of Success and Triumph, indulged your Majesty in this Allusion of Mind, it was less to be wondered at, that you proceeded in this mistaken Pursuit of Grandeur; but when Age, Disappointments, Publick Calamities, Personal Distempers, and the Reverse of all that makes Men forget their true Being, are fallen upon you: Heavens! Is it possible you can live with-Dur out out Remorfe? Can the wretched Man be a Tyrant? Can Grief study Torments? Can Sorrow be Cruel?

Your Majesty will observe, I do not bring against you a railing Accusation; but as you are a strict Professor of Religion, I befeech your Majefty to ftop the Effusion of Blood, by receiving the Opportunity which preferrs it felf, for the Preservation of your distressed People. Be no longer fo infatuated, as to hope for Renown from Murder and Violence: But confider, that the Great Day will come, in which this World and all its Glory shall change in a Moment: When Nature shall sicken, and the Earth and Sea give up the Bodies committed to them, to appear before the last Tribunal. Will it then, Oh King! be an Answer for the Lives of Millions who have fallen by the Sword ? They perished for my Glory. That Day will come on, and one like it is immediately approaching; Injur'd Nations advance to-wards thy Habitation: Vengeance has began its March, which is to be diverted only by the Penitence of the Oppressor. Awake, O Monarch, from thy Lethargy! Disdain the Abuses thou haft received: Pull down the Statue which calls thee Immortal: Be truly Great: Tear thy Purple, and put on Sackcloth. I am

From Thursday June 2. to Saturday June 4. 1709.

White's Chocolate-house, June 2. N my Paper of the 28th of the last Month, I mentioned several Characters which want Explanation to the Generality of Readers: A. mong others, I spoke of a Pretty Fellow. I have fince received a kind Admonition in a Letter, to take Care that I do not omit to show also what is meant by a very Pretty Fellow, which is to be allowed as a Character by it felf, and a Person exalted above the other by a peculiar Sprightliness; as one who, by a distinguishing Vigour, outstrips his Companions, and has thereby deferved and obtained a particular Appellation, or Nick-name of Familiarity. Some have this Distinction from the Fair Sex, who are so generous as to take into their Protection such as are laughed at by the Men, and place them for that Rea fon in Degrees of Favour.

The chief of this Sort is Colonel Brunett, who is a Man of Fashion, because he will be so; and practises a very janty Way of Behaviour, because he is too careless to know when he offends, and too sanguine to be mortissed if he did know it. Thus the Colonel has met with a Town ready to receive him, and cannot possibly see why he should not make use of their Favour, and set himself in the First Degree of Conversation. Therefore he is very successfully loud among the Wits, samiliar among the Ladies, and dissolute among the Rakes. Thus he is admitted in one Place, because he is so in another; and every Man treats Brunett well, not out of his particular Esteem for him, but in Respect to the Opinion of others. It is to me a solid Pleasure to see the World thus mistaken on the good-natur'd Side; for 'tis Ten to One but the Colonel mounts into a General Officer, marries a fine Lady, and is Master of a good Estate, before they come to explain upon him. What gives most Delight to me in this Observation, is, that all this arises from pure Nature, and the Colonel can account for his Success no more than those by whom he succeeds. For these Causes and Considerations, I pronounce him a true Woman's Man, and in the first Degree, A very pretty Fellow.

The next to a Man of this universal Genius, is one who is peculiarly formed for the Service of the Ladies, and his Merit chiefly is to be of no Consequence. Tam indeed a little in Doubt, Whether he ought not rather to be called a very Happy, than a very Pretty Fellow? For he is admitted at all Hours: All he fays or does, which would offend in another, are passed over in him; and all Actions and Speeches which please, doubly please if they come from him: No one wonders or takes Notice when he's wrong; but all admire him when he's in the Right. -- By the Way it is fit to remark, That there are People of better Sense than these, who endeavour at this Character; but they are out of Nature; and tho', with fome Industry, they get the Characters of Fools, they cannot arrive to be very, seldom to be meerly Pretty Fellows. But where Nature has formed a Person for this Station amongst Men, he is gifted with a peculiar Genius for Success, and his very Errors and Absurdities contribute to it; this Felicity attending him to his Life's End. For it being in a Manner necessary that he should be of no Consequence, he is as well in old Age as Youth; and I know a Man, whose Son has been some Years a pretty Fellow, who is himself at this Hour a very Pretty Fellow.

One must move renderly in this Place, for we are now in the Ladies Lodgings, and speaking of fuch as are supported by their Influence and Favour; against which there is not, neither ought there to be, any Dispute or Observation. But when we come into more free Air, one may talk a little more at large.

Give me Leave then to mention Three, whom I do not doubt but we shall see make considerable Figures; and their are fuch as, for their Bacchanalian Performances, must be admitted into this Order. They are Three Brothers lately landed from Holland: As yet, indeed, they have not made their publick Entry, but lodge and converse at Wapping. They have merited already on the Water-fide particular Titles : The First is called Hogshead; the Second, Culverin; and the Third, Musquet. This Fraternity is preparing for our End of the Town by their Ability in the Exercises of Bacchus, and measure their Time and Merit by Liquid Weight, and Power of Drinking. Hoghead is a prettier Fellow than Culverin by Two Quarts, and Culverin than Mulquet by a full Pint. It is to be feared, Hoghead is fo often too full, and Culvenin over-loaded, that Mulquet will be the only lasting very Pretty Fellow of the

A Third Sort of this Denomination are such as, by very daring Adventurers in Love, have purchased to themselves Renown and new Names; as, Jo. Carry, for his excessive Strength and Vigour; Tom Drybones, for his generous Lois of Youth and Health; and Cancrum, for his meritorious Rottennels.

These great and leading Spirits are proposed to all fuch of our British Youth as would arrive at Perfection in these different Kinds; and if their Parts and Accomplishments were well imitated, it is not doubted but that our Nation would 265 1 would foon excell all others in Wit and Arts, as they already do in Arms.

N. B. The Gentleman who stole Betty Pepin. may own it, for he is allowed to be a very Pretty Fellow.]

But we must proceed to the Explanation of other Terms in our Writings.

To know what a Toast is in the Country, gives as much Perplexity as the her felf does in Town !: And indeed, the Learned differ very much upon the Original of this Word, and the Acceptation of it among the Moderns. However, it is by all agreed to have a joyous and chearful Import. A Toast in a cold Morning, heightened by Nutmeg, and fweeten'd with Sugar, has for many Ages been given to our Rural Dispensers of Juffice, before they enter'd upon Causes, and has been of great and politick Use to take off the Severity of their Sentences; but has indeed been remarkable for one ill Effect, That it inclines those who use it immoderately, to speak Latin, to the Admiration, rather than Information, of an Audience. This Application of a Toast makes it very obvious, that the Word may, without a Metaphor, be understood as an apt Name for a Thing which raises us in the most sovereign Degree. But many of the Wits of the last Age will affert, That the Word, in its present Sente, was known among them in their Youth, and had its Rife from an Accident at the Town of Bath, in the Reign of King Charles the Second.

It happened, that on a Publick Day a celebrated Beauty of those Times was in the Cross-Bath. and one of the Crowd of her Admirers took a Glass of the Water in which the Fair One stood and drank her Health to the Company. There was in the Place a Gay Fellow, half fuddled, who offered to jump in, and fwore, Tho he liked not the Liquor, he would have the Toaft. He was opposed in his Resolution; yet this Whim gave Foundation to the present Honour which is done to the Lady we mention in our Liquors, who has ever fince been called a Toaft.

Tho' this Institution had so trivial a Beginning, it is now elevated into a formal Order; and that happy Virgin who is received and drank to at their Meetings, has no more to do in this Life, but to judge and accept of the first good Offer. The Manner of her Inauguration is much like that of the Choice of a Doge in Venice: It is performed by Ballotting; and when the is to chofen, the reigns indisputably for that enfuing Year; but must be elected anew to prolong her Empire a Moment beyond it. When the is regularly chofen, her Name is written with a Diamond on a Drinking-glass. The Hieroglyphick of the Diamond is to show her, that her Value is imaginary; and that of the Glass to acquaint her, that her Condition is frail, and depends on the Hand which holds her. This wife delign admonishes her, neither to over-rate or depreciate her Charms; as well confidering and applying, that it is perfectly according to the Humour and Tast of the Company, whether the Toast is eaten, or left as an Offal.

The Foremost of the whole Rank of Toasts. and the most undisputed in their present Empire, are Mrs. Gatty and Mrs. Frontlet: The First an Agreeable, the Second an Awful Beauty. These Ladies are perfect Friends, out of a Knowledge, that their Perfections are too different to stand in Competition. He that likes Gatty, can have no Relish for so solemn a Creature as Frontlet; and an Admirer of Frontlet, will call Gatty a Maypole Girl. Gatty for ever smiles upon you; and Prontlet disdains to see you smile. Gatty's Love is a shining quick Flame; Frontler's a flow wasting Fire. Gatty likes the Man that diverts her; Frontlet him who adores her. Gatty always improves the Soil in which the travels; Frontlet lays waite the Country. Gatty does not only smile, but laughs at her Lover; Frontlet not only looks serious, but frowns at him. All the Mea of Wit, (and Coxcombs their Followers) are professed Servants of Gatty: The Politicians and Pretenders give solemn Worship to Frontlet. Their Reign will be best judged of by its Duration. Frontlet will never be chosen more; and Gatty is a Toast for Life.

St. James's Coffee-house, June 3.

Letters from Hamburgh of the 7th Instant, N. S. inform us, That no Art or Cost is omitted to make the Stay of his Danish Majesty at Dresden agreeable; but there are various Speculations upon the Interview between King Augustus and that Prince, many putting Politick Constructions upon his Danish Majesty's Arrival, ar a Time when his Troops are marching out of Hungary, with Orders to pass through Saxony, where it is given out, that they are to be recruited. It is faid also, That several Polish Senators have invited K. Augustus to return into Poland. His Majesty of Sweden, according to the same Advices, has passed the Nieper without any Oppolition from the Mufcovites, and advances with all possible Expedition towards Volbinia, where he proposes to join King Stanistaus and General Cressau.

We hear from Bern of the 1st Instant, N. S. That there is not a Province in France, from whence the Court is not apprehensive of receiving Accounts of Publick Emotions, occasion'd by the Want of Corn. The General Diet of the 13 Cantons is assembled at Baden, but have not yet entered upon Business, so that the Affair of Tocken-

Letters from the Hague, dated the 11th Instant N. S. advise, That Monsieur Rouille having acquainted the Ministers of the Allies, that his Ma. fter had refused to ratify the Preliminaries of a Treary adjusted with Monfieur Torcy, fer out for Paris on Sunday Morning. The same Day the Foreign Ministers met a Committee of the States General, where Monfieur van Heffen opened the Butiness upon which they were assembled, and in a very warm Discourse laid before them the Conduct of France in the late Negotiations, representing the abject Manner in which the had laid open her own Diftresses, that reduced her to a Compliance with the Demands of all the Allies, and her Meannesses in receding from those Points to which Monfieur Torcy had consented. The respective Ministers of each Potentate of the Alliance severally expressed their Resentment of the faithless Behaviour of the French; and gave each other mutual Affurances of the Constancy and Resolution of their Principals, to proceed with the utmost Vigour against the common Enemy. His Grace the Duke of Marlborough fer out from the Hague on the 9th in the Afternoon, and lay that Night at Rotterdam, from whence at Four the next Morning he proceeded towards Antwerp, with a Defign to reach Ghent the next Day. All the Troops in the Low-Countries are in Motion towards the general Rendezvous between the Scheld and the Lis, the whole Army will be formed on the 12th Instant; and 'tis said, That on the 14th hey will advance towards the Enemy's Country. In the mean Time, the Mareschal de Villars has affembled the French Forces between Lens, la Baffee, and Donay.

Yesterday Morning Sir John Norris, with the Squadron under his Command, failed from the Downer for Holland.

The TATLER. [N° 25.

From Saturday June 4. to Tuesday June 7. 1709.

The Tarley,

White's Chocolate house, June 6. Letter from a young Lady, written in the most passionate Terms, wherein the laments the Misfortune of a Gentleman, her Lover, who was lately wounded in a Duel, has turned my Thoughts to that Subject, and enclined me to examine into the Causes which precipitate Men into fo fatal a Folly. And as it has been propofed to treat of Subjects of Gallantry in the Article from hence, and no one Point in Nature is more proper to be consider'd by the Company who frequent this Place than that of Duels, it is worth our Confideration to examine into this Chimærical groundless Humour, and to lay every other Thought atide, till we have strip'd it of all its false Pretences to Credit and Reputation amongst Men.

But I must confess, when I consider what I am going about, and run over in my Imagination all the endless Crowd of Men of Honour who will be offended at such a Discourse; I am undertaking, methinks, a Work worthy an invulnerable Hero in Romance, rather than a private Gentleman with a single Rapier: But as I am pretty well acquainted by great Opportunities with the Nature of Man, and know of a Truth, that all Men sight against their Will, the Danger vanishes, and Resolution rises upon this Subject. For this Reason I shall talk very freely on a Custom which all Men wish exploded, though no Man has Courage enough to resist it.

But there is one unintelligible Word which I fear will extremely perplex my Differtation; and

I confess to you I find very hard to explain, which is, the Term Satisfaction. An honest Country Gentleman had the Misfortune to fall into Company with Two or Three modern Men of Honour, where he happened to be very ill treated; and one of the Company being conscious of his Offence, sends a Note to him in the Morning, and tells him, He was ready to give him Satisfaction. This is fine Doing (says the plain Fellow). Last Night he sent me away cursedly out of Humour, and this Morning he fancies it would be a Satisfaction to be run through the Body.

As the Matter at present stands, it is not to do handsome Actions denominates a Man of Honours it is enough if he dares to defend ill Ones. Thus. you often see a common Sharper in Competition with a Gentleman of the fuff Rank; though all Mankind is convinced, that a fighting Gamester is only a Pick-pocket with the Courage of an Highway-Man. One cannot with any Patience reflect on the unaccountable Jumble of Persons and Things in this Town and Nation, which occalions very frequently, that a brave Man falls by a Hand below that of the common Hangman, and yet his Executioner escapes the Clutches of the Hangman for doing it. I shall therefore hereafter confider, how the bravest Men in other Ages and Nations have behaved themselves upon such Incidents as we decide by Combat; and show, from their Practice, that this Refentment neither has its Foundation from true Reason, or solid Fame; but is an Imposture, made up of Cowardice, Falshood, and Want of Understanding. For this Work, a good History of Quarrels would be very edifying to the Publick, and I apply my felt to the Town for Particulars and Circumstances within their Knowledge, which may ferve to embellish the Dissertation with proper Cuts. Most of the Quarrels I have ever known, have have proceeded from some valiant Coxcomb's perfishing in the Wrong; to defend some prevailing Folly, and preserve himself from the Ingenuity of owning a Miftake.

By this Means it is called, Giving a Man Satisfaction, to urge your Offence against him with your Sword; which puts me in Mind of Peter's Order to the Keeper, in The Tale of a Tub: If you neglect to do all this, damn you and your Generation for ever; and so we bid you heartily farewel. If the Contradiction in the very Terms of one of our Challenges were as well explained, and turn'd into downright English, would it not run after this Manner?

SIR;

Your extraordinary Behaviour last Night, and the Liberty you were pleased to take with me, makes me this Morning give you this, to tell you, because you are an ill-bred Puppy, I will meet you in Hide-Park an Hour hence; and because you want both Breeding and Humanity, I delire you would come with a Pistol in your Hand, on Horseback, and endeavour to shoot me through the Head; to teach you more Manners. If you fail of doing me this Pleasure, I shall say, You are a Rascal on every Post in Town: And so, Sir, if you will not injure me more, I shall never forgive what you have done already. Pray Sir, do not fail of getting every Thing ready, and you will infinitely oblige,

S. I.R.

Your most Obedient, Humble Servant, &c.

Among the many Employments I am necessarily put upon by my Friends, that of giving Advice rice is the most unwelcome to me; and indeed. cam forced to use a little Art in the Matter : for ome People will ask Counsel of you, when they have already acted what they tell you is still under Deliberation: I had almost lost a very good Friend t'other Day, who came to know how I liked his Defign to marry fuch a Lady. I anfwered, By no Means; and I must be positive against it, for very solid Reasons, which are not proper to communicate. Not proper to communicate! (faid he with a grave Air) I will know the Bottom of this. I faw him moved, and knew from thence he was already determined; therefore evaded it by faying, To tell you the Truth, dear Frank, Of all Women living, I would have her my felf. Isaac, faid he, Thou art too late: for we have been both one these two Months.

I learned this Caution by a Gentleman's confulting me formerly about his Son. He railed at his damn'd Extravagance, and told me, In a very little Time, he would beggar him by the exorbitant Bills which came from Oxford every Quarter. Make the Rogue bite upon the Bridle, say I, pay none of his Bills, it will but encourage him to further Trespasses. He look'd plaguy sowr at me. His Son soon after sent me up a Paper of Verses, forsooth, in Print, on the last publick Occasion; upon which, he is convinced the Boy has Parts, and a Lad of Spirit is not to be too much cramp'd in his Maintenance, less the take ill Courses. sainly to be chosen. Then you are to be very clear and positive; leave no Handle for Scrupic. Bless me! Sir, there's no Room for a Question, This rivers you into his Heart; for you at once applaud his Wildom, and gratify his Inclination. However, I had too much Bowels to be infincere to a Man who came Yesterday to know of me, With which of two eminent Men in the City he should place his Son? Their Names are Pauls and Avare. This gave me much Debate with my felf, because not only the Fortune of the Youth, but his Virtue also, depended upon this Choice. The Men are equally wealthy; but they differ in the Use and Application of their Riches, which you immediately fee upon entring

The Habitation of Paulo has at once the Air of a Nobleman and a Merchant. You fee the Servants act with Affection to their Master, and Satisfaction in themselves: The Master meets you with an open Countenance, full of Benevolence and Integrity: Your Business is dispatched with that Confidence and Welcome which always accompanies honest Minds: His Table is the Image of Plenty and Generofity, supported by Justice and Frugality. After we had dined here, our Affair was to visit Avare : Out comes an aukward Fellow with a careful Countenance; Sir, Would you speak with my Master? May I crave your Name? After the first Preambles, he leads us into a noble Solitude, a great House that seem'd uninhabited; but from the End of the spacious Hall moves towards us Avara; with a suspicious Aspect, as if he believed us Thieves; and as for my Part, I approached him as if I knew him a Cut-purse. We fell into Discourse of his noble Dwelling, and the Great Estate all the World knew he had to enjoy in it : And I, to plague him, fell a commending Paulo's Way of Living. Paulo, answered Avaro, is a very good Man; but we who have smaller Estates. must cut our Coat according to our Cloth. Nay. fays I, Every Man knows his own Circumstance best; you are in the Right, if you han't wherewithal. He look'd very fowr; (for it is, your must know, the utmost Vanity of a mean-spirited rich Man to be contradicted, when he calls himself Poor.) But I was resolved to vex him. by confenting to all he faid; the main Defign of which was, that he would have us find out. he was one of the wealthiest Men in London. and lived like a Beggar. We left him, and took a Turn on the Change. My Friend was ravished with Avaro: This (faid he) is certainly a fure Man. I contradicted him with much Warmth, and summed up their different Characters as well as I could. This Paulo (faid I) grows wealthy by being a common Good; Avaro, by being a general Evil: Paulo has the Art, Avaro the Craft of Trade. When Paulo gains, all Men he deals with are the better : Whenever Avare profits, another certainly loses. In a Word, Paulo is a Citizen, and Avaro a Cit. I convinced my Friend, and carried the young Gentleman the next Day to Paulo, where he will learn the Way both to gain, and enjoy a good Fortune. And the I cannot fay, I have, by keeping him from Avaro, faved him from the Gallows, I have prevented his deferving it every Day he lives: For with Paulo he will be an honest Man, without being fo for Fear of the Law; as with Avaro, he would have been a Villain within the Protection of it.

Duke of Wolfembattel, was returned thither. That Minister brought an Account, That Major. General Stanhope, with the Troops which embarked at Naples, was returned to Barcelona. We hear from Berlin, by Advices of the 8th Instant, That his Prussian Majesty had received Intelligence from his Minister at Dresden, that the King of Denmark defired to meet his Majesty at Magdeburg. The King of Prussia has fent Answer, That his present Indisposition will not admit of fo great a Journey; but has fent the King a very preffing Invitation to come to Berlin or Potsdam, These Advices say, That the Minister of the King of Sweden has produced a Letter from his Master to the King of Poland, dated from Batitzan the 30th of March, O. S. wherein he acquaints him, that he has been successful against the Muscovites in all the Occasions which have happened fince his March into their Country. Great Numbers have revolted to the Swedes fince General Mazeppa went over to that Side; and as many as have done so, have taken solemn Oaths to adhere to the Interests of his Swedish Majesty.

Advices from the Hague of the 14th Instant, N. S. say, That all Things tended to a vigorous and active Campagne; the Allies having strong Resentments against the late Behaviour of the Court of France; and the French using all possible Endeavours to animate their Men to defend their Country against a victorious and exasperated Enemy. Monsieur Rouille had passed through Brussels without visiting either the Duke of Marlborough or Prince Eugene, who were both there at that Time. The States have met, and publickly declared their Satisfaction in the Conduct of their Deputies during the whole Treaty. Letters from France say, That the Court is resolved to put all to the Issue of the ensuing Campagne. In the mean Time, they have ordered the Preliminary Treaty to be published, with Observation upon each Article, in order to quiet the Minds of the People, and perswade them, that it has not been in the Power of the King to procure a Peace, but to the Diminution of his Majesty's Glory, and the Hazard of his Dominions. His Grace the Duke of Manlborough and Prince Eugene arrived at Ghent on Wednesday last, where, at an Assembly of all the General Officers, it was thought proper, by Reason of the great Rains which have lately fallen, to defer forming a Camp, or bringing the Troops together; but as soon as the Weather would permit, to march upon the Enemy with all Expedition.

Cam-

I have compounded Two or Three Rapes; and let out to Hire as many Bastards to Beggars. I never saw above the First Act of a Play: And as to my Courage, it is well known, I have more than once had fufficient Witnesses of my drawing my Sword both in Tavern and Playhouse. Dr. Wall is my particular Friend; and if it were any Service to the Publick to compose the Difference between Martin and Sintilaer the Pearl-driller, I don't know a Judge of more Experience than my felf: For in that I may fay with the Poet;

But my Reason for troubling you at this present is, to put a Stop, if it may be, to an infinuating, increasing Set of People, who sticking to the Letter of your Treatife, and not to the Spirit of it, do assume the Name of Pretty Fellows; nay, and even get new Names, as you very well hint. Some of them I have heard calling to one ano-ther as I have fate at White's and St. James's, by the Names of, Betty, Nelly, and fo forth. fee them accost each other with effeminate Airs: They have their Signs and Tokens like Free-Mafons: They rail at Womenkind; receive Vifits on their Beds in Gowns, and do a Thouland other unintelligible Prettinesses that I cannot tell what to make of. 'There is another Matter I am forefeeing an ill Consequence from, but may be timely prevented by Prudence; which is, that for the last Formight, prodigious Shoals of Volunteers have gone over to bully the French, upon hearing the , Peace was just figning; and this is fo true, that , I can affure you, all Ingroffing Work about the . Temple is rifen above 3 s. in the Pound for want of Hands. Now as 'tis possible, some little Alteration of Affairs may have broken their Meafures, and that they will post back again, I am , under the last Apprehension, that these will, at their Return, all fet up for Pretty Fellows, and thereby confound all Merit and Service, and impole on us some new Alteration in our Nightcap-Wigs and Pockets, unless you can provide a particular Class for them. I cannot apply my , felf better than to you, and I am fure I fpeak the Mind of a very great Number as deferving as my felf.

The Pretensions of this Correspondent are worthy a particular Distinction: He cannot indeed be admitted as a Pretty, but is, what we most justly call, a Smart Fellow. Never to pay at the Playhouse, is an Act of Frugality that lets you into his Character; and his Expedient in lending his Children a begging before they can go, are Characteristical Instances that he belongs to this Class. I never faw the Gentleman; but I know by his Letter, he hangs his Cane on his Button; and by some Lines of it, he should wear red-heel'd Shoes; which are essential Parts of the Habit belonging to the Order of Smart Fellows.

Lewis the Fourteenth, to Isaac Bickerstaff Esq:

SIR

Have your Epistle, and must take the Liberry to say, That there has been a Time, when there were Generous Spirits in Great Britain, who would not have fuffer'd my Name to be treated with the Familiarity you think he to use. " I thought Liberal Men would not be fuch Timefervers, as to fall upon a Man because his Friends are not in Power. But having fome Concern for what you may transmit to Posterity concerning me, I am willing to keep Terms with you, and make a Request to you, which is, That you would give my Service to the Nineteenth " Century, (if ever you or yours reach to them) and tell them, That I have fettled all Matters between them and me by Monfieur Beileau. I fhould be glad to fee your here.

It is very odd this Prince should offer to invite me into his Dominions, or believe I should accept the Invitation. No, no, I remember too well how he served an ingenious Gentleman, a Friend of mine, whom he locked up in the Baftile for no Reason in the World, but because he was a Wit, and feared he might mention him with Justice in fome of his Writings. His Way is, That all Men of Sense are preferred, banished, or imprisoned. He has indeed a Sort of Justice in him, like that of the Gamesters; for it a Stander-by sees one at Play cheat, he has a Right to come in for Shares, as knowing the Mysteries of the Game.

This is a very wife and just Maxim; and if I have not left at Mr. Morphew's, directed to me, Bank Bills for 2001. on or before this Day Sevennight, I shall tell how Tom Cash got his Estate.

Lexpect

Lexpect Three Hundred Pounds of Mr. Soilett. for concealing all the Money he has lent to himfelf, and his Landed Friend bound with him, at Thirty per Gent. at his Scrivener's. Absolute Princes make People pay what they please in Deference to their Power: I do not know why I should not do the same, out of Fear or Respect to my Knowledge. I always preferve Decorums and Civilities to the Fair Sex : Therefore if a certain Lady, who left her Coach at the New-Exchange Door in the Strand, and whipe down Durham-Yard into a Boat with a young Gentleman for Fox-Hall; I fay, if the will fend me Word, that I may give the Fan which the drop'd, and I found, to my Sifter Jenny, there shall be no more said of it. I expect Hush-Money to be regularly fent for every Folly or Vice any one commits in this whole Town; and hope, I may pretend to deserve it better than a Chamber-Maid, or Valet de Chambre: They only whisper it to the little Set of their Companions; but I can tell it to all Men living, or who are to live. Therefore I delire all my Readers to pay their Fines, or mend their Lives.

White's Chocolate-house, June 8.

My Familiar being come from France, with an Answer to my Letter to Lewis of that Kingdom, instead of going on in a Discourse of what he had seen in that Court, he put on the immediate Concern of a Guardian, and fell to enquiring into my Thoughts and Adventures tince his sourney. As short as his Stay had been, I confess a I had had many Occasions for his Assistance in my Conduct; but communicated to him my Thoughts of putting all my Force against the horrid and sensels Custom of Duels; If it were possible, said he, to laugh at Things in themselves so deeply Tragical as the impertinent Profusion of Humane Life, I think I could divert divert you with a Figure I faw just after my Deat when the Philosopher threw me, as I told yo fome Days ago, into the Pail of Water.

"You are to know, That when Men leave th Body, there are Receptacles for them affor as they depart, according to the Manner which they lived and died. At the very Inflan that I was killed, there came away with me Spirit which had loft its Body in a Duel. We were both examined. Me, the whole Affen bly looked at with Kindness and Pity, but a the fame Time with an Air of Welcome, an Consolation: They pronounced me very happy, who had died in Innocence; and rold me, i quite different Place was allotted to me, the that which was appointed for my Companion; * there being a great Distance from the Mansion of Fools and Innocents: Tho'at the fame Time, · faid one of the Ghosts, there is a great Affinity between an Idiot who has been fo for long Life, and a Child who departs before Maturity. But this Gentleman who has arrived with you is a " Fool of his own making, is ignorant out of " Choice, and will fare accordingly. The Affembly began to flock about him, and one faid to him, Sir, I observed you came into the Gate of Per-fons murdered, and I desire to know, What brought you to your untimely End? He faid, He had been a Second. Socrates (who may be fail to have been murdered by the Commonwealth of Athens) stood by, and began to draw near 4 him, in order, after his Manner, to lead him into a Sense of his Error by Concessions in his own Discourse. Sir, said that Divine and Amicable Spirit, What was the Quarrel? He answered, We shall know very suddenly, when the Principal in the Business comes, for he was desperately wounded before I fell. ed, I have left it in a very good Condition, and made my Will the Night before this Occasion. Did you read it before you fign'd it? Yes fure, Sir, faid the new Comer. Secrates replies, Could a Man that would not give his Estate without reading the Instrument, dispose of his Life without asking a Question? That illustrious Shade turned from him, and a Crowd of impertinent Goblins, who had been Droles and Paralites in their Life-time, and were knock'd on the Head for their Sawciness, came about my Fellow-Traveller, and made themselves very merry with Questions about the Words Cart and Terce, and other Terms of Fencers. But his Thoughts began to settle into Reflection upon the Adventure which had robbed him of his late Being; and with a wretched Sigh, faid he, How terrible are Conviction and Guilt when they come too tate for Penitence !

Pacolet was going on in this Strain, but he recovered from it, and told me, " It was too foon to give my Discourse on this Subject so serious a Turn; you have chiefly to do with that Part of Mankind which must be led into Reflection by Degrees, and you must treat this Custom with Humour and Raillery to get an Audience, before you come to pronounce Sentence upon it. There is Foundation enough for railing such Entertainments from the Practice on this Occafion. Don't you know, that often a Man is called out of Bed to follow implicitly a Coxcomb (with whom he would not keep Company on any other Occasion) to Ruin and Death ?- Then a good Lift of fuch as are qualified by the Laws of these uncourteous Men of Chivalry to enter into Combat (who are often Persons of Honour without common Honesty): These, I fay, ranged and drawn up in their proper Order, would give an Avertion to doing any Thing in com-

But to go through this Work, you must not let your Thoughts vary, or make Excursions from your Theme: Consider at the same Time, that the Matter has been often treated by the ablest and greatest Writers; yet that must not disencourage you; for the properest Person to handle it, is one who has roved into mix'd Conversations, and must have Opportunities (which I shall give you) of seeing these Sort of Men in their Pleasures and Gratifications; among which, they pretend to reckon Fighting. It was pleasantly enough said of a Bully in France,

White's Chocolate-house, June 9.

Pacoler being gone a strolling among the Men of the Sword, in order to find out the secret Canses of the frequent Disputes we med with, and furnish me with Materials for my Treatise on Duelling; I have Room lest to go on in my Information to my Country Readers, whereby they may understand the bright People whose Memoirs I have taken upon me to write. But in my Discourse of the 28th of the last Month, I omitted to mention the most agreeable of all bad Characters; and that is, a Rake.

A Rake is a Man always to be pitied; and if he lives, is one Day certainly reclaimed; for his Faults proceed not from Choice or Inclination, but from ftrong Passions and Appetites. which are in Youth too violent for the Curb of Reason, good Sense, good Manners, and good Nature: All which he must have by Nature and Education, before he can be allowed to be. or have been of this Order. He is a poor unweildy Wretch, that commits Faults out of the Redundance of his good Qualities. His Pity and Compassion makes him sometimes a Bub-ble to all his Fellows, let 'em be never so much below him in Understanding. His Desires run away with him through the Strength and Force of a lively Imagination, which hurries him on to unlawful Pleasures, before Reason has Power to come in to his Rescue. Thus, with all the good Intentions in the World to Amendment, this Creature fins on against Heaven, himself, his Friends, and his Country, who all call for a better Use of his Talents. There is not a Being under the Sun fo miferable as this: He goes on in a Pursuit he himfelf disapproves, and has no Enjoyment but what is followed by Remorfe; no Relief from Remorfe, but the Repetition of his Crime. It's possible I may talk of this Person with too much Indulgence; but I must repeat it, that I think this, a Character which is the most the Object of Pity of any in the World. The Man in the Pangs of the Stone, Gout, or any acute Distem-pers, is not in so deplorable a Condition in the Eye of right Sense, as he that errs and repents, and repents and errs on. The Fellow with broken Limbs justly deserves your Alms for his impotent Condition; but he that can't use his own Reason, is in a much worse State; for you fee him in miserable Circumstances, with his Remedy at the same Time in his own Possession, if he would or could use it. This is the Cause, that that of all ill Characters, the Rake has the best Quarter in the World; for when he is himself. and unruffled with Intemperance, you see his natural Faculties exert themselves, and attract an Eye of Favour towards his Infirmities.

But if we look round us here, how many dull Rogues are there, that would fain be what this poor Man hates himself for? All the Noise towards Six in the Evening, is caused by his Mimicks and Imitators. How ought Men of Sense to be careful of their Actions, if it were meerly from the Indignation of seeing themselves ill drawn by such little Pretenders? Not to fay, he that leads, is guilty of all the Actions of his Followers: And a Rake has Imitators whom you would never expect should prove so. Second-hand Vice fure of all is the most nauseous. There is hardly a Folly more abfurd, or which feems less to be accounted for, (tho' 'tis what we see every Day) than that grave and honest Natures give into this Way, and at the fame Time have good Sense, if they thought fit touse it: But the Fatality (under which most Men labour) of desiring to be what they are not, makes 'em go out of a Method, in which they might be received with Applause, and would certainly excell; into one, wherein they will all their Life have the Air of Strangers to what they aim at.

For this Reason, I have not lamented the Metamorpholis of any one I know fo much as of Nobilis, who was born with Sweetness of Temper, just Apprehension, and every Thing else that might make him a Man fit for his Order. But instead of the Pursuit of Sober Studies, and Applications, in which he would certainly be capable of making a considerable Figure in the noblest Assembly of Men in the World; I say, in spight of that good Nature, which is his proper Bent, he will fay ill-natured Things aloud, put fuch as he was, and still should be, out of Countenance, and drown all the natural Good in him, to receive an artificial ill Character, in which he will never succeed: For Nobilis is no Rake. He may guzzle as much Wine as he pleases, ralk Bawdy if he thinks fit; but he may as well drink Water-gruel, and go twice a Day to Church, for it will never do. I pronounce it again, Nobilus is no Rake. To be of that Order, he must be vicious against his Will, and not so by Study or Application. All Pretty Fellows are also excluded to a Man, as well as all Inamaratoes, or Persons of the Epicene Gender, who gaze at one another in the Presence of Ladies. This Class, of which I am giving you an Account, is pretended to also by Men of ftrong Abilities in Drinking; tho'they are fuch whom the Liquor, not the Conversation, keeps together. But Blockheads may roar, fight. and stab, and be never the nearer; their Labour is also lost; they want Sense: They are no Rakes.

As a Rake among Men is the Man who lives in the constant Abuse of his Reason, so a Coquet among Women is one who lives in continual Misapplication of her Beauty. The chief of all, whom I have the Honour to be acquainted with, is pretty Mrs. Tofs: She is ever in Practice of fomething which disfigures her, and takes from her Charms; tho' all the does, tends to a contrary Effect. She has naturally a very agreeable Voice and Urterance, which she has chang'd for the prettiest Lisp imaginable. She fees what the has a Mind to fee, at half a Mile. Distance; but poring with her Eyes half shur at every one she passes by, she believes much more becoming. The Cupid on her Fan and she have their Eyes full on each other, all the Time: in which they are not both in Motion. Whenever her Eye is turned from that dear Object, you may have a Glance and your Bow, if she is in Humour, returned as civilly as you make it; but that must not be in the Presence of a Man of greater Quality: For Mrs. Toss is so throughly well bred, that the chief Person present has all her Regards. And she, who giggles at Divine Service, and laughs at her very Mother, can compose her self at the Approach of a Man of a good Estate.

Will's Coffee house, June 9.

. A fine Lady shewed a Gentleman of this Company, for an eternal Answer to all his Addresses. a Paper of Verses, with which she is so captivated, that she profess'd, the Author should be the happy Man in Spite of all other Pretenders. It is ordinary for Love to make Men Poetical. and it had that Effect on this enamour'd Man: But he was refolved to try his Vein upon some of her Confidents or Retinue, before he ventured upon so high a Theme as her self. To do otherwife than fo, would be like making an Heroick Poem a Man's first Attempt. Among the Fawourites to the Fair One, he found her Parrat not to be in the last Degree: He faw Poll had her Ear, when his Sighs were neglected. write against him, had been a fruitless Labour: therefore he resolved to flatter him into his Interefts, in the following Manner:

To a Lady on her Parrat.

When Nymphs were coy, and Love could not prevail,
The Gods difguis'd were feldom known to fail,
Leda was chaft, but yet a Feather'd Jove Surpriz'd the Fair, and taught her how to love.
There's no Celeftial but his Heav'n would quit,
For any Form which might to thee admit.
See how the wanton Bird, at every Glance,
Swells his glad Plumes, and feels an am'rous Trance.
The Queen of Beauty has forfook the Dove, Hinceforth the Parrat be the Bird of Lave.

Ît

It is indeed a very just Proposition; to give that Honour rather to the Parrat than the other Volatile. The Parrat represents us in the State of making Love: The Dove in the Possession of the Object beloved, But instead of turning the Dove off, I fancy it would be better if the Chaise of Venus had hereafter a Parrat added, (as we see sometimes a Third Horse to a Coach) which might intimate, That to be a Parrat, is the only Way to succeed; and to be a Dove, to preserve your Conquests. If the Swain would go on successfully, he must imitate the Bird he writes upon. For he who would be loved by Women, must never be silent before the Favour, or open his Lips after it.

From my own Apartment, June 10.

I have so many Meshages from young Gentlemen who expect Preferment and Distinction, that I am wholly at a Lois in what Manner to acquit my self. The Writer of the following Letter tells me in a Postscript, he cannot go out of Town till I have taken some Notice of him, and is very urgent to be some Body in it, before he returns to his Commons at the University. But take it from himself.

To Isaac Bickerstaff Esq; Monitor General of Great-Britain.

SIR, Sheer-Lane, June 8.

Have been above 6 Months from the University, of Age these 3 Months, and so long in Town. I was recommended to one Charles Bubbleboy near the Temple, who has supply'd me with all the Furniture he says a Gentleman ought to have. I desired a Certificate thereof from him, which he said would require some Time to consider of; and when I went Testerday Morning for it, he tells me, upon due Consideration, I still want some few odd,

SIR,

Your most humble Servant, Jeffry Nicknack.

I am very willing to encourage young Beginners; but am extreamly in the Dark how to dispote of this Gentleman. I cannot see either his Person or Habit in this Letter; but I'll call at Charles's, and know the Shape of his Snuss. Box, by which I can settle his Character. Tho indeed, to know his full Capacity, I ought to be inform'd, whether he takes Spanish or Musty.

St. James's Coffee-boule, June 10.

Letters from the Low Countries of the 17th Instant say, That the Duke of Marlborough and the Prince of Savoy intended to leave Ghens on that Day, and join the Army, which lies between Pont d'Espiere and Courtray, their Head Quarters being at Helchin. The same Day the Palatine Foot was expected at Brussels. Lieutenant-General Dompre, with a Body of Eight Thousand Men, is posted at Alost, in order to cover Ghent and Brussels. The Marshal de Villars was still on the Plains of Lenz; and it is said, the Duke of Vendosme is appointed to command in Conjunction with that General. Advices from Paris say, Monsieur Voisin is made Secretary of State, upon Monsieur Chamillara's Refignation of that Employment. The Want of Money in that Kingdom is fo great, that the Court has thought fit to command all the Plate Plate of private Families to be brought into the Mint. They write from the Hague of the 18th, That the States of Holland continue their Session; and that they have approved the Resolution of the States-General, to publish a Second Edict to prohibit the Sale of Corn to the Enemy. Many eminent Persons in that Assembly have declared, that they are of Opinion, that all Commerce whatsoever with France should be wholly forbidden: Which Point is under present Deliberation; but it is feared it will meet with powerful Opposition.

SIR. June 9. at Night. Desire the Favour of you to decide this Question, Whether calling a Gentleman a Smart Fellow is an Affront or not? A Youth entring a certain Coffee-house, with his Cane tied at his Button, wearing red-heel'd Shooes, I thought of your Description, and could not forbear telling a Friend of mine next to me, There enters a Smart Fellow. The Gentleman bearing it, had immediately a Mind to pick a Quarrel with me; and defired Sanisfaction: At which I was more puzzled than at the other, remembring what Mention your Familliar makes of those that had lost their Lives on fuch Occasions. Judgment, and I expect you to be my Second, fince you have been the Gause of our Quarrel. I am,

Your Friend and humble Servant,

I absolutely pronounce, that there is no Oc. casion of Offence given in this Expression; for 2 Smart Fellow is always an Appellation of Praise, and is a Man of double Capacity. The true Cast or Mould in which you may be fure to know him is, when his Livelihood or Education is in the Civil Lift, and you fee him express a Vivacity or Mettle above the Way he is in by a little Jerk in his Motion, short Trip in his Steps, well-fancied Lining of his Coat, or any other Indications which may be given in a vigorous Drefs. Now, What possible Infinuation can there be, that 'tis a Cause of Quarrel for a Man to fay, he allows a Gentleman really to be, what he, his Taylor, his Hosier, and his Millener, have confpired to make him ? I confels, if this Perfon who appeals to me had faid, He was not a Smart Fellow, there had been Cause for Resentment; but if he stands to it that he is one, he leaves no Manner of Ground for a Misunderstanding. Indeed, it is a most lamentable Thing, that there should be a Dispute raised upon a Man's saying another is, what he plainly takes Pains to be thought.

But this Point cannot be so well adjusted, as by enquiring what are the Sentiments of wife Nations and Communities of the Use of the Sword, and from thence conclude, Whether it is honourable to draw it so frequently or not? An Illustrious Commonwealth of Italy has preferwed it felf for many Ages, without letting one of their Subjects handle this destructive Instrument, always leaving that Work to fuch of Mankind as understand the Use of a whole Skin

to Cuts and Scars.

But what need we run to fuch Foreign Instances: Our own ancient and well-governed Cities are conspicuous Examples to all Mankind in their Regulation of Military Archievements. chief Citizens, like the noble Italians, hire Mercenaries to carry Arms in their Stead; and you shall have a Fellow of a desperate Fortune, for the Gain of one Half-Crown, go through all the Dangers of Tuttle-Fields, or the Artillery-Ground, clap his Right Jaw within Two Inches of the Touch-hole of a Musquer, fire it off, and Huzza, with as little Concern as he tears a Pullet. Thus you see, to what Scorn of Danger these Mercenaries arrive, out of a meer Love of fordid Gain: But methinks it should take off the ftrong Prepoffession Men have in Favour of bold Actions, when they fee upon what low Motives Men aspire to em. Do but observe the common Practice in the Government of those-Heroick Bodies, our Militia and Lieutenancies, the most ancient Corps of Soldiers, perhaps, in the Universe. I question, Whether there is one Instance of an Animolity between any Two of these illustrious Sons of Mars since their Institution, which was decided by Combat? I remember indeed to have read the Chronicle, of an Accident which had like to have occation'd Bloodfhed in the very Field before all the General Officers, tho' most of them were Justices of the Peace: Caprain Crabtree of Birching-Lane, Haberdasher, had drawn a Bill upon Major-General Maggot, Cheesemonger in Thames-street. Crabtree draws this upon Mr. William Maggot and Company. A Country Lad received this Bill, and not understanding the Word Company, us'd in drawing Bills on Men in Partnership, carried it to Mr. Jeffrey Stitch of Crooked-Lane, (Lieutenant of KS the the Major-General's Company) whom he had the Day before feen march by the Door in all the Pomp of his Commission. The Lieutenant accepts it, for the Honour of the Company, since it had come to him. But Repayment being ask'd from the Major General, he absolutely refuses. Upon this, the Lieutenant thinks of nothing less than to bring this to a Rupture, and takes for his Second, Tobias Armstrong of the Counter, and sends him with a Challenge in a Scrip of Parchment, wherein was written, Stitch centra Maggot, and all the Fury vanish'd in a Moment. The Major-General gives Satisfaction to the Second, and all was well.

Hence it is, that the bold Spirits of our City are kept in such Subjection to the Civil Power. Otherwise, Where would our Liberties soon be? If Wealth and Valour were fuffer'd to exert themfelves with their utmost Force: If fuch Officers as are employed in the terrible Bands abovementioned, were to draw Bills as well as Swords. These dangerous Captains, who could victual an Army as well as lead it, would be too powerful for the State. But the Point of Honour justly gives Way to that of Gain; and by long and wife Regulation, the richest is the bravest Man. I have known a Captain rife to a Colonel in Two Days by the Fall of Stocks; and a Major, my good Friend, near the Monu-ment, afcended to that Honour by the Fall of the Price of Spirits, and the Riling of right Nantz. By this true Sense of Honour, that Body of Warriors are ever in good Order and Difcipline, with their Colours and Coats all whole: As in other Bartalions (where their Principles of Action are less folid) you fee the Men of Service look like Spectres, with long Sides, and lank Cheeks. In this Army, you may measure a Man's Services by his Waft, and the most prominent prominent Belly is certainly the Man who has been most upon Action. Befides all this, there is another excellent Remark to be made in the Discipline of these Troops. It being of absolute Necessity that the People of England should, fee what they have for their Money, and be Eve-witnesses of the Advantages they gain by it, all Battles which are fought abroad are represented here. But since one Side must be beaten, and the other conquer, which might create Disputes, the eldest Company is always to make the other run, and the younger retreats, according to the last News and best Intelligence. I have my felf feen Prince Eugene make Catinat fly from the Back-fide of Grays-Im-Lane to Hockley in the Hele, and not give over the Pursuit, till oblig'd to leave the Bear-Garden on the Right, to avoid being borne down by Fencers, Wild Bulls and Monsters, too terrible for the Encounter of any Heroes, but such whose Lives are their Livelihood.

We have here feen, that wife Nations do not admit of Fighting, even in the Defence of their. Country, as a laudable Action; and they live within the Walls of our own City in great Honour and Reputation without it. It would be very necessary to understand, by what Force of the Climate, Food, Education, or Employment, one Man's Sense is brought to differ so essentially from that of another; that one is ridiculous and contemptible for torbearing a Thing which makes for his Safery; and another applauded for confulting his Ruin and Destruction.

It will therefore be necessary for us (to show our Travelling) to examine this Subject fully, and tell you how it comes to pass, That a Man of Honour in Spain, the you offend him never fo gallantly, stabs you basely; in England, tho' you offend never so basely, challenges fairly:

The former kills you out of Revenge; the latter out of good Breeding. But to probe the Heart of Man in this Particular to its utmost Thoughts and Recesses, I must wait for the Return of Pachlet, who is now attending a Gentleman lately in a Duel, and sometimes visits the Person, by whose Hand he received his Wounds.

St. James's C.ffee-boufe, June 13.

Letters from Vienna of the 8th Instant fay, there has been a Journal of the Marches and Actions of the King of Sweden, from the Beginning of January to the 11th of April, N.S. communicated by the Swedish Ministers to that Court. These Advices inform, That his Swedish Majefly entered the Territories of Mufcour in February last with the main Body of his Army, in order to oblige the Enemy to a general Engagement; but that the Mulcovites declining a Battie, and an univerfal Thaw having rendred the Rivers unpassable, the King returned into U-There are mentioned several Rencounters between considerable Detachments of the Swedish and Ruffian Armies. Marshal Heifter inrended to take his Leave of the Court on the Day after the Date of these Letters, and put himself at the Head of the Army in Hungary. The Malecontents had attempted to fend in a Supply of Provisions into Newhausel; but their Delign was disappointed by the Germans.

Advices from Berlin of the 15th Instant, N.S. fay, That his Danish Majesty having received an Invitation from the King of Prussia to an Interview, deligned to come to Potsdam within few Days; and that King Augustus resolved to accompany him thither. To avoid all Difficulties in Ceremony, the Three Kings, and all the Company who shall have the Honour to sit with them at Table, are to draw Lots, and take Precedence accordingly.

They

They write from Hamburgh of the 18th Inflant, N. S. That some particular Letters from Dantzick speak of a late Action between the Swedes and Muscovites near Jeroslaw; but that Engagement being mentioned from no other Place, there is not much Credit given to this Intelligence.

We hear from Bruffels, by Letters dated the 20th, That on the 14th in the Evening the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene arrived at Courtray, with a Defign to proceed the Day following to Liffe, in the Neighbourhood of which City the Confederate Army was to rendezvous the fame Day. Advices from Paris inform us, that the Marshal de Bezons is appointed to command in Dauphine; and that the Duke of Berwick is set out for Spain, with a Design to follow the Fortunes of the Duke of Aujou, in case the French King should comply with the late Demands of the Allies.

The Court of France has sent a Circular Letter to all the Governours of the Provinces, to recommend to their Consideration his Majesty's late Conduct in the Affair of Peace. It is thought stimulated in the People, whether it is consistent with the Dignity of the Crown, or the French Name, to submit to the Preliminaries demanded by the Confederates? That Letter dwells upon the Unreasonableness of the Allies, in requiring his Majesty's Assistance in dethroning his Grandson, and treats this Particular in Language more suitable to it, as it is a Topick of Oratory, than a real Circumstance on which the Interests of Nations, and Reasons of State, which asset all Europe, are concern'd.

The Close of this Memorial seems to prepare the People to expect all Events, attributing the Confidence of the Enemy to the Goodness of their

Troops;

Troops; but acknowledging, that his fole Depen. dance is upon the Intervention of Providence.

White's Chocolate-house, June 14. TAving a very folid Respect for humane Nature, however it is distorted from its natural Make, by Affectation, Humour, Custom, Misfortune, or Vice, I do apply my self to my Friends to help me in raising Arguments for preserving it in all its Individuals, as long as it is permitted. To one of my Letters on this Subject, I have received the following Answer:

IN Answer to your Question, Why Men of Sense, Virtue and Experience, are feen still to comply with that ridiculous Custom of Duelling? I must defire you to reflect, that Cuftom has dish'd up in Ruffs the wisest Heads of our Ancestors, and put the best of the present Age into huge Falbala Pe-riwigs. Men of Sense would not impose such incumbrances on themselves; but be glad they might show their Faces decently in Publick upon easier Terms. If then such Men appear reasonably Slaves to the Fashion, in what regards the Figure of their Persons, we ought not to wonder, that they are at least so in what seems to touch their Reputations. Besides, you can't be ignorant, that Dress and Chivalry have been always encouraged by the Ladies, as the Two principal Branches of Gallantry. Tis to avoid being Sneer'd at for his Singularity, and from a Desire to appear more agreeable to his Mistrefs, that a wife, experienced, and polite Man, complies complies with the Drefs commonly received, and is prevailed upon to violate his Reason and Principles, in hazarding his Life and Estate by a Tilt, as well as Suffering his Pleasures to be constrained and sowred by the constant Apprehension of a Quarrel. This is the more surprizing, because Men of the most delicate Sense and Principles have naturally in other Cajes a particular Repugnance in accommedating themselves to the Maxims of the World: But one may eafily distinguish the Man that is affected with Beauetry. and the Reputation of a Tilt, from him who complies with both, meerly as they are impos'd upon him by Custom; for in the former you'll remark an Air of Vanity and Triumph; whereas when the latter appears in a long Duvillier full of Powder, or has decided a Quarrel by the Sword. you may perceive in his Face, that he appeals to Custom for an Excuse. I think it may not be improper to enquire into the Genealogy of this Chimerical Monfter, called a Duel, which I take to be an illegitimate Species of the ancient Knight-Errantry. By the Laws of this Whim, your Heroick Person, or Man of Gallantry, was indispenfibly oblig'd to starve in Armour a certain Number of Years in the Chase of Monsters, encounter them at the Peril of his Life, and Suffer great Hardships, in order to gain the Affection of the Fair Lady, and qualifie himself for assuming the Belle-Air, that is, of a Pretty Fellow, or Man of Honour according to the Fashion: But since the Publishing of Don Quixot, and Extinction of the Race of Dragons, which Suctonius says happen'd in that of Wantley, the gallant and heroick Spirits of these latter Times have been under the Meceffity of creating new Chimerical Monsters to entertain themselves with, by way of single Combat, 'as the only Proofs they are able to give their swn Sex, and the Ladies, that they are in all Points Men of nice Honour. But to do Justice ti the ancient and real Monsters, I must observe, that they never molested those who were not of a Humour to Hunt for them in the Woods and Defarts: whereas on the contrary, our modern Monsters are To familiarly admitted and entertain'd in all the Courts and Cities of Europe, (except France) that one can scarce be in the most humaniz'd Society without risquing ones Life; the People of the best Sort, and the fine Gentlemen of the Age, being so fond of 'em, that they seldom appear in my publick Place without one. I have some further Considerations upon this Subject, which as you encourage me, shall be communicated to you, by, Sir, a Cousin; but once removed from the best Family of the Staffs, namely,

> Your humble Servant. Kinsman and Friend.

> > Tim. Switch.

It is certain, Mr. Switch has hit upon the true Source of this Evil; and that it proceeds only from the Force of Custom that we contradict our felves in half the Particulars and Occurences of Life. But fuch a Tyranny in Love, which the Fair impose upon us, is a little too severe, that we must demonstrate our Affection for 'em by no certain Proof but Harred to one another, or come at them (only as one does to an Estate) by Survivorship. This Way of Application to gain a Lady's Heart, is taking her as we do Towns and Castles, by distressing the Place, and letting none come near'em without our Pass. Were fuch a Lover once to write the Truth of his Heart, and let her know his whole Thoughts, he would appear indeed to have a Passion for her; but it would hardly be called Love. The Billet-Deux would run to this Purpole:

Madam,

I Have so tender a Regard for you and your Interests, that I'll knock any Man in the Head whom I observe to be of my Mind, and like you. Mr. Truman the other Day look'd at you in so languishing a Manner, that I am resolv'd to run him through to morrow Morning: This, I think, he deserves for his Guilt in admiring you; than which I cannot have a greater Reason for murdering him, except it be that you also approve him. From my own Apartment, June 14. I am just come hither at Ten at Night, and have ever fince Six been in the most celebrated. though most nauscous, Company in Town: The Two Leaders of the Society were a Critick and a Wit. These Two Gentlemen are great: Opponents upon all Occasions, not discerning that they are the nearest each other in Temper and Talents of any Two Classes of Men in the World; for to profess Judgment, and to profess Wit, both arise from the same Failure, which is Want of Judgment. The Poverty of the Critick this Way proceeds from the Abule of his Faculty; that of the Wit, from the Neglect of it. It's a particular Observation I have always made, That of all Mortals, a Critick is the filliest; for by inuring himself to examine all Things, whether they are of Consequence or not, he never looks upon any Thing but with a Defign of paffing Sentence upon it; by which Means, he is never a Companion, but always a Cenfor. This makes him earnest upon Trifles; and dispute on the most indifferent Occasions with Vehemence. If he offers to speak or write, that Talent which should approve the Work of the other Faculties, prevents their Operation. He comes upon Action in Armour; but without Weapons: He stands in Safety; but can gain no Glory. The Wit on the other Hand has been hurried fo long away by Imagination only, that Judgment feems not to have ever been one of his natural Faculties. This Gentleman takes himself to be as much obliged to be merry, as the other to be grave. A thorough Critick is a Sort of Puritan in the polite World. As an Enthusiast in Religion stumbles at the ordinary Occurences of Life, if he cannot quote Scripture Examples on the Occasion; so the Critick is never safe in his Speech or Writing, without he has among the celebrated Writers an Authority for the Truth of his Sentence. You will believe we had a very good Time with these Brethren, who were so far out of the Dress of their native Country, and fo lost in its Dialect, that they were as much Strangers to themselves, as to their Relation to each other. They took up the whole Discourse; sometimes the Critick grew passionate, and when reprimanded by the Wit for any Trip or Helitation in his Voice, he would answer, Mr. Dryden makes such a Character on such an Occasion break off in the fame Manner; so that the Stop was according to Nature, and as a Man in a Passion should do. The Wit, who is as far gone in Letters as himself, seems to be at a Loss to answer such an Apology; and concludes only, that though his Anger is justly vented, it wants Fire in the Utterance. If Wir is to be measured by the Circumstances of Time and Place, there is no Man has generally fo little of that Talent, as he who is a Wit by Profession. What he fays, instead of arising from the Occasion, has an Occasion invented to bring it in. Thus he is new for no other Reason, but that he talks like no Body else; but has taken up a Method of his own, without Commerce or Dialogue with other People. The lively Jasper Dattyle is one of this Character. He feems to have made a Vow to be witty to his Life's End. When you meet him, What do you think, fays he, I have been entertaining my felf with? Then out comes a premeditated Turn; to which 'tis to no Purpose to answer, for he goes on in the fame Strain of Thought he deligned without your speaking. Therefore I have a general Answer to all he can fay; as, Sure there never was any Greature had fo much Fire! Spondee, who is a Critick, is feldom out of this fine Man's Company. They have no Manner of Affection for each other, but keep together, like Novell and Oldfox in the Plain-Dealer, because they show each other. I know several of Sense who can be diverted with this Couple; but I fee no Curiofity in the Thing, except it be, that Spondee is dull and feems dull; but Da-Hyle is heavy with a brisk Face. It must be own'd also, that Dactyle has almost Vigour enough to be a Coxcomb; but Spondee by the Lowness of his Constitution, is only a Blockhead.

There are many other Names to it; among whom, is the Chief of the Family of the Marquis Guiscard. From Thursd. June 16. to Saturd. June 18. 1709.

From my own Apartment, June 16. THE Vigilance, the Anxiety, the Tenderness, which I have for the good People of England, I am perswaded will in Time be much commended; but I doubt whether they will ever be rewarded. However, I must go on chearfully in my Work of Reformation: That being my great Defign, I am studious to prevent my Labour's increasing upon me; therefore am particularly observing of the Temper and Inclinations of Childhood and Youth, that we may not give Vice and Folly Supplies from the growing Generation. It is hardly to be imagined how useful this Study is, and what great Evils or Benefits arise from putting us in our tender Years to what we are fit, or unfit: Therefore on Tuesday last (with a Design to sound their Inclinations) I took Three Lads who are under my Guardianship, a rambling, in an Hackney-Coach, to show them the Town, as the Lions, the Tombs, Bedlam, and the other Places which are Entertainments to raw Minds, because they strike forcibly on the Fancy. The Boys are Brothers, one of Sixteen, the other of Fourteen, the other of Twelve. The First was his Father's Darling, the Second his Mother's, and the Third is mine, who am their Uncle. Mr. William is a Lad of true Genius; but being at the upper End of a great School, and having all the Boys below him, his Arrogance is insupportable. If I begin to show a little of my Latin, he immediately interrupts: Uncle, under Favour, that which you fay is not understood in that Manner. BroNº

Brother, fays my Boy Jack, You do not show your Manners much in contradicting my Unkle Isac. You queer Cur, fays Mr. William, Do you think my Uncle takes any Notice of fuch a dull Rogue as you are? Mr. William goes on; He is the most stupid of all my Mother's Children: He knows nothing of his Books: When he should mind that, he is hiding or hoard-ing his Taws and Marbles, or laying up Farthings. His Way of thinking is, Four and Twenty Fathings make Sixpence, and Two Sixpences a Shilling, Two Shillings and Sixpence Half a Crown, and Two Half-Crowns Five Shillings. So within these Two Months, the close Hunks has fcrap'dup Twenty Shillings, and we'll make him spend it all before he comes Home. Jack immediately claps his Hands into both Pockers. and turns as pale as Ashes. There is nothing touches a Parent (and fuch I am to Jack) fo nearly, as a provident Conduct. This Lad has in him the true Temper for a good Husband, a kind Father, and an honest Executor. All the great People you fee make confiderable Figures on the Change, in Court, and fometimes in Senates, are such as in Reality have no greater Faculty than what may be called Humane Instinct, which is a natural Tendency to their own Prefervation. and that of their Friends, without being capable of striking out of the Road for Adventures. There's Sir William Scrip was of this Sort of Capacity from his Childhood: He has bought the Country round him, and makes a Bargain better than Sir Harry Wildfire with all his Wit and Humour. Sir Harry never wants Money but he comes to Scrip, laughs at him half an Hour, and then gives Bond for tother Thou-fand. The close Men are incapable of placing Merit any where but in their Pence, and therefore gain it; while others, who have larger Capacities, pacities, are diverted from the Pursuit by Enjoy. ments, which can be supported only by that Cash which they despise; and therefore are in the End, Slaves to their Inferiors both in Fortune and Understanding. I once heard a Man of excellent Sense observe, That more Affairs in the World failed by being in the Hands of Men of too large Capacities for their Buliness, than by being in the Conduct of fuch as wanted Abilities to execute them. Jack therefore being of a plodding Make, shall be a Citizen; and I defign him to be the Refuge of the Family in their Diffress, as well as their Jest in Prosperity. His Brother Will shall go to Oxford with all Speed, where, if he does not arrive at being a Man of Sense, he will soon be informed wherein he is a Coxcomb. There is in that Place such a true Spirit of Raillery and Humour, that if they can't make you a wife Man, they will certainly let you know you are a Fool, which is all my Cousin wants to cease to be so. Thus having taken these Two out of the Way, I have Leisure to look at my Third Lad. I observe in the young Rogue a natural Subtilty of Mind, which discovers it self rather in forbearing to declare his Thoughts on any Occasion, than in any visible Way of exerting himself in Discourse. For which Reason I will place him where, if he commits no faults, he may go further than those in other Stations, though they excel in Virtues. The Boy is well falhioned, and will eafily fall into a graceful Manner; wherefore, I have a Delign to make him a Page to a great Lady of my Acquaintance; by which Means he will be well skill'd in the common Modes of Life, and make a greater Progress in the World by that Knowledge, than with the greatest Qualities without it. a good Understanding in any other Place. We see a World of Pains taken, and the best Years of Life spent, in collecting a Set of Thoughts in a College for the Conduct of Life; and after all, the Man so qualified shall heurate in his Speech to a good Suit of Clothes, and want common Sense before an agreeable Woman. Hence it is, that Wisdom, Valour, Justice, and Learning, can't keep a Man in Countenance that is possessed with these Excellencies, if he wants that inferior Art of Life and Behaviour, call'd Good Breeding. A Man endowed with great Perfections without this, is like one who has his Pockets full of Gold, but always wants Change for his ordinary Occasions.

Will. Courtly is a living Instance of this Truth, and has had the same Education which I am giving my Nephew. He never spoke a Thing but what was said before, and yet can converse with the wittiest Men without being ridiculous. Among the Learned, he does not appear ignorant; nor with the Wise, indiscreet. Living in Conversation from his Instancy, makes him we where at a Loss; and a long Familiarity with the Persons of Men, is in a Manner of the same Service to him, as if he knew their Arts. As Ceremony is the Invention of wise Men to keep focls at a Distance, so good Breeding is an Expedient to make Fools and wife Men Equals.

Will's Coffee-bonfe, June 17.

The Suspension of the Playhouse has made me have nothing to fend you from hence; but caling here this Evening, I found the Party I usually sit with, upon the Business of Writing, and examining what was the handsomest Style in which to address Women, and write Letters of Gallantry. Many were the Opinions which were immediately declared on this Subject: Some were for a certain Softness; some for I know not what Delicacy; others for fomething inexpressibly Tender: When it came to me, I faid there was no Rule in the World to be made for writing Letters, but that of being as near what you speak Face to Face as you can; which is fo great a Truth, that I am of Opinion, Writing has loft more Mistresses than any one Mistake in the whole Legend of Love. For when you write to a Lady for whom you have a folid and honourable Passion, the great Idea you have of her, join'd to a quick Sense of her Absence, fills your Mind with a Sort of Tenderness, that gives your Language too much the Air of Complaint, which is feldom fuccessful. For a Man may flateter himself as he pleases, but he will find, that the Women have more Understanding in their own Affairs than we have, and Women of Spirit are not to be won by Mourners. He that can keep handsomely within Rules, and support the Carriage of a Companion to his Mistress, is much more likely to prevail, than he who lets her fee, the whole Relish of his Life depends upon her. If possible therefore divert your Mistress, rather than figh to her. The pleasant Man she will defire for her own Sake; but the languishing Lover has nothing to hope from, but her Pity. To Thew the Difference, I produced two Letters a Lady gave me, which had been writ by two Gentlemen, who pretended to her, but were both kill'd the next Day after the Date at the Battle of Almanza. One of them was a mercurial gayhumour'd Man; the other a Man of a serious, but a great and gallant Spirit. Poor Jack Careles! This is his Letter: You fee how it is folded: The Air of it is so negligent, one might have read half of it by peeping into it, without breaking it open. He had no Exactness.

MADAM,

IT is a very pleafant Circumstance I am in. I that while I should be thinking of the good Company we are to meet within a Day or two, where we shall go to Loggerheads, my Thoughts are running upon a Fair Enemy in England. I was in Hopes I had left you there; but you follow the Camp, tho' I have endeavoured to make some of our Leaguer Ladies drive you out of the Field. All my Comfort is, you are more troublesome to my Colonel than my felf: I permit you to vifit me only now and then; but he downright keeps you. I laugh at his Honour as far as his Gravity will allow me; But I know him to be a Man of too much Merit to succeed with a Woman. Therefore defend your Heart as well as you can, I shall come Home this Winter irrelistibly dress'd, and with quite a new Foreign Air. And fo I had like to fay, I reft, but alas! I remain,

Madam,

Your most Obedient, Most Humble Servant,

John Careles.

Now for Colonel Constant's Epistle; you see it is folded and directed with the utmost Care.

MADAM,

below a Man who had a Love of his Country, quickened by a Passion for a Woman of Honour. If there be any Thing noble in going to a certain Death; if there be any Merir, that I meet it with Pleasure, by promising my self a Place in your Esteem; if your Applause, when I am no more, is preferable to the most glorious Life without you: I say, Madam, Is any of these Considerations can have Weight with you, you will give me a kind Place in your Memory, which I prefer to the Glory of Casar. I hope, this will be read, as it is writ, with Tears.

The beloved Lady is a Woman of a sensible Mind; but she has confess'd to me, that after all her true and solid Value for Constant, she had much more Concern for the Loss of Careles.

Those noble and serious Spirits have something equal to the Adversities they meet with, and confequently lessen the Objects of Pity. Great Accidents seem not cut out so much for Men of samiliar Characters, which makes them more easily pitied, and soon after beloved. Add to this, that the Sort of Love which generally succeeds, is a Stranger to Awe and Distance. I asked Romana, Whether of the Two she should have chosen had they survived? She said, She knew she ought to have taken Constant; but believed, she should have chosen Careless.

Tis hoped, that if the Enemy follow their Motions, they may have Opportunity to put a sufficient Quantity of Provision and Ammunition into Olivenza.

Mr. Bickerstaff gives Notice to all Persons that dress themselves as they please, without Regard to Decorum, (as with blue and red Stockings in Morning; tuck'd Cravats, and Nightcap-Wigs, before People of the First Quality) That he has yet received no Fine for indulging them in that Liberty, and that he expects their Compliance with this Demand, or that they go Home immediately and shift themselves. This is further to acquaint the Town, That the Report of the Hosters, Toymen, and Milleners, having compounded with Mr. Bickerstaff for tolerating such Enormities, is utterly false and scandalous.

Board on the Subject. Upon proposing some Doubts, and defiring their Affiftance, a very hopeful young Gentleman, my Relation, who is to be called to the Bar within a Year and an half at farthest, told me, That he had ever fince I first mentioned Duelling turned his Head that Way; and that he was principally moved thereto, because he designed to follow the Circuits in the North of England and the South of Scotland, and to refide mostly at his own Estate at Landbadernamz in Cardigansbire. The Northern Britains and Southern Scots are a warm People, and the Welfb a Nation of Gentlemen; fo that it behov'd him to understand well the Science of Quarrelling. The young Gentleman proceeded admirably well, and gave the Board an Account, that he had read Fitzherbert's Grand Abridgment, and had found, that Duelling is a very ancient Part of the Law: For when a Man is fued, be it for his Life or his Land, the Person that joins the Isiue, whether Plaintiff or Defendant, may put the Trial upon the Duel. Further he argued, under Favour of the Court, that when the Issue is joined by the Duel in Treason or other Capital Crimes, the Parties accused and Accuser must fight in their own proper Persons: But if the Dispute be for Lands, you may hire a Champion at Hockley in the Hole, or any where else. This Part of the Law we had from the Saxons; and they had it, as also the Trial by Ordeal, from the Laplanders. It is indeed agreed, faid he, the Southern. and Eastern Nations never knew any Thing of it; for though the ancient Romans would foold, and call Names filthily, yet there is not an Example of a Challenge that ever passed amongst

a Boatswain of an East-India Man; which was, that a Chinese had tricked and bubbled him, and that when he came to demand Satisfaction the next Morning, and like a true Tar of Honour called him Son of a Whore, Lyar, Dog, and other rough Appellatives used by Persons conversant with Winds and Waves; the Chinese, with great Tranquility, desired him not to come Abroad fasting, nor put himself in a Heat, for it would prejudice his Health. Thus the East knows nothing of this Gallantry.

There fat at the Left of the Table a Person of a venerable Aspect, who afferted, That half the Impolitions which are put upon these Ages, have been transmitted by Writers who have given too great Pomp and Magnificence to the Exploits of the ancient Bear-Garden, and made their Gladiators, by fabulous Tradition, greater than Gorman and others of Great-Britain. He informed the Company, that he had fearched Authorities for what he faid, and that a learned Antiquary, Humphrey Scarecrow Esq; of Hockley in the Hole, Recorder to the Bear-Garden, was then writing a Discourse on the Subject. It appears by the best Accounts, says this Gentleman, that the high Names which are used? among us with fo great Veneration, were no other than Stage-fighters, and Worthies of the ancient Bear-Garden. The renowned Hercules always carried a Quarter-staff, and was from thence called Claviger. A learned Chronologift is about proving what Wood this Staif was made of, whether Oak, Ash, or Crab-Tree. The first Trial of Skill he ever performed, was with one Cacus, a Dear-Stealer; the next was with Typhonus, a Giant of Forty Foot Four Inches. Indeed it was unhappily recorded, that meeting at last with a Sailor's Wife, the made his Staff of Prowels ferve her own Use, and dwindle 144 away to a Diftaff: She clapt him on an old Tarlacket of her Husband's; so that this great Hero drooped like a scabbed Sheep. Him his Contemporary Theseus succeeded in the Bear-Garden, which Honour he held for many Years: This grand Duellist went to Hell, and was the only One of that Sort that ever came back again. As for Achilles and Hector, (as the Ballads of those Times mention) they were pretty Smart Fellows; they fought at Sword and Buckler; but the former had much the better of it; his Mother, who was an Oyster-Woman, having got a Black-Smith of Lemnos to make her Son's Weapons. There's a Pair of trusty Trojans in a Song of Virgil's, that were famous for handling their Gauntlets, Dares, and Entellus; and indeed it does appear, they fought no Sham Prize. What Arms the great Alexander used, is uncertain; however, the Historian mentions, when he attack'd Thalestris, it was only at fingle Rapier; but the Weapon soon failed; for it was always observed, that the Amazons had a Sort of Enchantment about them, which made the Blade of the Weapon, though of never so good Metal, at every home Push lose its Edge and grow feeble.

The Roman Bear-Garden was abundantly more magnificent than any Thing Greece could boaft of; it flourished most under those Delights of Mankind, Nero and Domitian: At one Time it's recorded, 400 Senators entred the Lift, and thought it an Honour to be cudgelled and quarterstaffed. I observe, the Lamste were the People chiefly employed, which makes me imagine our Bear-Garden copied much after this, the Butchers being the greatest Men in it.

Thus far the Glory and Honour of the Bear-Garden stood secure, till Fate, that irresistible Ruler of sublunary Things, in that universal Ruin

Ruin of Arts and politer Learning, by those favage People the Goths and Vandals, destroyed and levelled it to the Ground. Then fell the Grandeur and Bravery of the Roman State, till at last the Warlike Genius (but accompanied with more Courtefie) revived in the Christian World under those puissant Champions, St. George, St. Dennis, and other dignified Heroes: One kill'd his Dragon, another his Lion, and were all afterwards canonized for it, having red Letters before them to illustrate their Martial Temper. The Spanish Nation, it must be own'd, were devoted to Gallantry and Chivalry above the rest of the World. What a great Figure does that great Name, Don Quixot, make in History? How Thines this glorious Star in the Western World? O renown'd Hero! O Mirror of Knighthood!

Thy branish'd Winyard all the World desies, And kills as sure as del Tobosa's Eyes.

I am forced to break off abruptly, being sent for in Haste, with my Rule, to measure the Degree of an Affront, before the two Gentlemen (who are now in their Breeches and Pumps ready to engage behind Mountague-House) have made a Pais.

From my own Apartment, June 18.

It is an unreasonable Objection I find against my Labours, that my Stock is not all my own; and therefore the kind Reception I have met with is not so deserved as it ought to be. But I hope, though it be never so true, that I am obliged to my Friends for laying their Cash in my Hands, since I give it them again when they please, and leave them at their Liberty to call it Home, it will not hurt me with my gentle Readers. Ask all the Merchants who act upon Consignments, Where is the Necessiry (if they answer readily what their Correspondents draw) of their being wealthy themselves? Ask the greatest Bankers, If all the Men they deal with were to draw at once, what would be the Consequence? But indeed a Country Friend has writ me a Letter which gives me great Mortification; wherein I find I am so far from expeding a Supply from thence, that some have not heard of me, and the rest do not understand me. His Epistle is as follows:

Dear Coufin,

I Thought when I left the Town to have rain fed your Fame here, and helped you to support it by Intelligence from hence; but alas! they had never heard of the Tatler 'till I brought down a Set. I lent them from House to House; but they asked me what they meant. I began to enlighten them, by telling who and who were supposed to be intended by the Characters drawn. I faid for Instance, Chine and "Glariffa are two eminent Toasts. A Gentleman (who keeps his Greyhound and Gun, and one would think might know better) told me, he. supposed they were Papishes, for their Names were not English: Then, said he, Why do you call live People Toafts? I answered, That was a new Name found out by the Wits. to make a Lady have the fame Effect as Burridge in the Glass when a Man is drinking. But fays I, Sir, I perceive this is to you all bamboozling; why you look as if you were Don Diego'd to the Tune of a Thousand Pounds. All this good Language was loft upon him : He only stared, though he is as good a Scholar as any Layman in the Town, except the Barber. Thus, Cou-' fin, you must be content with London for the Center of your Wealth and Fame; we have no Relish for you. Wit must describe its proper Circumference, and not go beyond ir, left (like '(like little Boys, when they straggle out of their own Parish) it may wander to Places where it is not known, and be lost. Since it is so, you must excuse me that I am forced at a Visit to sit silent, and only lay up what excellent Things pass at such Conversations.

' This Evening I was with a Couple of young Ladies; one of them has the Character of the prettieft Company, yet really I thought her but filly; the other, who talked a great deal less, I observed to have Understanding. The Lady who is reckoned fuch a Companion among her Acquaintance, has only, with a very brisk Air, a Knack of faying the commonest Things: The other, with a fly ferious one, fays home Things enough. The first (Mistress Giddy) is very quick; but the second (Mrs. Slim) fell into Giddy's own Style, and was as good Company as the. Giddy happens to drop her Glove; Slim reaches it to her: Madam (fays Giddy) I hope you'll have a better Office. Upon which Slim immediately repartees, and firs in her Lap, and cries, Are you not forry. for my Heaviness? This sly Wench pleased me to fee how the hit her Height of Understanding so well. We far down to Supper-Says Giddy, mighty prettily, Two Hands in a Difh, and One in a Purie: Says Slim, Ay, Madam, the More the Merrier; but the Fewer the Better Chear. I quickly took the Hint, and was as witty and talkative as they. Says I,

And so helped my self. Giddy turns about, What have you found your Tongue? Yes, (says I) 'tis Manners to speak when I am spoken to; but your greatest Talkers are the least Doers, and the still Sow ears up all the Broth. Ha! Ha! says Giddy, One would think he had nothing in him, and do you hear how he talks when he pleases. I grew immediately roguish and pleasant to a Degree in the same Strain. Slim, who knew how good Company he had been, cries, You'll certainly print this bright Conversation.

It is so; and hereby you may see how small an Appearance the prettiest Things said in Company make when in Print.

St. James's Coffee-house, June 20.

A Mail from Lisben has brought Advices of June the 12th, from the King of Portugal's Army encamped at Torre Allegada, which inform us, That the General of the Army called a Court-Martial on the 4th at the Camp of Gerumbena, where it was resolved to march with a Design to attempt the Succour of Olivenza. Accordingly the Army moved on the 5th, and marched towards Badajos. Upon their Approach, the Marquis de Bay detached fo great a Party from the Blockade of Olivenza, that the Marquis des Minas, at the Head of a large Detachment, covered a great Convoy of Provisions towards Olivenza, which threw in their Stores, and marched back to the main Army, without Molestation from the Spaniards. They add, That each Army must necessarily march into Quarters within Twenty Days.

Who soever can discover a Surgeon's Apprentice, who fell upon Mr. Bickerstass's Messenger, or (as the Printers calls him) Devil, going to the Press, and tore out of his Hand Part of his Essay against Duels, in the Fragments of which were the Words, You lie, and Man of Honour, taken up at the Temple-Gate; and the Words, Perhaps, and other Terms of Provocation, taken up at the Door of Young Man's Coffee-house, shall receive Satisfaction from Mr. Morphew, besides a Set of Arguments to be spoken to any Man in a Passion, which, if the said enraged Man listens to, will prevent Quarrelling.

By your Leave, Sir,

Mr. Bickerstaff does hereby give Notice, That he has taken the Two famous Universities of this Land under his immediate Care, and does hereby promise all Tutors and Pupils, That he will hear what can be said of each Side between them, and to correct them impartially, by placing them in Orders and Classes in the Learned World, according to their Merit.

A N Answer to the following Letter being abfolutely necessary to be dispatched with all Expedition, I must trespass upon all that come with Horary Questions into my Antichamber, to give the Gentleman my Opinion.

70 Isaac Bickerstaff Esq;

SIR,

June 18. 1709.

I know nor whether you ought to pity or laugh at me; for I am fallen desperately in Love with a profes'd Platonne, the most " unaccountable Creature of her Sex. To hear her talk Seraphicks, and run over Norris and " Moor, and Milton, and the whole Sex of Intel-· lectual Triflers, torments me heartily; for to a Lover who understands Metaphors, all this pretty Prattle of Idea's gives very fine Views of Pleasure, which only the dear Declaimer prevents, by understanding them literally. Why should she wish to be a Cherubim, when · 'tis Flesh and Blood that makes her adorable ? ' If I speak to her, that's a high Breach of the 'Idea of Intuition: If I offer at her Hand or Lip, the thrinks from the Touch like a Sensitive Plant, and would contract her felf into meer Spirit: She calls her Chariot, Vehicle; her furbelow'd Scarf, Pinnions: Her blue Mant and Petticoat is her Azure Dress; and her Footman goes by the Name of Oberon. "Tis my Misfortune to be Six Foot and a half ' high, Two full Spans between the Shoulders, 'Thirteen Inches Diameter in the Calves; and before I was in Love, I had a noble Stomach, and usually went to Bed sober with Two Bot-Nose is marked truly Aquiline. For these Reasons, I am in a very particular Manner her Aversion. What shall I do? Impudence it felt cannot reclaim her. If I write miserable, ' she reckons me among the Children of Perdition, and discards me her Region: If I assume the Gross and Substantial, The plays the real "Ghost with me, and vanishes in a Moment.

'I had Hopes in the Hypocrify of her Sex; but 'Perseverance makes it as bad as fixed Aversion. 'I desire your Opinion, Whether I may not law-fully play the Inquisition upon her, make use of a little Force, and put her to the Rack and the Torture, only to convince her, she has really fine Limbs, without spoiling or distorting them. I expect your Directions, e're I proceed to dwindle and fall away with Despair; which at present I don't think advisable; because, if she should recant, she may then hate me persent in the other Extreme for my Tenuity. I am (with Impatience)

Your most humble Servant;

Charles Sturdy.

My Patient has put his Case with very much Warmth, and represented it in so lively a Manner, that I see both his Torment and Tormenter with great Perspicuity. This Order of Platonick Ladies are to be dealt with in a peculiar Manner from all the rest of the Sex. Flattery is the general Way, and the Way in this Case; but it is not to be done grossy. Every Man that has Wit, and Humour, and Raillery, can make a good Flatterer for Woman in general; but a Platonne is not to be touched with Panegyrick: She will tell you, it is a Sensuality in the Soul to be delighted that Way. You are not therefore to commend, but filently consent to all she does, and says. You are to consider in her, the Scorn of you is not Humour, but Opinion.

There were some Years since a Set of these Ladies who were of Quality, and gave out, That Virginity was to be their State of Life during this mortal Condition, and therefore resolved to join their Fortunes, and erect a Nun-

Nunnery. The Place of Residence was pitched upon; and a pretty Situation, full of natural Falls and Rifings of Waters, with shady Coverts, and flowry Arbours, was approved by Seven of the Founders. There were as many of our Sex who took the Liberty to visit those Mansions of intended Severity; among others, a famous Rake of that Time, who had the grave Way to an Excellence. He came in first; but upon feeing a Servant coming towards him, with a Delign to tell him, this was no Place for him or his Companions, up goes my grave Impudence to the Maid: Young Woman, faid he, if any of the Ladies are in the Way on this Side of the House, pray carry us on the other Side towards the Gardens: We are, you must know, Gentlemen that are travelling England; after which we shall go into Foreign Parts, where some of us have already been. Here he bows in the most humble Manner, and kissed the Girl, who knew not how to behave to such a Sort of Carriage. He goes on: Now you must know we have an Ambition to have it to fay, That we have a Protestant Nunnery in England: But pray Mrs. Betty - Sir, the reply'd, my Name is Susan, at your Service. Then I heartily beg your Pardon - No Offence in the least (Tays she) for I have a Cousin-German whose Name is Betty. Indeed, said he, I protest to you that was more than I knew, I spoke at Random: But fince it happens that I was near in the Right, give me Leave to prefent this Gentlemen to the Favour of a civil Salute. His Friend advances, and so on, till that they had all faluted her. By this Means, the poor Girl was in the middle of the Crowd of these Fellows at a Loss what to do, without Courage to pass through 'em; and the Platonicks, at several Peep-holes, pale, trembling, and fretting.

ting. Rake perceiv'd they were observ'd, and therefore took Care to keep Suky in Char with Questions concerning their Way of Life; when appeared at last Madonella, a Lady who had writ a fine Book concerning the Recluse Life, and was the Projectrix of the Foundation. She approaches into the Hall; and Rake, knowing the Dignity of his own Mien and Afpect, goes Deputy from his Company. She begins; Sir, I am obliged to follow the Servant, who was fent out to know, What Affair could make Strangers press upon a Solitude which we, who are to inhabit this Place, have devoted to Heaven and our own Thoughts? Madam, replies Rake, (with an Air of great Distance, mixed with a certain Indifference, by which he could dissemble Dissimulation) your great Intention has made more Noise in the World than you design it should; and we Travellers, who have feen many foreign Institutions of this Kind, have a Curiofity to fee, in its first Rudiments, this Seat of Primitive Piety; for fuch it must be called by future Ages, to the Eternal Honour of the Founders. I have read Madonella's excellent and feraphick Discourse on this Subject. The Lady immediately answers, If what I have said could have contributed to raise any Thoughts in you that may make for the Advancement of intellectual and divine Conversation, I should think my felf extremely happy. He immediately fell back with the profoundest Veneration; then advancing, Are you then that admired Lady? If I may approach Lips which have uttered Things fo facred - He falutes her. His Friends followed his Example. The Devoted within flood in Amazement where this would end, to fee Madonella receive their Address and their Company. But Rake goes on ---- We would. would not transgress Rules; but if we may take the Liberty to fee the Place you have thought fit to chuse for ever, we would go into such Parts of the Gardens as is consistent with the Severities you have imposed on your selves. To be short, Madonella permitted Rake to lead her into the Assembly of Nuns, followed by his Friends, and each took his Fair One by the Hand, after due Explanation, to walk round the Gardens. The Conversation turned upon the Lillies, the Flowers, the Arbors, and the growing Vegetables; and Rake had the folemn Impudence, when the whole Company stood round him, to fay, That he fincerely wished Men might rise out of the Earth like Plants; and that our Minds were not of Necessity to be fullied with carnivorous Appetites for the Generation, as well as Support of our Species. This was spoke with so easie and fixed an Assurance, that Madonella aniwer'd, Sir, under the Notion of a pious Thought, you deceive your felf in wishing an Institution foreign to that of Providence: These Desires were implanted in us for reverend Purposes, in preserving the Race of Men, and giving Opporfunities for making our Chastity more Heroick. The Conference was continued in this Celeftial Strain, and carried on so well by the Managers on both Sides, that it created a Second and a

Any unnatural Part is long taking up, and as long laying aside; therefore Mr. Sturdy may assure himself, Platonica will fly for ever from a forward Behaviour; but if he approaches her according to this Model, she will fall in with the Necessities of mortal Life, and condescend

From my own Apartment, June 22.

The Evils of this Town increase upon me toso great a Degree, that I am half afraid I shall not leave the World much better than I found it. Several worthy Gentlemen and Criticks have applied to me, to give my Censure of an Enormity which has been revived (after being long oppressed) and is called Punning. I have several Arguments ready to prove, that he cannot be a Man of Honour who is guilty of this Abuse of Humane Society. But the Way to expose it, is, like the Expedient of curing Drunkenness, showing a Man in that Condition: Therefore I must give my Reader Warning, to expect a Collection of these Offences; without which Preparation, I thought it too adventurous to introduce the very Mention of it in good Company; and hope, I shall be understood to do it, as a Divine mentions Oaths and Curfes, only for their Condemnation. I shall dedicate this Discourse to a Gentleman my. very good Friend, who is the Janus of our Times. and whom, by his Years and Wit, you would take to be of the last Age; but by his Dress and Morals, of this.

St. James's Coffee-house, June 22.

Last Night arrived Two Mails from Holland, which bring Letters from the Hague of the 28th Instant, N.S. with Advice, That the Enemy lays encamped behind a strong Retrenchment, with the Marsh of Remieres on their Right and Lest, extending it self as far as Bethune: La Basse is in their Front, Lens in their Rear, and their Campis strengthened by another Line from Lens to Douay. His Grace accordingly march. ing from the Abbey at Looze, as did Prince Engene from Lampret, and advanced with all possible Diligence towards the Enemy. To favour the Appearance of an intended Assault, the Ways were made, and Orders distributed in such a Manner, that none in either Camp could have Thoughts of any Thing but charging the Enemy by Break of Day the next Morning: But foon al. ter the Fall of the Night of the 26th, the whole Army faced towards Tournay, which Place they invested early in the Morning of the 27th. The Mareschal Villars was so consident that we defigned to attack him, that he had drawn great Part of the Garrison of the Place, which is now invested, into the Field: For which Reason, it is prefumed it must submit within a small Time; which the Enemy cannot prevent, but by coming out of their present Camp, and hazarding a general Engagement. These Advices add, That the Garrison of Mons had marched our under the Command of Mareschal d'Arco; which, with the Bavarians, Walloons, and the Troops of Calogne, have joined the grand Army of the Enemy.

The TATLER. [N° 33.

By Mrs. Jenny Distaff, Half-Sifter to Mr. Bickerstaff.

From Thursd. June 23. to Saturd. June 25. 1709.

MY Brother has made an Excursion into the Country, and the Work against Saturday lies upon me. I am very glad I have got Pen and Ink in my Hand; for I have for some Time longed for his Absence, to give a Right Idea of Things, which I thought he put in a very odd Light, and some of them to the Disadvantage of my own Sex. It is much to be lamented, that it is necessary to make Discourses, and publish Treatises, to keep the horrid Creatures, the Men, within the Rules of common Decency. Turning over the Papers of Memorials or Hints for the ensuing Discourses, I find a Letter subscribed by Mr. Truman.

SIR,

Am lately come to Town, and have read your Works with much Pleasure. You make Wit subservient to good Principles and good Manners. Yet, because I design to buy the Tatlers for my Daughters to read, I take the Freedom to desire you, for the future, to say nothing about any Combat between Alexander and Thalestris.

whom the honoured Names of Mother, Daughter, and Sifter, are a Part : I had like to have named Wife in the Number; but the senseless World are so mistaken in their Sentiments of Pleasure, that the most amrable Term in Humane Life is become the Derision of Fools and Scorners. My Brother and I have at least Fifty Times quarrell'd upon this Topick. I ever argue. That the Frailties of Women are to be imputed to the false Ornaments which Men of Wit put upon our Folly and Coquetry. He lays all the Vices of Men upon Women's fecret Approbation of Libertine Characters in them. I did not care to give up a Point; but now he is out of the Way, I cannot but own I believe there is very much in what he afferted: For if you will believe your Eyes, and own, that the wickedest and the wittiest of them all marry one Day or other, Is it impossible to believe, that if a Man thought he should be for ever incapable of being received by a Woman of Merit and Honour, he would perfift in an abandon'd Way, and deny himself the Possibility of enjoying the Happiness of well-govern'd Desires, orderly Satistactions, and honourable Methods of Life? If our Sex were wife, a Lover should have a Cerrificate from the laft Woman he ferved, how he was turned away, before he was received into the Service of another: But at present any Vagabond is welcome, provided he promifes to enter into our Livery. It is wonderful, that we will not take a Footman without Credentials from his last Master; and in the greatest Concern of Life, we make no Scruple of falling into a Treaty with the most notorious Offender in his Behaviour against others. But this Breach of Commerce between the Sexes, proceeds from an unaccountable Prevalence of Custom, by which a Woman is to the last Degree reproach-

of Credit for being a Deceiver.

Since this Tyrant Humour has gained Place. Why are we represented in the Writings of Men in ill Figures for Artifice in our Carriage, when we have to do with a professed Impostor? When Oaths, Imprecations, Vows, and Adorations, are made use of as Words of Course, What Arts are not necessary to defend us from such as glory in the Breach of em? As for my Part, I am refolved to hear all, and believe none of em; and therefore folemnly declare, no Vow shall deceive me, but that of Marriage : For I am turned of Twenty, and being of a small Fortune, some Wit, and (if I can believe my Lovers and my Glass) Handsome, I have heard all that can be faid towards my Undoing, and shall therefore, for Warning-fake, give an Account of the Otfers that have been made me, my Manner of rejecting 'em, and my Affaltances to keep my Refolution.

In the Sixteenth Year of my Life, I fell into the Acquaintence of a Lady extremely well known in this Town for the quick Advancement of her Husband, and the Honours and Distinctions which her Industry has procured him, and all who belong to her. This excellent Body fate next to me for fome Months at Church, and took the Liberty (which she said her Years and the Zeal the had for my Welfare gave her Claim to) to affure me, that the observed some Parts of my Behaviour which would lead me into Errors, and give Encouragement to some to entertain Hopes I did not think of. What made you (faid she) look through your Fan at that Lord, when your Eyes should have been turned upward, or choled in Attention upon better Objects? I blushed, and pretended Fifty odd Excuses; but confounded my felf the more. She wanted nothing nothing but to fee that Confusion, and goes on: Nay, Child, do not be troubled that I take No. tice of it, my Value for you made me speak it; for though he is my Kinsman, I have a near er Regard to Virtue than any other Confidera tion. She had hardly done speaking, when this noble Lord came up to us, and lead her to her Coach.

My Head ran all that Day and Night on the exemplary Carriage of this Woman, who could be so virtuously impertinent, as to admonit one she was hardly acquainted with. However it struck upon the Vanity of a Girl that it may possibly be, his Thoughts might have been as favourable of me, as mine were amorous of him, and as unlikely Things as that have hap pened, if he should make me his Wife. She never mentioned this more to me; but I fill in all publick Places stole Looks at this Man, who easily observed my Passion for him. It is fo hard a Thing to check the Return of a greeable Thoughts, that he became my Dream, my Vision, my Food, my Wish, my Torment.

That Minister of Darkness, the Lady Semplormia, perceived too well the Temper I was in, and would one Day after Evening Service needs take me to the Park. When we were there, my Lord paffes by ; I flushed in a Flame. Mrs. Distaff, (faid she) You may very well remember the Concern I was in upon the first Notice! took of your Regard to that Lord, and forgive me, who had a tender Friendship for your Mother (now in her Grave) that I am vigilant of your Conduct. She went on with much Severity, and after great Solicitation, prevailed on me to go with her into the Country, and there spend the ensuing Summer out of the Way of a Man she saw I loved, and one whom

To her Country-House a Week or Two after we went: There was at the farther End of her Garden a Kind of Wilderness, in the Middle of which ran a foft Rivulet by an Arbour of Jessamin. In this Place I usually passed my retired Hours, and read some Romantick or Poetical Tale till the Close of the Evening. It was near that Time in the Heat of Summer, when gentle Winds, foft Murmurs of Water, and Notes of Nightingals had given my Mind an Indolence, which added to that Repose of Soul, Twilight and the End of a warm Day naturally throws upon the Spirits. It was at fuch an Hour, and in such a State of Tranquility I sat, when, to my unexpressible Amazement, I saw my Lord walking towards me, whom I knew not till that Moment to have been in the Country. I could observe in his Approach the Perplexity which attends a Man big with Delign; and T had, while he was coming forward, Time to reflect that I was betrayed; the Sense of which gave me a Refentment suitable to such a Baseness: But when he entered into the Bowar where I was, my Heart flew towards him, and, I contels, a certain Joy came into my Mind, with an Hope, that he might then make a Declaration of Honour and Passion. Tris threw my Eye upon him with fuch Tendernels, as gave him Power, with a broken Accent, to begin. And I recovered Power to fay, The Consternation I am in you will not, 1 hope, believe - An helples innocent Maid-Beides that, the Place - He faw me in as great Confution as himfelf; which attributing to the same Causes, he had the Audaciousties to throw himself at my Feet, talk of the Stilness of the Evening, and then ran into Deilications of my Person. Pure Flames, Constant Lov., Eternal Raptures, and a Thousand other Phrase drawn from the Images we have of Heaven, which ill Men use for the Service of Hell, were run over with uncommon Vehemence. After which, he feized me in his Arms: His Defign was too evident. In my utmost Diffres, I fell upon my Knees --- My Lord, piry me, on my Knees --On my Knees in the Caufe of Virtue, as you were lately in that of Wickedness. Can you think of destroying the Labour of a whole Life, the Purpose of a long Education, for the base Service of a sudden Appetite; to throw one that loves you, that doats on you, out of the Company and Road of all that is virtuous and Praiseworthy? Have I taken in all the Instructions of Piety, Religion, and Reason, for no other End, but to be the Sacrifice of Lust, and abandoned to Scorn? Assume your felf, my Lord, and do not attempt to vitiate a Temple facred to Innocence, Honour, and Religion. If I have injured you, stab this Bosom, and let me die, but not be ruined by the Hand I love. The Ardency of my Passion made me incapable of uttering more; and I faw my Lover aftonished and reformed by my Behaviour: When rushed in Semphroma. Ha! Faithless bafe Man, could you then iteal out of Town, and lark like a Robber about my House for fuch brutish Purposes!

My Lord was by this Time recovered, and fell into a violent Laughter at the Turn which Semphronia defigned to give her Villany. He bowed to me with the utmost Respect. Mrs. Distaff, said he, be careful hereaster of your Company; and so retired. The Friend Semphronia congratulated my Deliverance with a Flood of Tears.

This Nobleman has fince very frequently made his Addresses to me with Honour, but I have us often refused them; as well knowing, that Ramiliarity and Marriage will make him, on some ill-natured Occasion, call all I faid in the Arbour a Theatrical Action. Belides that, I glory in contemning a Man, who had Thoughts to my Difhonour. If this Method were the Impation of the whole Sex, Innocence would be only Drefs of Beauty; and all Affectation by any other Arts to please the Eyes of Men, would be banished to the Stews for ever. The Conquest of Passion gives Ten times more Happiness than we can reap from the Gratification of it; and the that has got over fuch a one as mine, will stand among Beaux and Pretty Fellows, with as much Safety as in a Summer's Day among Grafs-hoppers and Butterflies.

Having taken upon me to cure all the Di-ftempers which proceed from Affections of the Mind, I have laboured, fince I first kept this publick Stage, to do all the Good I could, and have perfected many Cures at my own Lodgings; carefully avoiding the common Method of Mountebanks, to do their most eminent Operati-

I have cured fine Mrs. Spy of a great Imperfection in her Eyes, which made her eternally rolling them from one Coxcomb to another in publick Places, in so languishing a Manner, that it at once lessened her own Power, and her Beholders Vanity. Twenty Drops of my lok, placed in certain Letters on which the attentively looked for half an Hour, have reflored her to the true Use of her Sight; which is, to guide, and not millead us. Ever fince the took this Liquor, which I call, Bickerstaff's Circumspettion-Water, the looks right forward, and can bear being looked at for half a Day without returning one Glance. This Water has a peculiar Vertue in it, which makes it the only true Colmetick or Beauty-Wash in the World : The Nature of it is such, that if you go to a Glass, with a Delign to admire your Face, it immediately changes it into downright Deformity. If you consult it only to look with a better Countenance upon your Friends, it immediately gives an Alacrity to the Visage, and new Grace to the whole Person. There is indeed a great deal owing to the Constitution of the Person to whom it is applied: It is in vain to give it when the Patient is in the Rage of the Distemper : a Bride in her first Month, a Lady soon after her Husband's being Knighted, or any Person of either Sex who has lately obtained any new good Fortune or Preferment, must be prepared fome Time before they use it. It has an Effect upon others, as well as the Patient, when it is taken in due Form. Lady Petulant has by Ma the the Use of it cured her Husband of Jealousy, and Lady Gad her whole Neighbourhood of Detraction.

The Fame of these Things, added to my being an old Fellow, makes me extreamly acceptable to the Fair Sex. You would hardly believe me, when I tell you there is not a Man in Town so much thest Delight as my self. They make no more of visiting me, than going to Madam d'Epingle's. There were two of them, namely, Damia and Clidamira, (I assure you Women of Distinction) who came to see me this Morning in their Way to Prayers, and being in a very diverting Humour as (Innocence always makes People chearful) they would need have me, according to the Distinction of pretty and very pretty Fellows, inform them if I thought either of them had a Title to the very Pretty among those of their own Sex; and if I did, which was the more deserving of the Two?

was the more deferving of the Two? To put them to the Tryal, Look ye, faid I, I must not rashly give my Judgment in Matters of this Importance; pray let me see you dance: I play upon the Kit. They immediately fell back to the lower End of the Room (You may be fure they curt'fy'd low enough to me): And began. Never were Two in the World fo equally matched, and both Scholars to my Namesake Isaac. Never was Man in so dangerous a Condition as my felf, when they began to expand their Charms. . Oh! Ladies, Ladies, cried I, not half that Air. you'll fire the House. Both smiled; for by the by, there's no carrying a Metaphor too far, when a Lady's Charms are spoke of. Some Body, I think, has called a fine Woman dancing, a Brandished Torch of Beauty. These Rivals moved with fuch an agreeable Freedom, that you would believe their Gesture was the necesfary Effect of the Mutick, and not the Product of Skill and Practice. Now Clidamira came on with with a Crowd of Graces, and demanded my Judgment with so sweet an Air --- And she had no sooner carried it, but Damia made her utterly forgot by a gentle finking, and a Rigadoon Step. The Contest held a full half Hour; and I protest. I saw no manner of Difference in their Perfections, till they came up together, and expected my Sentence, Look ye Ladies, faid I, I fee no Difference in the least in your Performance; but you Clidamira feem to be so well satisfied that I shall determine for you, that I must give it to Damia, who stands with so much Diffidence and Fear, after showing an equal Merit to what she pretends to. Therefore, Clidamira, you are a For, said I, Beauty loses its Force, it not accompanied with Modesty. She that has an humble Opinion of her felf, will have every Body's Applause, because she does not expect it; while the vain Creature loses Approbation through too great a Sense of deserving it.

From my own Apartment, June 27.

Being of a very spare and hective Constitution, I am forced to make frequent Journies of a Mile or two for fresh Air; and indeed by this last, which was no further than the Village of Chelsea, I am further convinced of the Necessity of travelling to know the World. For as it is usual with young Voyagers, assoon as they land upon a Shore, to begin their Accounts of the Nature of the People, their Soil, their Government, their Inclinations, and their Passions, so really I fancied I could give you an immediate Description of this Village, from the five Fields where the Robbers lie in wait, to the Costee-house where the Literari sit in Council. written by Ben Johnson) met with more Enormities by walking incog. than he was capable of correcting; and found great Mortifications in observing also Persons of Eminence, whom he before knew norhing of. Thus it fared with me, even in a Place so near the Town as this. When I came into the Coffee house, I had not Time to falute the Company, before my Eye was diverted by Ten Thousand Gimcracks round the Room and on the Sieling. When my first Astonishment was over, comes to me a Sage of a thin and meagre Countenance; which Aspect made me doubt, whether Reading or Fretting had made it so Philosophick: But I very foon perceived him to be of that Sect which the Antients call Gingivifta; in our Language, Tooth-Drawers. I immediately had a Respect for the Man; for these practical Philosophers go upon a very rational Hypothesis, not to cure, but take away the Part affected. My Love of Mankind made me very benevolent to Mr. Salter, for fuch is the Name of this eminent Barber and Antiquary. Men are usually, but unjustly, distinguished rather by their Fortunes, than their Talents, otherwise this Personage would make a great Figure in that Class of Men which I diftinguish under the Title of Odd Fellows. But it is the Missortune of Perfons of great Genious, to have their Faculties dissipated by Attention to too many Things at once. Mr. Salter is an Instance of this: If he would wholly give himself up to the String, instead of playing twenty Beginnings to Tunes, he might before he dies play Roger de Caubly quite out. I heard him go through his whole Round, and indeed I think he does play the merry Christ-Church Bells pretry justly; but he confes'd to me, he did that rather to show he was Orthodox, than that he valued himself upon the Musick it self. Or if he did proceed in his Anatomy, Why might not he hope in Time to cut off Legs, as well as draw Teeth? The Particularity of this Man put me into a deep Thought, whence it should proceed, that of all the lower Order Barbers (hould go. further in hitting the Ridiculous, than any. other Set of Men. Watermen brawl, Coblers, fing: But why must a Barber be for ever a Politician, a Mulician, an Anatomist, a Poet, and a Phylician? The learned Vossius says, his Barber used to comb his Head in Iambicks. And indeed in all Ages, one of this useful Profession. this Order of Colmetick Philosophers, has been celebrated by the most eminent Hands. You fee the Barber in Don Quixet is one of the princicipal Characters in the History, which gave me Satisfaction in the Doube, why Don Saltero write his Name with a Spanish Termination: For he is descended in a right Line, not from John Tradescan, as he himself affects, but from that memorable Companion of the Knight of Mancha. And I hereby certify all the worthy Citizens who travel to fee his Rarities, that his doublebarrelled Pistols, Targets, Coats of Mail, his Sclopeta, and Sword of Toledo, were left to his Ancestor by the said Don Quixor, and by the faid Ancestor to all his Progeny down to Don Saltero. Though I go thus far in Favour of Don Saltero's great Merit, I cannot allow a Liberty he takes of imposing several Names (without my Licence) on the Collections he has made, to the Abuse of the good People of England; one of which is particularly calculated to deceive Religious Persons, to the great Scandal of the Well-disposed, and may introduce Hererodox Opinions. He shows you a Straw Hat, which I know to be made by Madge Peckad, within three Miles of Bedford; and tells you, MS

it is Pontius Pilate's Wife's Chambermaid's Sifter's Hat. To my Knowledge of this very Hat, it may be added, that the Covering of Straw was never used among the Jews, lince it was demanded of them to make Bricks without it. Therefore this is really nothing, but under the fpecious Pretence of Learning and Antiquity, to impofe upon the World. There are other Things which I cannot tolerate among his Rarities; as, the Ching Figure of a Lady in the Glass-Case; the Mulian Engine for the Imprisonment of those who go Abroad with it: Both which I hereby order to be taken down, or elfe he may expect to have his Letters Patents for making Punch superfeded, be debarred wearing his Must next Winter, or ever coming to London without his Wife. It may perhaps be thought I have dwelt too long upon the Affairs of this Operator; but I delire the Reader to remember, that it is my Way to confider Men as they frand in Merit, and not according to their Fortune or Figure; and if he is in a Coffee house at the Reading hereof, him look round, and he will find there may be more Characters drawn in this Account than that of Don Sultere; for half the Politicians about him, he may observe, are, by their Place in Nature, of the Class of Tooth-Drawers. faid Ancided to all Mid Printer City to the Ton-that they may rationally enjoy to refined and infiructive a Pleasure as a just Representation of humane Life. The great Errors in Playing are admirably well exposed in Hamler's Direction to the Actors who are to play in his supposed Tragedy; by which we shall form our suture Judgments on their Behaviour, and for that Reason

Now this overdone, or come tardy off, though it make the Unskilful laugh, cannot but make the Judicious grieve. The Centures of which one must, in your Allowance, overflway a whole Theatre of others. Oh! there be Players that I have feen play, and heard others praise, and that highly, (not to speak it prophanely) that neither having the Accent of Christian, Pagan, or Norman, have so structed and bellowed, that I have thought some of Nature's Journeymen had made Men, and not made them well, they imitated Humanity so abominably. This should be reformed altogether; and let those that play your Clowns, speak no more than is set down for them: For there be of them that will of themselves laugh, to set on some Quantity of barren Spectators to laugh too; though in the mean Time, some necessary Question of the Play be then to be consider'd; that's villanous, and shews a most pitiful Ambition in the Fool that uses it.

It would be a very great Obligation, and an Affiltance to my Treatile upon Punning, if any one would please to inform in what Class, among the Learned who play with Words, to place the Author of the following Letter.

St. James's Coffee-house, June 29. Letters from Bruffels of the 2d of July, N. S. fay, That the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene having received Advice, That the Marshal Villars had drawn a considerable Body out of the Garrison of Tournay to reinforce his Army, marched towards that Place, and came before it early in the Morning of the 27th. As foon as they came into that Ground, the Prince of Naf-Jau was sent with a strong Detachment to take Post at St. Amand; and at the same Time my Lord Orkney received Orders to possess himself of Mortagne; both which were successfully executed; whereby we are Masters of the Scheld and the Scarp. Eight Men were drawn out of each Troop of Dragoons and Company of Foot in the Garrison of Tournay, to make up the Reinforcement which was order'd to join Marshal Villars; but upon Advice that the Allies were marchmarching towards Tournay, they endeavoured to return into the Town; but were intercepted by the Earl of Orkney, by whom that whole Budy was killed or taken. These Letters add, That 1200 Dragoons (each Horseman carrying a Foot-Soldier behind him) were detached from Mons to throw themselves into Tournay; but upon Appearance of a great Body of Horse of the Allies, retired towards Condé. We hear, That the Garrison does not consist of more than 3,500 Men. Of the 60 Battalions design'd to be employ'd in this Siege, 7 are English, viz. Two of Guards, and the Regiments of Argyle, Temple, Evans, and Meredith:

Here is an Habit or Custom which I have put my Patience to the utmost Stretch to have fuffered fo long, because several of my intimate Friends are in the Guilt; and that is, the Humour of taking Snuff, and looking dirty about the Mouth by Way of Ornament.

My Method is to dive at the Bottom of a Sore before I pretend to apply a Remedy. For this Reason, I sat by an eminent Story-teller and Politician who takes half an Ounce in five Seconds. and has mortgaged a pretty Tenement near the Town, meerly to improve and dung his Brains with this prolifick Powder. I observed this Gentleman t'other Day in the midst of a Story diverted from it by looking at something at a Distance, and I softly hid his Box. But he returns to his Tale, and looking for his Box, he turns to his Tale, and looking for his Box, he cries, And so Sir -- Then when he should have taken a Pinch; As I was saying, says he -- Has no Body seen my Box? His Friend befeeches him to finish his Narration. Then he proceeds; And so Sir -- Where can my Box be? Then turning to me; Pray Sir, Did you see my Box? Yes Sir, said I, I took it to see how long you could live without it. live without it. He resumes his Tale; and I took Notice, that his Dulness was much more regular and fluent than before. A Pinch supplied the Place of, As I was faying, And fo Sir; and he went on currently enough in that Style which the Learned call the Infipid. This Observation eafily led me into a Philosophick Reason for taking Snuff, which is done only to supply with Sensations the Want of Reflection. This I take to be an Euenna, a nostrum; upon which I hope to receive the Thanks of this Board. For as it is natural to lift a Man's Hand to a Sore, when you fear any Thing coming at you; fo when a Person feels his Thoughts are run our, and has no more to fay, it is as natural to fupply his weak Brain with Powder at the nearest Place of Access, viz. the Nostrils. This is so evident, that Nature suggests the Use according to the Indigence of the Persons who use this Medicine, without being prepoffesied with the Force of Fathion or Custom. For Example; the Native Hibermans, who are reckoned not much unlike the ancient Bestians, take this Specifick for Empti-nels in the Head, in greater Abundance than any other Nation under the Sun. The learned Sorus, as sparing as he is in his Words, would be still more filent if it were not for this Powder.

However low and poor, the taking Snuff argues a Man to be in his own Stock of Thought, or Means to employ his Brains and his Fingers, yet there is a poorer Creature in the World than He, and this is a Borrower of Snuff; a Fellow that keeps no Box of his own, but is always asking others for a Pinch. Such poor Rogues put me always in Mind of a common Phrase among School-Boys when they are composing their Exercife, who run to an upper Scholar, and cry, Pray give me a little Sense. But of all Things, commend me to the Ladies who are got into this pretty Help to Discourse. I have been this three Years perswading Sagissa to leave it off; but she talks io much, and is fo Learned, that the is above Contradiction. However, an Accident tother Day brought that about, which my Eloquence never could could accomplish: She had a very pretty Fellow in her Closet, who ran thither to avoid some Company that came to visit her. She made an Excuse to go in to him for some Implement they were talking of. Her eager Gallant snatched a Kiss; but being unused to Snuff, some Grains from off her upper Lip made him sneeze aloud, which alarm'd the Visitants, and has made a Discovery, that profound Reading, very much Intelligence, and a general Knowledge of who and who's together, cannot fill up her vacant Hours so much, but that she is sometimes obliged to descend to Entertainments less intellectual.

I know no Manner of News for this Place, but that Cynthis, having been long in Despair for the inexorable Clariss, lately resolved to fall in Love the good old Way of Bargain and Sale, and has pitched upon a very agreeable young Woman. He will undoubtedly succeed; for he accosts ber in a Strain of Familiarity, without breaking throw the Deserence that is due to Woman whom a Man would chuse for his Life. I have hardly ever heard rough Truth spoken with a better Grace than in this his Letter.

MADAM,

I Writ to you on Saturday by Mrs. Lucy, and give you this Trouble to urge the fame Request I made then, which was, that I may be admitted to wait upon you. I should be very far from desiring this, if it were a Transgression of the most severe Rules to allow it: I know you are very much above the little Arts which are frequent in your Sex, of giving unnecessary Torments to their Admirers; therefore hope, you'll do so much Justice fice to the generous Passion I have for you, asto let me have an Opportunity of acquainting you upon what Motives I pretend to your good Opinion. I shall not trouble you with my Sentiments, till I know how they will be receiv'd; and as I know no Reason why Difference of Sex should make our Language to each other differ from the ordinary Rules of right Reason: I shall affect Plainness and Sincerity in my Difcourse to you, as much as other Lovers do Perplexity and Rapture. Instead of faying, I shall die for you, I profess I should be glad to lead my Life with you: You are as beautiful, as witty, as prudent, and as good humour'd, as any Woman breathing; but I must confess to you, I regard all these Excellencies as you will please to direct them, for my Happiness or Mi-fery. With me, Madam, the only lasting Motive to Love is the Hope of its becoming mutual. I beg of you to let Mrs. Lucy fend me Word when I may attend you. I promise you, I'll talk of nothing but indifferent Things though at the fame Time I know not how I fhall approach you in the tender Moment of first feeing you, after this Declaration of.

MADAM,

While therefore the Administration of our Affairs is in my Hands, you hall from Time to Time have an exact Account f all false Lovers, and their shallow Pretences or breaking off; of all Termagant Wives who nake Wedlock a Yoke; of Men who affect the intertainments and Manners suitable only to our sex, and Women who pretend to the Conduct of such Affairs as are only within the Province of Men. The following Letter I lately received from Epsom.

Epfom, June 28.

IT is now almost Three Weeks fince what you writ about happen'd in this Place: The Quarrel between my Friends did not run for high as I find your Accounts have made it. The Truth of the Fact you shall have very ' faithfully. You are to understand, that the Persons concern'd in this Scence were, Lady Autumn, and Lady Springly : Autumn is a Perfon of good Breeding, Formality, and a fin-gular Way practifed in the last Age; and Lady Springly, a modern Impertinent of our Sex, who affects as improper a Familiarity, as the other does Distance. Lady Autumn knows to an Hair's Breadth where her Place is in all Affemblies and Conversations; but Springly neither gives nor takes Place of any Body, but understands the Place to figuify no more, than to have Room enough to be at Ease wherever the comes. Thus while Autumn takes the Whole of this Life to confift in understanding Punctilio and Decorum, Springly takes every Thing to be becoming which conrributes.

tributes to her Ease and Satisfaction. These Heroines have married Two Brothers, both Knights. Springly is the Spoufe of the elder, who is a Baronet; and Autumn, being a rich Widow, has taken the younger, and her Purit endowed him with an equal Fortune and Knighthood of the same Order. This lumble of Titles, you need not doubt, has been an aching Torment to Autumn, who took Place of the other on no Pretence, but her Careles. ness and Disregard of Distinction. The seent Occasion of Envy broiled long in the Breast of Autumn; but no Opportunity of Contention on that Subject happening, kept all Things quiet till the Accident, of which you demand an Account.

' It was given out among all the gay People of this Place, That on the 9th Instant several Damsels, swift of Foot, were to run for a Sute of Head-Clothes at the Old Wells. Lady Autumn on this Occasion invited Springly to go with her in her Coach to fee the Race. When they came to the Place where the Ga vernour of Epsom and all his Court of Citizens were affembled, as well as a Crowd of People of all Orders, a brisk young Fellow addresses himself to the younger of the Ladies, wiz. Springly, and offers her his Service to conduct her into the Musick-Room. Springby accepts the Compliment, and is led triumphantly through a bowing Crowd, while Autumm is left among the Rabble, and has much ado to get back into her Coach; but the did it at last: And as it is usual to see by the Horfes my Lady's present Disposition, she orders ' John to whip furiously Home to her Husband; where, when the enters, down the fits, began to unpin her Hood, and lament her foolish fond Heart to marry into a Family where flac

My Dear, faid he, Tell me no Dears, replied Autumn -- in the Presence of the Governour and all the Merchants --- What will the World fay of a Woman that has thrown her felf away at this Rate? Sir Thomas withdrew, and knew it would not be long a Secret to him; as well as that Experience told him, He that marries a Fortune, is of Course guilty of all Faults against his Wife, let them be com-mitted by whom they will. But Spraigly, an Hour or Two after, returns from the Wells, and finds the whole Company together. Down the fat, and a profound Silence enfued. You know a premeditated Quarrel usually begins and works up with the Words, Some People. 'The Silence was broken by Lady Autumn, who began to fay, There are Some Prople who fancy, that if Some People - Springly immediately takes her up; There are Some People who fancy, if Other People --- Autumn repartecs; People may give themselves Airs; but Other People, perhaps, who make less ado, may be, perhaps, as agreeable as People who set themselves out more. All the other Peop the Table fat mute, while these Two People who were quarrelling, went on with the Use of the Word People, inftancing the very Accidents between them, as if they kept only in distant Hints. Therefore, says Autumn, redning, There are some People will go Abroad in other People's Coaches, and leave those with whom they went to Shift for themselves; and if, perhaps, those People have married the younger Brother; yet, perhaps, be may be beholden to those People for what he is. White's Chocolate-boufe, June 30.

This Day appear'd here a Figure of a Person, whose Services to the Fair Sex have reduced him to a Kind of Existence, for which there is no Name. If there be a Condition between Life and Death, without being absolutely dead or living, his State is that. His Afpect and Complexion in his robult Days gave him the itlustrious Title of Africanus : But it is not only from the warm Climates in which he has feryed, nor from the Difasters which he has suffered, that he deferves the fame Appellation with that renowned Roman; but the Magnanimity with which he appears in his last Moments, is what gives him the undoubted Character of Here. Cato Itabbed himself, and Hannibal drank Poifon; but our Africanus lives in the continual Puncture of aching Bones and poisoned Juices. The Old Heroes fled from Torments by Death, and this Modern lives in Death and Torments, with an Heart wholly bent upon a Supply for remaining in them, An ordinary Spirit would fink under his Oppressions; but he makes an Advantage of his very Sorrow, and raises an Income from his Diseases, Long has this Worthy been converfant in Bartering, and knows that when Stocks are loweft, it is the Time to buy. Therefore, with much Prudence and Tranquility, he thinks, that now he has not a Bone found, but a Thousand nodous Parts for which the Anatomist have not Words, and more Difeases than the College ever heard of, it is the only Times to purchate an Annuity for Life. Sir Thomas told me, it was an Entertainment more supprizing and pleasant than can be imagined, to see an inhabitant of neither World without Hand to lift, or leg to move, fcarce Tongue to utter his Meaning, to keen upon biting

Sir Thomas added, that he would have bought Twelve Shillings a Year of him, but the he feared there was some Trick in it, and believed him already dead: What! Says that Knight, Is Mr. Partridge, whom I met just now going on both his Legs firmer than I can, allowed to be quite dead; and shall Africanus, without one Limb that can do its Office, be pronounced alive.

What heightened the Tragi-Comedy of this Market for Annuities was, that the Observation of it provoked Monoculus (who is the most Eloquent of all Men) to many excel-lent Reflections, which he spoke with the Vehemence and Language both of a Game-ster and an Orator. "When I cast (faid that delightful Speaker) my Eye upon thee, thou unaccountable Africanus, I cannot but call my felt as unaccountable as thou art; for certainly we were born to shew what Contradictions Nature is pleased to form in the fame Species. Hear am I, able to eat, to drink, to fleep, and to do all Acts of Nature, except begetting my Like; and yet by an unintelligible Force of Spleen and Fancy, I every Moment imagine I am dying. It may be thought very unaccountable, that I who can never be supposed to go to White's, should pretend to talk to you of Matters proper for, or in the Stile of, that Place. But though I never visit these publick Hanns, I converse with those who do; and for all they pretend so much to the contrary, they are as talkative as our Sex, and as much at a Loss to entertain the present Company, without sacrificing the last, as we our selves. This Reslection has led me into the Consideration of the Use of Speech; and made me look over in my Memory all my Acquaintance of both Sexes, to know to which I may more justly impute the Sin of Superfluous Discourse, in Regard to Conversation, without entring into it as I foresee my Acquaintance will immediately, upon starting this Subject, ask me, How I shall celebrate Mrs. Alse Copswood, the Yorkshire Huntress, who is come to Town lately, and moves as if she were on her Nag, and going to take a Five-Bar Gate; and is as loud as if she were sollowing her Dogs? I can easily answer that; for she is as soft as Damon, in Comparison of her Brother-in-Law Tom. Bellfrey, who is the most accomplished Man in this Kingdom for all Gentleman-like Activities and Accomplishments. It is allowed, that he is a profess'd Enemy to the Italian Performers in Mulick. But then for our own native Manner, according to the Cultoms and known Ufages of our Illand, he is to be preferr'd, for the Generality of the Pleasure he beflows, much before those Fellows, though they fing to full Theatres. For what is a Theatrical Voice to that of a Fox-hunter? I have been at a Musical Entertainment in an open Field, where it amaz'd me to hear to what Pitches the chief Masters would reach. There was a Meeting near our Seat in Staffordshire, and the most eminent of all the Counties of England were at it. How wonderful was the Harmony between Men and Dogs! Robin Cartail of Bucks was to answer to Jowler; Mr. Tinbreaft of Cornwal was appointed to open with Sweetlips, and Beaux Slimber, a Londoner, undertook to keep up with Trips, a Whelp just fet in: Tom. Bellfrey and Ringwood were coupled together, to fill the Cry on all Occasions. and be in at the Death of the Fox, Hare, or Stag ; for which both the Dog and the Man were excellently fuited, and loved one another, and were as much together as Banifter and King. When Jowler first alarm'd the Field, Cartail repeated every Note; Sweetlips's Treble succeeded, and shook the Wood; Tinbreaft eccho'd a Quarter of a Mile beyond it. We were foon after all at a Lofs, till we rid up, and found Trips and Shraber at a Default in Half Notes: But the Day and the Tune was recovered by Tom. Bellfrey and Ringwood, to the great loy of us all, tho' they drowned every other Voice: For Bellfrey carries a Note Four Furlongs, Three Rood, and Six Paces, further than any other in England.

I fear the Mention of this will be thought a Digression from my Purpose about Speech: But I answer, No. Since this is used where Speech rather should be employ'd, it may come into Consideration in the same Chapter: For Mr. Bellfrey being at a Visit where I was, viz. his Confin's (Lady Dainty's) in Soho, was asked, What Entertainments they had in the Country ? Now Bellfrey is very ignorant, and much a Clown: but confident withal. In a Word, he struck up a Fox-Chafe: Lady Dainty's Dog, Mr. Sippet, as The calls him, started and jump'd out of his Lady's Lap, and fell-a barking. "Bellfrey went on. and call'd all the neighbouring Parishes into the Square. Never was Woman in fuch Confusion as that delicate Lady. But there was no fropping her-Kinfman. A Room full of Ladies fell into the most violent Laughter : My Lady look'd as if the was thricking; Mr. Sipper in the Middle of the Room, breaking his Heart with barking, but all of us unbeard. As foon as Bellfrey became filent, up gets my Lady, and takes him by the Arm to lead him off: Bellfrey was in his Boots. As the was hurrying him away, his Spurs takes hold of her Petricoat; his Whip throws down a Cabinet of China: He cries. What! Are your Crocks rotten? Are your Petticoats ragged? A Man can't walk in your Houle for Trincums.

Every County of Great Britain has One Hundred or more of this Sort of Fellows, who Roar instead of Speaking. Therefore if it be true, that we Women are also given to greater Fluency of Words than is necessary, sure she that disturbs but a Room or a Family is more to be tolerated, than one who draws together Parishes and Counties, and sometimes (with an Estate that might make him the Blessing and Ornament of the World around him) has no other View and Ambition, but to be an Animal above Dogs and Horses, without the Relish of any one Enjoyment, which is peculiar to the Faculties of humane Nature. I know it will here be said, that talking of meer Country Squires at this Rate, is,

To prove any Thing against Valentine and Orsen. To prove any Thing against the Race of Men, you must take 'em as they are adorn'd with Education, as they live in Courts, or have received Instructions in Colleges.

But I am so full of my late Entertainment by Mr. Bellfrey, that I must defer pursuing this Subject to another Day; and wave the proper Observations upon the different Offenders in this Kind, ... fome by profound Eloquence on fmall Occafions, others by degrading Speech upon great Circumstances. Expect therefore to hear of the Whisperer without Bufiness, the Laugher without Wit, the Complainer without receiving Injuries, and a very large Crowd, which I Thall not forestall, who are common (though not commonly observ'd) Impertinents, whose Tongues are too voluble for their Brains, and are the general Despifers of us Women, though we have their Superiors, the Men of Sense, for our Servants.

Mrs. Distass has taken upon her, while she writes this Paper, to turn her Thoughts wholly to the Service of her own Sex, and to propose Remedies against the greatest Vexations attending Female Life. She has for this End written a small Treatise concerning the Second Word, with an Appendix on the Use of a Reply, very proper for all such as are married to Persons either ill-bred or ill-natured. There is in this Tract a Digression, for the Use of Virgins, concerning the Words, I will:

A Gentlewoman who has a very delicate Ear, wants a Maid who can whisper, and help her in the Government of her Family. If the said Servant can Clear-Starch, Lisp, and Tread softly, she shall have suitable Encouragement in her Wages.

By Mrs. Jenny Diftaff, Half-Sifter to Mr. Bickerstaff.

From Tuesday July 5. to Thursday July 7. 1709.

From my own Apartment, July 6.

I Find among my Brother's Papers the following Letter verbatim, which I wonder how he could suppress so long as he has, since it was sent him for no other End, but to show the good Effect his Writings have already had upon the ill Customs of the Age.

SIR.

THE End of all publick Papers ought to be the Benefit and Instruction, as well as the Diversion of the Readers: To which I see none so truly conducive as your late Performances; especially those tending to the rooting out from amongst us that Unchristian-like and Bloody Custom of Duelling; which, that you have already in some Measure perform'd, will appear to the Publick in the following no less True than Heroick Story.

' A Noble Gentleman of this City, who has the Honour of serving his Country as Major in the Train-Bands, being at that General Mart of Stock-Jobbers call'd Jonathans, endeavouring to raise himself (as all Men of Honour ought) to the Degree of Colonel at least; it happened that he bought the Bear of another Officer, who, though not Commissioned in the Army, yet no less eminently serves the Publick than the other, in raising the Credit of the Kingdom, by raifing that of the Stocks. However, having fold the Bear, and Words arifing about the Delivery, the most Noble Major, no less scorning to be outwitted in the Coffee-house, than to run into the Field, according to Method, abused the other with the Titles of, Rogue, Villain, Bearskin-Man, and the like. Whereupon Satisfaction was demanded, and accepted: So, forth the Major march'd, commanding his Adversary to follow. To a most spacious Room in the Sheriff's House, near the Place of Quarrel, they come; where, having due Regard to what you have lately publish'd, they resolved not to shed one another's Blood in that barbafrous Manner you prohibited; yet, not wil-NA

I fear the Word Bear is hardly to be underflood among the polite People; but I take the Meaning to be, That one who ensures a Real Value upon an Imaginary Thing, is faid to sell a Bear, and is the same Thing as a Promise among Courtiers, or a Vow between Lovers. Dear Sir, convince 'em, that it never was, is, .. or ever will be, either of them; nor ever did, does, or to all Futurity ever can, look like either of them; but that it is the most cursed Disturbance in Nature, which is possible to be inflicted on Mankind, under the noble Definition of a Sociable Creature. In doing this, Sir, you will oblige more Humble Servants, than can find Room to subscribe their Names. or

In Pursuance of my last Date from hence, I am to proceed on the Accounts I promised of several Personages among the Men, whose conspicuous Fortunes, or Ambition in showing their Follies, have exalted them above their Fellows: The Levity of their Minds is visible in their every Word and Gesture, and there is not a Day passes but puts me in Mind of Mr. Wycherley's Character of a Coxcomb: He is ugly all over with the Affectation of the fine Gentleman. Now though the Women may put on Sosiness in their No.

Looks, or affected Severity, or impertinent Gaiety, or pert Smartness, their Self-Love and Admiration cannot, under any of these Disguises, appear fo invincible as that of the Men. You may eafily take Notice, that in all their Actions there is a fecret Approbation, either in the Tone of their Voice, the Turn of their Body, or Cast of their Eye, which shows that they are extremely in

Take one of your Men of Bufiness, he shall keep you half an Hour with your Hat off, entertaining you with his Confideration of that Affair you spoke of to him last, till he has drawn a Crowd that observes you in this Grimace. Then when he is publick enough, he immediately runs into Secrets, and falls a whilpering. You and he make Breaks with Adverbs; as, But however, thus far; and then you whisper again, and so on, till they who are about you are difperfed, and your bufy Man's Vanity is no longer gratified by the Notice taken of what Importance he is, and how inconsiderable you are; for your Pretender to Business is never in Secret, but in Publick.

There is my dear Lord No-where, of all Men the most gracious and most obliging, the Terror of all Valets de Chambre, whom he opprefies with Good-Breeding, in enquiring for my good Lord, and for my good Lady's Health. This imitable Courtier will whisper a Privy-Counsellor's Lacquey with the utmoit Goodness and Conde fcention, to know when they next fit; and is throughly taken up, and thinks he has a Part in a Secret, if he knows that there is a Secret. What it is he will whisper you, that Time will discover; then he shrugs, and calls you back again -- Sir, I need not fay to you, That thefe Things are not to be spoken of --- And bark'ee, No Names, I would not be quoted. Quiet and his own they were rotten.

But I will forget him, and give my Hand to the courteous Umbra; He is a fine Man indeed. but the foft Creature bows below my Apron-String before he takes it; yet after the first Ceremonies, he is as familiar as my Phyfician; and his Inlignificancy makes me half ready to complain to him of all I would to my Doctor. He is fo courteous, that he carries half the Meffages of Ladies Ails in Town to their Midwives and Nurses. He understands too the Art of Medicine as far as to the Cure of a Pinaple or a Rash. On Occasions of the like Importance, he is the most assiduous of all Men living, in consulting and fearching Precedents from Family to Family; then he speaks of his Obsequiousness and Diligence in the Style of real Services. If you fneer at him, and thank him for his great Friendthip, he bows, and fays, Madam, all the good Offices in my Power, while I have any Knowledge or Credit, fhall be at your Service. The Confideration of fo shallow a Being, and the intent Apa plication with which he purfues Trifles, has made me carefully reflect upon that Sort of Men we usually call an Impertinent : And I am, upon mature Deliberation, so far from being offended with him, that I am really oblig'd to him; for though he will take you aside, and talk half an Hour upon Marters wholly infignificant with the most solemn Air, yet I consider, that these Things are of Weight in his Imagination, and he thinks he is communicating what is for my Service. If therefore it be a just Rule, to judge of a Man by his Intention, according to the Equity of Goodbreeding, he that is impertinently kind or wife, to do you Service, ought in Return to have a proportionable Place both in your Affection and Esteem; so that the courteous Umbra deserves the Favour of all his Acquaintance; for though he never ferv'd 'em, he is ever willing to do it; and believes he does it.

As impotent Kindness is to be returned with all our Abilities to oblige; fo impotent Malice is to be treated with all our Force to depress it. For this Reason, Fly-Blow (who is received in all the Families in Town through the Degeneracy and Iniquity of their Manners) is to be treated like a Knave, though he is one of the weakest of Fools: He has by Rote, and at Second-hand, all. that can be faid of any Man of Figure, Wit, and Virtue in Town. Name a Man of Worth, and this Creature tells you the worst Passage of his Life. Speak of a beautiful Woman, and this Puppy will whifper the next Man to him, the' he has nothing to fay of her. He is a Fly that feeds on the fore Part, and would have nothing to live on, if the whole Body were in Health. You may know him by the Frequency of pronouncing.

The Approaches before Tournay have been carried on with great Success; and our Advices from the Camp before that Place of the 11th Instant fay, That they had already made:a Lodgment on the Glacis. Two Hundred Boats were come up the Scheld with the heavy Artillery and Ammunition, which would be employed in difmounting the Enemy's Defences, and rais'd on the Bat-teries the 15th. A great Body of Miners are summoned to the Camp to countermine the Works of the Enemy. We are convinced of the Weakness of the Garrison, by a certain Account, That they call'd a Council of War, to confult whether it was not advisable to march into the Citadel, and leave the Town defenceless. We are affured. That when the Confederate Army was advancing towards the Camp of Marshal Villars, that General dispatch'd a Courier to his Master with a Letter, giving an Account of their Approach. which concluded with the following Words: The Day begins to break, and your Majesty's Army is already in Order of Battle. Before Noon, I hope to have the Honour of congratulating your Majesty on the Success of a great Action; and you shall be very well fatisfied with the Marshal Villars.

It is to be noted, That when any Part of this Paper appears dull, there is a Design in it.

Grecian Coffee-house, July 9. AS I am call'd forth by the immense Love! bear to my Fellow Creatures, and the warm Inclination I feel within me, to stem, as far as I can, the prevailing Torrent of Vice and Ignorance; so I cannot more properly pursue that noble Impulse, than by setting forth the Excellence of Virtue and Knowledge in their native and beautiful Colours. For this Reason I made my late Excursion to Oxford, where those Qualities appear in their highest Lustre, and are the only Pretences to Honour and Di-Superiority is there given in Proportion to Men's Advancement in Wisdom and Learning; and that just Rule of Life is so univerfally received among those happy People, that you shall see an Earl walk bear-headed to the Son of the meanest Artificer, in Respect to feven Years more Worth and Knowledge than the Nobleman is possess'd of. In other Places they bow to Men's Fortunes, but here to their Understandings. It is not to be expres'd, how pleasing the Order, the Discipline, the Regularity of their Lives, is to a Philosopher, who has, by many Years Experience in the World, learn'd to contemn every Thing but what is rever'd in this Mansion of select and well-taught Spirits. How was I pleas'd when I look'd round at St. Mary's. and could, in the Faces of the ingenious Youth. fre Ministers of State, Counsellors, Bishops, and Judges. Here only is Humane Life! Here only the Life of Man is a Rational Being! Here Menunderstand and are employed in Works worthy their noble Nature. This transitory Being passes away in an Employment not unworthy a future State, the Contemplation of the great Decrees of Providence. Each Man lives as if he were to answer the Questions made to Job; Where wast thou when Flaid the Foundations of the Earth ? Who shut up the Sea with Doors; and Jaid, hitherto shalt thou come, and no further? Such Speculations make Life agreeable, make Death wel-

But alas! I was torn from this noble Society by the Business of this dirry mean World, and the Cares of Fortune: For I was oblig'd to be in London against the 7th Day of the Term, and accordingly govern'd my felf by my Oxford Almanack, and came last Night; but find, to my great Aftonishment, that this ignorant Town: began the Term on the 24th of the last Month. in Opposition to all the Learning and Astronomy. of the famous University of which I have been fpeaking; according to which, the Term certainly was to commence on the 1st Instant. You may be fure, a Man who has turn'd his Studies: as I have, could not be mistaken in Point of Time; for knowing I was come to Town in Term, I examin'd the passing Moments very. narrowly, and called an eminent Astronomer to my Affiltance. Upon very strict Observation

we found, that the Cold has been so severe this last Winter, (which is allow'd to have a benum. ming Quality) that it retarded the Earth in moving round from Christmas to this Season full feven Days and two Seconds. My Learned Friend affured me further, That the Earth had lately received a Shog from a Comet that cross'd its Vortex, which, if it had come Ten Degrees nearer us, had made us lose this whole Term, I was indeed once of Opinion, That the Grego. rian Computation was the most regular, as being Eleven Days before the Julian; but am now fully convinc'd, that we ought to be Seven Days after the Chancellor and Judges, and Eighteen before the Pope of Rome; and that the Oxonion Computation, is the best of the Three.

These are the Reasons which I have gather'd from Philosophy and Nature; to which I can add other Circumstances in Vindication of the Account of this Learned Body who publish'd this

From my own Apartment, July 19.

The Subject of Duels has, I find, been state with so good Success, that it has been the sequent Subject of Conversation among posite Men and a Dialogue of that Kind has been transmitted to me verbatim, as follows. The Person concern'd in it are Men of Honour, and Experience in the Manners of Men, and have faller upon the truest Foundation, as well as search'd the Bottom, of this Evil.

Mr. Sage. If it were in my Power, every Mar that drew his Sword, unless in the Service, a purely to desend his Life, Person, or Goods from Violence, (I mean abstracted from al Puncto's or Whims of Honour) should ride the Wooden Horse in the Tilt-Yard for such First Offence, for the Second stand in the Pillory and for the Third be Prisoner in Bedlam to Life.

Colonel Plume. I remember, that a Rencomter or Duel was so far from being in Fashion among the Officers that serv'd in the Parliament Army, that on the contrary, it was as disreptable, and as great an Impediment to Advancement in the Service, as being bashful in Time of Action.

Sir Mark. Yet I have been inform'd by fome old Cavaliers, of famous Reputation for brave and gallant Men, that they were much more in Mode among their Party, than they have been during this last War.

Col Plume. That is true too Sir.

Mr. Sage. By what you say, Gentlemen, one hould think that our present Military Officers are compounded of an equal Proportion of both hose Tempers; since Duels are neither quite discountenanc'd, nor much in vogue.

Sir Mark. That Difference of Temper, in Regard to Duels, which appears to have been between the Court and Parliament-Men of the Sword, was not (I conceive) for Want of Courage in the latter, nor of a liberal Education, because there were some of the best Families in England engaged in that Party; but Gallantry and Mode, which glitter agreeably to the Imagination, were encouraged by the Court, as promoting its Splendour; and it was as natural that the contrary Party (who were to recommend themselves to the Publick for Men of serious and solid Parts) should deviate from every Thing Chimerical.

Mr. Sage. I have never read of a Duel among the Romans; and yet their Nobility used more Liberty with their Tongues than one may do

Sir Mark. Perhaps the Romans were of Opinion, that ill Language, and brutal Manners, reflected only on those who were guilty of 'em; and that a Man's Reputation was not at all clear'd by cutting the Person's Throat who had reflected upon it. But the Custom of those Times had fixed the Scandal in the Action; whereas now it lies in the Reproach.

Mr. Sage. And yet the only Sort of Duel that one can conceive to have been fought upon Motives truly honourable and allowable, was that between the Horatii and Curiatii.

Sir Mark. Colonel Plume, Pray what was the Method of Single Combat in your Time among the Cavaliers? I suppose, that as the Use of Clothes continues, though the Fashion of them.

has been mutable; fo Duels, tho ftill in Use have had in all Times their particular Modes of Berformance.

Col. Plume. We had no conftant Rule, bet generally conducted our Dispute and Tilt according to the last that had happen'd between Persons of Reputation among the very Top Fellows for Bravery and Gallantry.

Sir Mark. If the Fashion of Quarvelling and Tilting was so often chang'd in your Time, Colonel Plume, a Man might fight; yet lose his Credit for want of understanding the Fa-

Col. Plume. Why, Sir Mark, in the Beginning of July, a Man would have been centur'd for want of Courage; or been thought indigent of the true Notions of Honour, if he had put up Words; which in the End of September following, one could not refent without passing for a brutal and quarressome Fellow.

Sir Mark. But Colonel, Were Duels and Rencounters most in Fashion in those Days?

Col. Plume. Your Men of nice Honour, Sir, were for avoiding all Censure of Advantage which they supposed might be taken in a Rencounter; therefore they used Seconds, who were to see that all was upon the Square, and make a faithful Report of the whole Combat; but in a little Time it became a Fashion for the Seconds to fight, and I'll tell you how it happened.

Mr. Sage. Pray do, Colonel Plume, and the Method of a Duel at that Time, and give us fome Notion of the Puncto's upon which your nice Men quarrelled in those Days.

Col. Plume. I was going to tell you, Mr. Sage, That one Cornet Modifb had defired his Friend, Gaptain Smart,'s Opinion in some Affair, but did not follow it; upon which Captain Smart sent Major lajor Adroit (a very Topping Fellow of those times) to the Person that had slighted his Adice. The Major never enquired into the Quarel, because it was not the manner then among he very Topping Fellows; but got two Swords of an equal Length, and then waited upon Cornet Medish, designing him to choose his Sword, and meet his Friend Captain Smart. Cornet Medish came with his Friend to the Place of Combat; there the Principals put on their Pumps, and striped to their Shirts, to show they had nothing but what Men of Honour carry about em, and then engaged.

Sin Mark, And did the Seconds stand by

Sir?

Col. Plume. It was a received Custom till that Time; but the Swords of those Days being pretty long, and the Principals acting on both Sides upon the Defensive, and the Morning being froity, Major Adroit desired that the other Second, who was also a very Topping Fellow, would try a Thrust or two only to keep them warm, till the Principals had decided the Matter, which was agreed to by Modish's Second, who presently whipt Adroit through the Body, disarm'd him, and then parted the Principals, who had receiv'd no Harm at all.

Mr. Sage. But was not Adroit laugh'd at? Col. Plume. On the Contrary, the very Topping Fellows were ever after of Opinion, That no Man who deserved that Character, could serve as a Second, without Fighring; and the Smarts and Modishes finding their Account in it, the Humour took without Opposition.

Mr. Sage. Pray Colonel, How long did that Fashion continue?

Col. Plume. Not long neither, Mr. Sage; for as soon as it became a Fashion, the very Topping Fellows thought their Honour reflected up-

Sir Mark. Blefs me! If that Cuftom had on our very Pretty Fellows; for they feem to be proper Men to officer, animate, and keep upa Army: But, pray Sir, How did that fociable Mrs ner of Tilting grow out of Mode?

Col. Plume. Why, Sir, Pll tell you; It was it all R Law among the Combarants, That the Pan which happen'd to have the first Man disarm'de kill'd, should yield as yanguish'd; which fore People thought might encourage the Modifie and Smarts in quarrelling, to the Destruction of only the very Topping Fellows; and as foons this Reflection was started, the very Topping Fellows thought it an Incumbrance upon ther Honour to fight at all themselves. Since that Time, the Modifies and the Smarts, throughout all Europe, have extoll'd the Frenth King's Edict.

Sir Mark. Our very pretty Fellows, whom I take to be the Successors of the very Topping Fellows, think a Quarrel fo little Fashionable, that they will not be exposed to it by another Man's Vanity, or Want of Sense. Mr. Sage. But, Colonel, I have observ'd in your Account of Duels, that there was a great Exactness in avoiding all Advantage that might possibly be between the Combatants.

Col. Plume. That's true, Sir; for the Wes-pons were always equal.

Mr. Sage. Yes, Sir; but suppose an active, adroit, ftrong Man, had infulted an aukward, or a feeble, or an unpractis'd Swords-man.

Col. Phone. Then, Sir, they fought with

Piftols.

Mr. Sage. But, Sir, there might be certain Myantage that Way; for a good Marks-man will be fure to hit his Man at 20 Yards Diftance; and a Man whose Hand shakes (which is common to Men that debauch in Pleasures, or have or us'd Pistols out of their Holsters) won't venture to fire, unless he touches the Person he hoots at. Now, Sir, I am of Opinion, that one can get no Honour in killing a Man (if one has tall Rug) as the Gamesters say, when they have a Trick to make the Game fecure, though they feem to play upon the Square.

Sir Mark. In Truth, Mr. Sage, I think fuch Fact must be Murder in a Man's own private Conscience, whatever it may appear to the World.

Col. Plume. I have known some Men so nice. that they would not fight but upon a Cloak without Piftols.

Mr. Sage. I believe a Custom, well established, would outdo the Grand Monarch's Edict.

Sir Mark. And Bullies would then leave off their long Swords; but I don't find that a very Pretty Fellow can stay to change his Sword, when he is insulted by a Bully with a long Diego, the his own at the same time be no longer than a Pen-knife; which will certainly be the Case, if fuch little Swords are in Mode. Pray Colonel, how was it between the Hectors of your Time and the very Topping Fellows?

Col. Plume. Sir, Long Swords happened to be generally worn in those Times.

Mr. Sage. In answer to what you were saying, Sir Mark, give me Leave to inform you, that your Knight-Errants, (who were the very Pretty Fellows of those Ancient Times) thought they could not honourably yield, though they had fought their own trusty Weapons to the Stumps; but would venture as boldly with the Page's Leaden

Sir Mark. I am of Opinion, Mr. Sage, tha Fashion governs a very pretty Fellow; Nature or common Sense, your ordinary Persons, and sometimes Men of fine Parts.

Mr. Sage. But what is the Reason, that Men of the most excellent Sense and Morals (in other Points) affociate their Understandings with the very Pretty Fellows in that Chimæra of a Duel?

Sir Mark. There's no disputing against to great a Majority.

Mr. Sage. But there is one Scraple, (Col. Plume) and I have done: Don't you believe, there may be some Advantage even upon a Cloak with Piftols? Which a Man of nice Honour would scruple to take.

Col. Plume. Faith, I can't tell, Sir; but fince one may reasonably suppose, that (in such a Case) there can be but one so far in the Wrong as to occasion Matters to come to that Extremity, I think the Chance of being kill'd should fall but on one; whereas by their close and desperate Manner of Fighting, it may very probably happen to both.

Sir Mark. Why Gentlemen, if they are Men of such nice Honour, (and must fight) there will be no fear of foul Play, if they threw up Cross

Will's Coffee-house, July 11.

T Etters from the City of London give an Account of a very great Confe nation that Place is in at present, by Reason of a late Enquiry made at Guildhall, Whether a Noble Person has Parts enough to deserve the Enjoyment of the great Estate of which he is possess'd? The City is apprehensive, that this Precedent may go further than was at first imagin'd. The Person against whom this Inquisition is set up by his Relations, is a Peer of a neighbouring Kingdom, and has in his Youth made some few Bulls, by which it is infinuated, that he has forfeited his Goods and Chattels. This is the more aftonishing, in that there are many Persons in the faid City who are still more guilty than his Lordship, and who, though they are Ideots, do not only possess, but have also themselves acquired great Estates, contrary to the known Laws of this Realm, which yests their Possessions in the Crown.

There is a Gentleman in the Coffee-house at this Time exhibiting a Bill in Chancery against his Father's younger Brother, who by some strange Magick has arrived at the Value of half a Plumb, as the Citizens call an Hundred Thousand Pounds; and in all the Time of growing up to that Wealth, was never known in any of his ordinary Words or Actions to discover any Proof of Reason. Upon this Foundation my Friend has fer forth, that he is illegally Master of his Coffers, and has writ two Epigrams to fignify his own Pretentions and Sufficiency for spending that Estate. He has inserted in his Plea some Things which I fear will give Offence; for he pretends to argue, that tho' a Man has a little of the Knave mix'd with the Fool, he is nevertheless liable to the Loss of Goods; and makes the Abuse of Reason as just an Avoidance of an Estate as the total Absence of it. This is what can never pals; but witty Men are fo full of themfelves, that there is no perswading 'em; and my Friend will not be convinced, but that upon quoting Solomon, who always used the Word Fool as a Term of the same Signification with Unjust, and makes all Deviation from Goodness and Virtue to come under the Notion of Folly, I fay he doubts not, but by the Force of this Authority, let his Ideot Uncle appear never so great a Knave, he shall prove him a Fool at the same Time.

This Affair led the Company here into an Examination of these Points; and none coming here but Wits, what was afferted by a young Lawyer, that a Lunatick is in the Care of the Chancery, but a Fool in that of the Crown, was received with general Indignation. 'Why that? fays old Renault. Why that ? Why must a Fool be a Courtier more than a Madman? This is the Iniquity of this dull Age: I remember the Time when it went on the mad Side; all your Top Wits were Scowrers, Rakes, Roarers, and Demolishers of Windows. I knew a mad Lord who was drunk five Years together, and was the Envy of that Age; who is faintly imitated by the dull Pretenders to Vice and Madness in this. Had he liv'd to this Day, there had not been a Fool in Fashion in the whole Kingdom. When Renault had done speaking. a very worthy Man affumed the Discourse: This is (faid he) Mr. Bickerstaff, a proper Argument for you to treat in your Article from this Place; and if you would fend your Pacolet into all our Brains, you would find, that a little Fibre or Valve, scarce discernable, makes the Distinction between Politician and an Ideor. We should therefore throw a Veil upon those unbappy Instances of humane Nature, who feem to breath without the Direction of Reafon and Understanding, as we should avert our ' Eyes with Abhorrence from such as live in perpetual Abuse and Contradiction to these noble Faculties. Shall this unfortunate Man be di-' vested of his Estate, because he is tractable and 'indolent, runs in no Man's Debt, invades no ' Man's Bed, nor spends the Estate he owes his 'Children and his Character; when one who ' shews no Sense above him, but in such Practi-' ces, shall be esteem'd in his Senses, and possibly may pretend to the Guardianship of him who ' is no ways his Inferior, but in being less wicked? We see old Age brings us indifferently in-' to the same Impotence of Soul, wherein Nature ' has plac'd this Lord.

There is something very fantastical in the Distribution of Civil Power and Capacity among Men. The Law certainly gives these Persons into the Ward and Care of the Crown, because that is best able to protect 'em from Injuries, and the Impositions of Crast and Knavery; that the Life of an Ideot may not ruin the Intail of a noble House, and his Weakness may not frustrate the Industry or Capacity of the Founder of his Family. But when one of bright Parts, as we say, with his Eyes open, and all Men's Eyes upon him, destroys those Purposes, there is no Remedy. Folly and Ignorance are punish'd! Folly and Guilt are tolerated!

tolerated! Mr. Lock has fomewhere made a Di-Stinction between a Madman and a Fool: A Fool is he that from right Principles makes a wrong Conclusion; but a Madman is one who draws a just Inference from false Principles. Thus the Fool who cut off the Fellow's Head that lay affeen. and hid it, and then waited to fee what he would fay when he awak'd and mis'd his Head-piece, was in the Right in the first Thought, that a Man would be fur prized to find fuch an Alteration in Things fince he fell afleep; but he was a little mistaken to imagine he could awake at all after his Head was off. A Madman fancies himself a Prince; but upon his Mistake, he acts suitably to that Character; and tho' he is out in supposing he has Principalities, while he drinks Gruel, and lies in Straw, yet you shall see him keep the Port of a diffrested Monarch in all his Words and Actions. These Two Persons are equally taken into Custody: But what must be done to half this good Company, who every Hour of their Life are knowingly and wittingly both Fools and Madmen, and yet have Capacities both of forming Principles, and drawing Conclusions, with the full Use of Reason?

From my own Apartment, July 11.

This Evening some Ladies came to visit my Sifter Jenny; and the Discourse, after very many frivolous and publick Matters, turned upon the main Point among the Women, the Palfion of Love. Sappho, who always leads on this Occasion, began to show her Reading, and told us, That Sir John Suckling and Milton had, upon a parallel Occasion, said the tenderest Things she had ever read. The Circumstance, faid The, is fuch as gives us a Notion of that Protecting Part which is the Duty of Men in their honourable Defigns upon, or Possession of Women.

Women. In Suckling's Tragedy of Bronnoralt, he makes the Lover iteal into his Mistress's Bedchamber, and draw the Curtains; then, when his Heart is full of her Charms, as she lies sleeping, instead of being carried away by the Violence of his Desires into Thoughts of a warmer Nature, Sleep, which is the Image of Death, gives this generous Lover Reslections of a different Kind, which regard rather her Sasety than his own Passion. For, beholding her as she lies sleeping, he utters these Words:

So Misers look upon their Gold,

The Pleasure of the Sight scarce equalling The Jealousy of being disposses'd by others.

· Her Face is like the Milky Way i'th' Sky,

· A Meeting of gentle Lights without Name!

Heav'ns! Shall this fresh Ornament of the World, These precious Love-Lines, pass with other common Things

Amongst the Wasts of Time? What Pity'twere!

When Milton makes Adam leaning on his Arm, beholding Eve, and lying in the Contemplation of her Beauty, he describes the utmost Tenderness and Guardian Affection in one Word:

Adam with Looks of Cordial Love Hung over her enamour'd.

This is that Sort of Passion which truly deferves the Name of Love, and has something more generous than Friendship it self; for it has a constant Care of the Object beloved, abstracted from its own Interests in the Possession of it. Sappho was proceeding on the Subject, when my Sister produced a Letter sent to her in the Time of my Absence, in Celebration of the Marriage State, which is the Condition O 3 wherein only this Sort of Passion reigns in full Authority. The Epistle is as follows:

Dear Madam,

Y Our Brother being absent, I dare take the Liberty of writing to you my Thoughts of that State, which our whole Sex either is or desires to be in: You'il eatily guess I mean Matrimony, which I hear so much decry'd, that it was with no small Labour I maintained my Ground against Two Opponents; but, as your Brother observ'd of Socrates, I drew them into my Conclusion from their own Concessions; thus:

In Marriage are Two happy Things allow'd, A Wife in Wedding Sheets, and in a Shrowd. How can a Marriage State then be accur'd, Since the last Day's as happy as the First?

If you think they were too easily confuted, you may conclude them not of the First Sense, by their talking against Marriage.

Mariana.

I observed Sappho began to redden at this Epistle; and turning to a Lady, who was playing with a Dog she was so fond of, as to carry him Abroad with her; Nays, says she, I cannot blame the Men if they have mean Ideas of our Souls and Affections, and wonder so many are brought to take us for Companions for Life, when they see our Endearments so triflingly placed: For, to my Knowledge, Mr. Truman would give half his Estate for half the Affection you have shown to that Shock: Nor do I believe you would be ashamed to confess, that I saw you cry, when he had the Cholick last Week with with lapping four Milk. What more could you do for your Lover himself? What more! reply'd the Lady. There is not a Man in England for whom I could lament half so much. Then she stifled the Animal with Kisses, and call'd him, Beau, Life, Dear, Monsieur, Pretty Fellow, and what not, in the Hurry of her Impertinence. Sappho rose up; as she always does at any Thing she observes done, which discovers in her own Sex a Levity of Mind, which renders em inconsiderable in the Opinion of ours.

Letters from the Hague of the 16th Instant, N. S. say, That the Siege of Tournay went on with all imaginable Success; and that there has been no manner of Stop given to the Attempts of the Confederates lince they undertook it, except that by an Accident of Firing a Piece of Ordnance it burst, and kill'd 15 or 16 Men. The French Army is still in the Camp of Lens, and goes on in improving their Intrenchments. When the last Advices came away, it was believed the Town of Tournay would be in the Hands of the Confederates by the End of this Month. Advices from Bruffels inform us, That they have an Account of a great Action between the Malecontents in the Vivarez, and the French King's Forces under the Command of the Duke of Roquelaure, in which Engagement there were Eighteen Hundred Men kill'd on the Spot. They add, That all Sorts of People who are under any Oppreission or Discontent do daily join the Vivarois; and that their present Body of Men in Arms confifted of Six Thousand. fudden Insurrection has put the Court of France under great Difficulties; and the King has given Orders, That the main Body of his Troops in Spain shall withdraw into his own Domini-

An Exercise at Arms of the Artillery Company, to be performed on Wednesday June 29. 1709. un. der the Command of Sir Joseph Woolf, Knight and Alderman, General; Charles Hopson, Esquire, present Sheriff, Lieutenant-General; Captain Richard Sunge, Major; Major John Shorey, Captain of Granadiers; Capt. William Grayhurst, Capt. John Butler, Capt. Robert Carellis, Captains.

THE Body march from the Artillery-Ground through Moregate, Coleman-street, Lothbury, Broad-street, Finch-Lane, Cornhill, Cheapside, St. Martins, St. Anne's-Lane, Hault the Pikes under the Wall in Noble-street, Draw up the Firelocks facing the Goldsmiths Hall, make Ready and Face to the Left, and Fire, and fo ditto Three Times. Beat to Arms, and March round the Hall, as up Lad-Lane, Gutter-Lane, Honey-Lane, and fo Wheel to the Right, and make your Salute to my Lord, and fo down St. Anne's-Lane, up Aldersgate-street, Barbican, and draw up in Red-Cross-street, the Right at St. Paul's-Alley in the Rear. March off Lieutenant-General with Half the Body up Beech-' Lane : He sends a Sub-Division up Kings-Head-" Court, and takes Post in it, and marches Two Divisions round into Red-Lion-Market, to defend that Pass, and succour the Division in Kings-Head-Court, but keeps in White-Crossstreet, facing Beech-Lane, the rest of the Body ready drawn up. Then the General marches up Beech-Lane, is attacked, but forces the Division in the Court into the Market, and enters with Three Divitions while he presses the Lieutenant-General's Main Body; and at the same Time, the Three Divisions force those of the Revolters out of the Market, and fo all the Lieutenant-General's Body retreats into Chifwel street, and lodges Two Divisions in Grubfreet ;

freet; and as the General marches on, they fall on his Flank, but foon made to give Way; but having a Retreating-Place in Red-Lion-Court, but could not hold it, being put to Flight thro' Paul's- Alley, and purfued by the General's Granadiers, while he marches up and attacks their main Body, but are opposed again by a Party of Men as lay in Black Raven-Court; but they are forced also to Retire soon in the utmost ' Confusion; and at the same Time those Brave Divisions in Paul's-Alley ply their Rear with Granadiers, that with Precipitation they take to the Rout along Bunhill-Row: So the General marches into the Artillery-Ground, and being drawn up, finds the Revolting Party to have ' found Entrance, and makes a Show as if for a Battle, and both Armies foon Engage in Form, and Fire by Platoons.

Much might be faid for the Improvement of this System; which, for its Style and Invention, may instruct Generals and their Historians, both in fighting a Battle, and describing it when 'tis over. These elegant Expressions, Ditto--- And so--- But soon--- But having--- But could not--- But are--- But they--- Finds the Party to have found, &c.--- do certainly give great Life and Spirit to the Relation.

Indeed I am extremely concerned for the Lieutenant-General, who, by his Overthrow and Defeat, is made a deplorable Instance of the Fortune of War, and Vicilitudes of humane Affairs. He, alas! has lost in Beech-Lane and Chismel-street, all the Glory he lately gain'd in and about Holborn and St. Giler's. The Art of Subdividing first, and Dividing afterwards, is new and surprising; and according to this Method, the Troops are disposed in King-Head-Court and Red Lim-Market: Nor is the Conduct of these Leaders less conspicuous in their Choice of the Ground Ground or Field of Battle. Happy was it, that the greatest Part of the Atchievements of this Day was to be performed near Grub-street, that there might not be wanting a fufficient Number of faithful Historians, who being Eye-Witnesses of these Wonders, should impartially transmit them to Posterity: But then it can never be enough regretted, that we are left in the Dark as to the Name and Title of that extraordinary. Hero who commanded the Divisions in Paul's-

Alley; especially because those Divisions are justly styled Brave, and accordingly were to push the Enemy along Bunhill-Row, and thereby occafion a general Battle. But Pallas appeared in the Form of a Shower of Rain, and prevented the Slaughter and Desolation which were threatned

by these extraordinary Preparations.

Will's Coffee bonfe, July 13. Some Part of the Company keep up the old Way of Conversation in this Place, which usually turned upon the Examination of Nature, and an Enquiry into the Manners of Men. There is one in the Room so very judicious, that he manages Impertinents with the utmost Dexterity. It was diverting this Evening to hear a Discourse between him and one of these Gentlemen. He told me before that Person join'd us, that he was a Questioner, who, according to his Description, is one who asks Questions, not with a Delign to receive Information, but an Affectation to show his Unealiness for Want of it. He went on in afferting, that there are Crowds of that modest Ambition, as to aim no further than to demonstrate that they are in Doubt. By this Time Will. fat down by us. So Gentlemen, (fays he) In how many Days, think you, shall we be Masters of Tournay? Is the Account of the Action of the Vivarois to be depended upon? Could you have imagined England had so much Money in it as you see it has produced? Pray Sirs, What do you think? Will the Duke of Savoy make an Irruption into France ? But (fays he) Time will clear all these Mysteries. His Answer to himself gave me the Altitude of his Head; and to all his Questions I thus answered very satisfactorily ___ Sir, have you heard that this Slaughterford never own'd the Fact for which he died? Have the News-Papers mentioned that Matter? But, pray, Can you tell me what Method will be taken to provide for these Palatines? But this, as you say, Time will clear. Ay, ay, says he, and whispers me, They will never let us into these Things before hand. I whispered him again, We shall know it as soon as there is a Proclamation - He tells me in t'other Ear, You are in the Right of it. Then he whispered my Friend to know what my Name was; then made an obliging Bow, and went to examine another Table. This led my Friend and me to weigh this wandring Manner in many other Incidents, and he took out of his Pockets feveral little Notes or Tickets to follicit for Votes to Employments: As, " Mr. John Taplash having ferved all Offices, and being reduced to great Poverty, desires your Vote for Singing-Clerk of this Parish. Another has had Ten Chil-' dren, all whom his Wife has fuckled her felf; therefore humbly desires to be a Schoolmafter.

There is nothing so frequent as this Way of Application for Offices. It is not that you are fit for the Place, but because the Place would be convenient for you, that you claim a Merit to it.

But commend me to the great Kirlew, who has lately fet up for Midwifery, and to help Childbirth, for no other Reason, but that he is himself the Unborn Doctor. The Way is to hit upon something that puts the Vulgar upon the Stare, or that touches their Compassion, which is often the weakest Part about us. I know a good Lady, who has taken her Daughters from their old Dancing-master, to place them with another, for no other Reason, but because the new Man has broke his Leg, which is fo ill fet, that he can never dance more.

From my own Apartment, July 13.

As it is a frequent Mortification to me to receive Letters, wherein People tell me, without 2 Name, they know I meant them in such and fuch a Passage; so that very Accusation is an Argument, That there are such Beings in Humane Life, as fall under our Description, and our Discourse is not altogether fantastical and groundless. But in this Case I am treated as I saw a Boy was t'other Day, who gave out pocky Bills: Every plain Fellow took it that pass'd by, and went on his Way without further Notice: At tast came one with his Nose a little abridg'd; who knocks the Lad down, with a, Why you Son of a W -- e, do you think I am p -- d? But Shakepear has made the best Apology for this Way of Talking against the Publick Errors: He makes Jaques, in the Play, call'd, As you like it, expreis himfelf thus:

Why, Who cries out on Pride, That can therein tax any private Party? What Woman in the City do I name? When that I Jay the City Woman bears The Cost of Princes on unworthy Shoulders. Who can come in and fay that I mean her, When such a one as she, such is her Neighbour?

My Tongue hath wrong'd him: If it do him right,
Then he hath wronged himself: If he be free,
Why then my Taxing like a wild Goose slies, Unclaimed of any Man.

St. James's Coffee-house, July 13. We have received, by Letters of the 18th Infrant from the Camp before Tournay, an Account. That we were in a fair Prospect of being Masters of the Town within feven Days after that Date. Our Batteries had utterly overthrown those of the Enemy. On the 16th Instant, N. S. General Schuylemburgh had made a Lodgment on the Counterfearp of the Tenaille; which Post was fo weakly defended, that we lost but Six Men in gaining it. So that there feems Reason to hope, that the Citadel will also be in the Hands of the Confederates about the 6th of August, O.S. These Advices inform us further, That Marshal Villars had ordered large Detachments to make Motions towards Douay and Condé. The fwift Progress of this Siege has so much alarmed the other Frontier Towns of France, that they were throwing down some Houses in the Suburbs of Valenciennes, which they think may stand commodiously for the Enemy in case that Place should be invested. The Elector of Cologne is making all imaginable Hast to remove from hence to Rheims.

From my own Apartment, July 15. Ooking over some old Papers, I found a little Treatife, written by my Great-Grandfather, concerning Bribery, and thought his Manner of treating that Subject not unworthy my Remark. He there has a Digression concerning a Possibility, that in some Circumstances a Man may receive an Injury, and yet be conscious to himself that he deserves it. There are abundance of fine Things faid on the Subject; but the whole wrap'd up in so much Jingle and Pun, (which was the Wit of those Times) that it is scarce inrelligible; but I thought the Delign was well enough in the following Sketch of the old Gentleman's Poetry: For in this Case, where Two are Rivals for the same Thing, and propose to obtain it by Presents, he that attempts the Judge's Honesty, by making him Offers of Reward, ought not to complain when he loses his Cause by a better Bidder. The good old Dogrel runs thus:

A Poor Man once a Judge befought, To judge aright his Caule, And with a Pot of Oil salutes This Judger of the Laws.

My Friend, quoth he, thy Cause is good:

He glad away did trudge;

Anon his wealthy Foe did come

Will's Coffee-house, July 15. The Discourse happen'd this Evening to fall upon Characters drawn in Plays, and a Gentle-man remark'd, That there was no Method in the World of knowing the Tast of an Age, or Period of Time so good, as by the Observations of the Persons represented in their Comedies. There were several Instances produced, as Ben. Johnson's bringing in a Fellow smoaking as a Piece of Foppery; but, said the Gentleman, (who entertain'd us on this Subject) this Matter is no where so observable as in the Difference of the Characters of Women on the Stage in the last Age, and in this. It is not to be supposed that it was a Poverty of Genius in Shakespear, that his Women made fo small a Figure in his Dialogues; but it certainly is, that he drew Women as they then were in Life; for that Sex had not in those Days that Freedom in Converfation; and their Characters were only, that they were Mothers, Sifters, Daughters, and Wives. There were not then among the Ladies, shining Wits, Politicians, Virtuola, Free-Thinkers, and Disputants; nay, there was then hardly such a Creature ev'n as a Coquet: But Vanity had quite another Turn, and the most conspicuous Woman at that Time of Day was only the best Housewife. Were it possible to bring into Life an Assembly of Matrons of that Age, and introduce the learned Lady Woodby into their Company, they would not believe the same Nation could produce a Creature fo unlike any Thing

But these Ancients would be as much astonish'd to fee in the same Age so illustrious a Pattern to all who love Things Praise-worthy, as the divine Aspasia. Methinks, I now see her walking in her Garden like our first Parent, with unaffected Charms, before Beauty had Spectators, and bearing celestial conscious Virtue in her Aspect. Her Countenance is the lively Picture of her Mind, which is the Seat of Honour, Truth, Compassion, Knowledge, and Innocence.

There dwells the Scorn of Vice and Pity too.

In the Midst of the most ample Fortune, and Veneration of all that behold and know her, without the least Affectation, she confults Retirement, the Contemplation of her own Being, and that supreme Power which bestowed it, Without the Learning of Schools, or Knowledge of a long Course of Arguments, she goes on in a steady Course of uninterrupted Piety and Virtue, and adds to the Severity and Privacy of the last Age all the Freedom and Ease of this. The Language and Mien of a Court she is possessed of in the highest Degree; but the Simplicity and humble Thoughts of a Cottage, are her more welcome Entertainments. Aspasia is a Female Philosopher, who does not only live up to the Refignation of the most retired Lives of the ancient Sages, but also to the Schemes and Plans which they thought beautiful, tho' inimitable. This Lady is the most exact Occonomist, without appearing bulie; the most strictly virtuous, Repro it wil that k last th But dies, tuous, without tasting the Praise of it; and shuns Applause with as much Industry, as others do Reproach. This Character is so particular, that it will very easily be fixed on her only, by all that know her: But I dare say, she will be the

But, alas! If we have One or Two such Ladies, How many Dozens are there like the restless Poluglossa, who is acquainted with all the World but her self; who has the Appearance of all, and Possession of no one Virtue: She has indeed in her Practice the Absence of Vice, but her Discourse is the continual History of it; and it is apparent, when she speaks of the criminal Gratiscations of others, that her Innocence is only a Restraint, with a certain Mixture of Envy. She is so perseally opposite to the Character of Aspassa, that as Vice is terrible to her only as it is the Object of Reproach, so Virtue is agreeable only as it is attended with Applause.

St. James's Coffee-bouse, July 15.

It is now Twelve a Clock at Noon, and no Mail come in; therefore I am not without Hopes, that the Town will allow me the Liberty which my Brother News-Writers take, in giving them what may be for their Information in another Kind, and indulge me in doing an Act of Friendship, by publishing the following Account of Goods and Moveables.

Space we have to fill, we range our Men in Squadrons and Battalions, or draw out Company by Company, and Troop by Troop; ever observing, that no Muster is to be made, but when the Wind is in a cross Point, which often happens at the End of a Campaign, when half the The Courant is Men are deserted or killed. sometimes Ten deep, his Ranks close: The Post-Boy is generally in Files, for greater Exactness; and the Post-Man comes down upon you rather after the Turkish Way, Sword in Hand, Pell-mell, without Form or Discipline; but fure to bring Men enough into the Field; and where-ever they are raised, never to lose a Battle for Want of Numbers.

I Write from hence at prefent to complain, That Wit and Merit are so little encouraged by People of Rank and Quality, that the Wits of the Age are obliged to run within Temple-Bar for Patronage. There is a deplorable Instance of this in the Case of Mr. D—y, who has dedicated his inimitable Comedy, called, The Modern Prophets, to a worthy Knight, to whom, it seems, he had before communicated his Plan, which was, To Ridicule the Ridiculers of our establish'd Doctrine. I have elsewhere celebrated the Contrivance of this excellent Drama; but was not, not, 'till I read the Dedication, wholly let into the Religious Design of it. I am afraid it has suffered Discontinuance at this gay End of the Town, for no other Reason but the Piety of the Purpose. There is however in this Epistle the true Life of Panegyrical Performance; and I do not doubt but, if the Patron would part with it, I can help him to others with good Pretensions to it; viz. of Uncommon Understanding, who would give him as much as he gave for it. I know perfectly well a Noble Person to whom these Words (which are the Body of the Panegyrick) would fit to a Hair.

Your Easiness of Humour, or rather your harmonious Disposition, is so admirably mixed with your Composure, that the rugged Cares and Disturbance that Publick Assairs brings with it, which does so vexatiously affect the Heads of other great Men of Business, &c. does scarce ever rustle your unclouded Brow so much as with a Frown. And what above all is Praise-worthy, you are so far from thinking your self better than others, that a sourishing and opulent Fortune, which by a certain natural Corruption in its Quality, seldom fails to insect other Posessors with Pride, seems in this Case as if only providentially disposed to enlarge your Humility.

But I find, Sir, I am now got into a very large Field, where tho' I could with great Ease raise a Number of Plants in Relation to your Merit of this plauditory Nature; yet for Fear of an Author's general Vice, and that the plain Justice I have done you should, by my Proceeding and others mistaken Judgment, be imagined Flattery, a Thing the Bluntness of my Nature does not care to be concern'd wish, and which I also know you abomi-

It is wonderful to fee how many Judges of these fine Things spring up every Day by the Rife of Stocks, and other elegant Methods of abridging the Way to Learning and Criticism. But I do hereby forbid all Dedications to any Perfons within the City of London, except Sir Francis, Sir Stephen, and the Bank, will take Epigrams and Epiffles as Value received for their Notes; and the East-India Companies accept of Heroick Poems for their Seal'd Bonds. Upon which Bottom, our Publishers have full Power to treat with the City in Behalf of us Authors, to enable Traders to become Patrons and Fellows of the Royal Society, as well as receive certain Degrees of Skill in the Latin and Greek Tongues, according to the Quantity of the Commodities which they take off our Hands.

Grecian Coffee-house, July 18.

The Learned have so long laboured under the Imputation of Dryness and Dulness in their Accounts of their Phænomena, that an ingenious Gentleman of our Society has resolved to write a System of Philosophy in a more lively Method, both as to the Matter and Language, than has been hitherto attempted. He read to us the Plan upon which he intends to proceed. I thought his Account, by Way of Fable of the Worlds about us, had so much Vivacity in it, that I could not forbear transcribing his Hypothesis, to give the Reader a Tast of my Friend's Treatise, which is now in the Press.

ther a numberless Collection of dancing Atoms into the Form of Seven rowling Globes: And that Nature might be kept from a dull In-

'ction, whereby all the several Parcels of Mair's ter draw each other proportionably to the Magnitudes and Distances, into such a remarkable Variety of different Forms, as to produce all the wonderful Appearances we now observe in Empire, Philosophy, and Re-

At the Beginning of the Game, each of the Globes being struck forward with a vast Violence, ran out of Sight, and wander'd in a straight Line thro' the infinite Spaces. The nimble Deities pursue, breathless almost, and spent in the eager Chace; each of them catched hold of one, and stamped it with his Name; as, Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, and so of the rest. To prevent this Inconvenience for the future, the Seven are condemned to a Precipitation, which in our inferior Style we call Gravity. Thus the Tangential and Centripetal Forces, by their Counter-struggle, make the Celestial Bodies describe an exact Ellipsis.

There will be added to this, an Appendix, in Defence of the First Day of the Term according to the Oxford Almanack, by a learned Knight of this Realm, with an Apology for the Said Knight's Manner of Dress; proving, That his Habit, according to thus Hypothesis, is the true Modern and Fashionable; and that Buckles are not to be worn, by this System, 'till the 10th of March, in the Year 1714, which, according to the Computation of some of our greatest Divines, is to be the first Year of the Millennium; in which blessed Age, all Habits will be reduced to a Primitive Simplicity; and whoever shall be found to have persevered in a Constancy of Dress, in Spight of all the Allurements of prophane and heather Habits, shall be rewarded with a never-fading Doublet of a Thousand Tears. System which are doubted, shall be attested by the Knight's Extemporary Oath, for the Satisfaction of his Readers.

We were upon the Heroick Strain this Evening, and the Question was, What is the True Sublime? Many very good Discourses happen'd chereupon; after which a Gentleman at the Table, who is, it feems writing on that Subject, reassum'd the Argument; and tho' he ran thro' many Instances of Sublimity from the ancient Writers, said, He had hardly known an Occasion wherein the true Greatness of Soul, which animates a General in Action, is so well represented, with Regard to the Person of whom it was spoken, and the Time in which it was writ, as in a few Lines in a modern Poem: There is (continued he) nothing fo forc'd and constrain'd, as what we frequently meet with in Tragedies; to make a Man under the Weight of a great Sorrow, or full of Medication upon what he is foon to execute, cast about for a Simile to what he himself is, or the Thing which he is going to act: But there is nothing more proper and natural for a Poet, whose Business is to describe, and who is Spectator of one in that Circumstance when his Mind is working upon a great Image, and that the Idea's hurry upon his Imagination; I say, there is nothing so natural, as for a Poet to relieve and clear himself from the Burthen of Thought at that Time, by uttering his Conception in Simile and Metaphor. The highest Act of the Mind of Man, is to possess it self with Tranquility in eminent Danger, and to have its Thoughts fo free, as to act at that Time without Perplexity. The ancient Authors have compared this fedate Courage to a Rock that remains immoveable amidit amidst the Rage of Winds and Waves; but that is too flupid and inanimate a Similitude, and could do no Credit to the Hero. At other Times they are all of 'em wonderfully obliged to a Lybian Lion, which may give indeed very agreeable Terrors to a Description; but is no Compliment to the Perfon to whom it is applied: Eagles, Tygers, and Wolves, are made Use of on the same Occasion, and very often with much Beauty; but this is still an Honour done to the Brute, rather than the Hero. Mars, Pallas, Bacchus, and Hercules, have each of 'em furnish'd very good Similes in their Time, and made, doubtless, a greater Impression on the Mind of a Heathen, than they have on that of a modern Reader. But the fublime Image that I am talking of, and which I really think as great as ever enter'd into the Thought of Man, is in the Poem call'd, The Campaign; where the Simile of a ministring Angel sets forth the most sedate and the most active Courage, engaged in an Uproar of Nature, a Confusion of Elements, and a Scene of Divine Vengeance. Add to all, That these Lines compliment the General and his Queen at the same Time, and have all the natural Horrors, heighten'd by the Image that was still fresh in the Mind of every Rea-

'Twas then Great Marlbro's mighty Soul was That, in the Shock of charging Hosts unmov'd, Amidst Confusion, Horror, and Despair, Examin'd all the dreadful Scenes of War; In peaceful Thought the Field of Death survey'd, To fainting Squadrons sent the timely Aid, Inspir'd repuls'd Battalions to engage, And taught the doubtful Battle where to rage. So when an Angel by Divine Command, With rising Tempests shakes a guilty Land, Buch as of late ver pale Britannia past, Calm and serene he drives the furious Blast; And pleas d th' Almighty's Orders to perform, Rides in the Whirl-wind, and directs the Storm.

The whole Poem is so exquisirely Noble and Poetick, that I think it an Honour to our Nation and Language. The Gentleman concluded his Critick on this Work, by saying, that he esteemed it wholly new, and a wonderful Accempt to keep up the ordinary Idea's of a March of an Army, just as they happen'd in so warm and great a Style, and yet be at once Familiar and Heroick. Such a Performance is a Chronicle as well as a Poem, and will preserve the Memory of our Hero, when all the Edifices and Statues erected to his Honour are blended with common Dust.

St. James's Coffee-house, July 18. Letters from the Hague of the 23d Instant, N. Deferters from the Town gave an Account, That the Garrison was carrying their Ammunition and Provisions into the Citadel, which occasion'd a Tumult among the Inhabitants of the Town. The French Army had laid Bridges over the Sharp, and made a Motion as if they intended to pass that River; but tho' they are joined by the Reinforcement expected from Germany, it was not believed they should make any Attempt towards relieving Tournay. THIS Day, passing through Covent-Garden, I was stopp'd in the Piazza by Pacolet, to observe what he called the Triumph of Love and Youth. I turned to the Object he pointed at; and there I saw a gay gilt Chariot drawn by fresh prancing Horses; the Coachman with a new Cockade, and the Lacqueys with Insolence and Plenty in their Countenances. I asked immediately, What young Heir or Lover own'd that glittering Equipage? But my Companion interrupted: Do not you see there the mourning Associate, He is in deep Mourning, and is the languishing hopeless Lover of the divine Hebe, the Emblem of Youth and Beauty. fearned Sage you behold in that Furniture, is the frongest Instance imaginable, that Love is the

You are not so ignorant as to be a Stranger to the Character of Afeulapius, as the Patron and most successful of all who profess the Art of Medicine. But as most of his Operations are owing to a natural Sagacity or Impulse, he has very little troubled himself with the Doctrine of Drugs; but has always given Nature more Room to help her self, than any of her learned Assistants; and consequently has done greater Wonders than is in the Power of Art to perform: For which Reason he is half deify'd by the People; and has ever been justly courted by all the World, as if he were a Seventh Son.

It happen'd, that the charming Hebe was reduced, by a long and violent Fever, to the most extreme Danger of Death; and when all Skill fail'd, they fent for Æsculapius. The renowned Artist was touch'd with the deepest Compassion tofee the faded Charms and faint Bloom of Hebe; and had a generous Concern in beholding a Struggle, not between Life, but rather between Youth and Death. All his Skill and his Passion tended to the Recovery of Hebe, beautiful even in Sickness: But, alas! the unhappy Physician knew not, that in all his Care he was only sharpening Darts for his own Destruction. In a Word, his Fortune was the same with that of the Statuary, who fell in Love with the Image of his own making; and the unfortunate Eculapius is become the Patient of her whom he lately recovered. Long before this Difaster, Esculapius was far gone in the unnecesfary and superfluous Amusements of old Age, in increating unweildy Stores, and providing, in the midit of an Incapacity of Enjoyment of what he had, for a Supply of more Wants than he had Calls for in Youth'st felf. But these low Considerations are now no more, and Love has taken Place of Avarice, or rather is become an Avarice of another Kind, which still urges him to pursue what he does not want. But behold the Metamorphofis the anxious mean Cares of an Usurer are rurned into the Languishments and Complaints of a Lover. Behold, fays the aged Afculapius, I fubmit, I own, great Love, thy Empire: Pity, Hebe, the Fop you have made: What have I to do with Guilding but on Pills? Yet, O Fair! For thee I fit amidst a Crowd of painted Deities on my Chariot, button'd in Gold, clasp'd in Gold, without having any Value for that beloved Metal. but as it adorns the Person, and laces the Hat of thy dying Lover. I ask not to live, O Hebe! Give me but gentle Death : Euthanasia, Euthanasia, that is all I implore. When Æsculapius had finished his Complaint, Pacolet went on in deep Morals on the Incertainty of Riches with this remarkable Exclamation; O Wealth! How impotent art thou? And how little dost thou supply us with real Happiness, when the Usurer himself can forget thee for the Love of what is as foreign to his Felicity as thou art?

Will's Coffee-house, July 19: The Company here, who have all a delicate Tast of Theatrical Representations, had made a Gathering to purchase the Moveables of the neighbouring Play-house, for the Encouragement of one which is fetting up in the Hay-Market. But the Proceedings at the Auction (by which Method the Goods have been fold this Evening) have been to unfair, that this generous Defign has been frustrated; for the Imperial' Mantle made for Cyrus was missing, as also the Chariot and Two Dragons: But upon Examination it was found, that a Gentleman of Hampshire had clandestinely bought them both, and is gone down to his Country Seat; and that on Satura-

Saturday last he passed through Staines attired in that Robe, and drawn by the faid Dragons, affifted by Two only of his own Horses. This Theatrical Traveller has also left Orders with Mr. Hall to fend the faded Rainbow to the Scowers, and when it comes home, to dispatch it after him. At the same Time C---- R-----Esq; is invited to bring down his Setting Sun himself, and be Box-keeper to a Theatre erected by this Gentleman near Southampton. Thus there has been nothing but Artifice in the Management of this Affair; for which Reason I beg Pardon of the Town, that I inferted the Inventory in my Paper, and folemnly protest, I knew nothing of this artful Delign of vending these Rarities: But I meant only the Good of the World in that and all other Things which I divulge.

And now I am upon this Subject, I must do my self Justice in Relation to an Article in a former Paper, wherein I made Mention of a Person who keeps a Puppet-Show in the Town of Bath; I was tender of naming Names, and only just hinted, that he makes larger Promifes, when he invites People to his Dramatick Representations, than he is able to perform: But I am credibly informed, that he makes a prophane lewd Jester, whom he calls Punch, ipeak to the Dishonour of Isaac Bickerstaff with great Familiarity; and before all my learned Friends in that Place, takes upon him to difpute my Title to the Appellation of Esquire. I think I need not fay much to convince all the World, that this Mr. Powell (for that is his Name) is a pragmatical and vain Person to pretend to argue with me on any Subject. Mecum certasse feretur; that is to fay, It will be an Honour to him to have it faid he contended with me; but I would have him to know, that I can look beyond his Wires, and know very well the whole Trick of his Art, and that it is only by these Wires that the Eye of the Spectator is cheated, and hinder'd from feeing that there is a Thread on one of Punch's Chops, which draws it up, and lets it fall at the Discretion of the faid Powell, who stands behind and plays him, and makes him speak sawcily of his Betters. He! To pretend to make Prologues against me!--But a Man never behaves himself with Decency in his own Case; therefore I shall command my felf, and never trouble me further with this little Fellow, who is himself but a tall Puppet, and has not Brains enough to make even Wood speak as it ought to do: And I, that have heard the Groaning Board, can despise all that his Puppers shall be able to speak as long as they live. But, Ex quoves Ligno non fit Mercurius. He has pretended to write to me also from the Bath, and fays, He thought to have deferred giving me an Answer till he came to his Books; but that my Writings might do well with the Waters: Which are pert Expressions that become a School-boy, better than one that is to teach others: And when I have faid a civil Thing to him, he cries, Oh! I thank you for that --- I am your humble Servant for that. Ah! Mr. Powell, these smart Civilities will never run down Men of Learning: I know well enough your Defign is to have all Men Automata, like your Puppets; but the World is grown too wife, and can look through these thin Devices. I know you delign to make a Reply to this; but be fure you stick close to my Words; for if you bring me into Discourses concerning the Government of your Puppers, I must tell you, I neither am, nor have been, nor will be, at Leisure to answer you. It is really a burning Shame this Man should be tolerated in abusing the World with Such Representations of Things: But his Parts PF decay,

From my own Apartment, July 14: I must beg Pardon of my Readers that for this Time I have, I fear, huddled up my Discourse, having been very buly in helping an old Friend of mine out of Town. He has a very good Estate, is a Man of Wit; but he had been Three Years absent from Town, and can't bear a Jest; for which Reason I have, with some Pains, convinc'd him, that he can no more live here than if he were a downright Bankrupt. He was fo fond of dear London, that he began to fret only inwardly; but being unable to laugh and be laugh'd at, I took a Place in the Northern Coach for him and his Family; and hope he is got to Night fafe from all Sneerers in his own Parlour.

St. James's Coffee-house, July 20.
This Morning we received by Express, the agreeable News of the Surrender of the Town of Tournay on the 28th Instant, N. S. The Place was affaulted at the Attacks of General Schuylemberg, and that of General Lottum, at the same Time. The Action at both those Parts of the Town was very obstinate, and the Allies loft a confiderable Number at the Beginning of the Dispute; but the Fight was continued with fo great Bravery, that the Enemy observing our Men to be Masters of all the Posts which were necessary for a general Attack, beat the Chamade, and Hostages were receiv'd from the Town, and others fent from the Besiegers, in order to come to a formal Capitulation for the Surrender of the Place. that I ever beheld. As I came near, the burft Into Tears, and cry'd, Sir, Do not you know the unhappy Teraminta? I foon recollected her whole Person: But (said I) Madam, The Simplicity of Dress, in which I have ever feen you at your good Father's House, and the Chearfulness of Countenance with which you always appeared, are so unlike the Fashion and Temper you are now in, that I did not easily recover the Memory of you. Your Habit was then decent and modest, your Looks serene and beautiful: Whence then this unaccountable Change? Nothing can speak so deep a Sorrow as your present Aspect; yet your Dress is made for follity and Re. velling. It is (faid she) an unspeakable Pleasure to meet with one I know, and to bewail my felf to any that is not an utter Stranger to Humanity.

When your Friend my Father died, left me to a wide World, with no Defence against the Insults of Fortune, but rather, a Thousand Snares to intrap me in the Dangers. to which Youth and Innocence are exposed, in an Age wherein Honour and Virtue are become mere Words, and used only as they serve to betray those who understand them in their native Sense, and obey them as the Guides and Motives of their Being. The wickedeft of all Men. living, the abandoned Decius, who has no Knowledge of any good Art or Purpose of Humane Life, but as it tends to the Satisfaction of his Appetites, had Opportunities of frequently feeing and entertaining me at a House where mixed Company boarded, and where he placed himfelf for the base Intention which he has since brought to pass. Decius saw enough in me to raife his brutal Delires, and my Circumstances gave him Hopes of accomplishing them. But all the glittering Expectations he could lay betore me, joined by my private Terrors of Po-

See here the Bane of our Sex! Let the Flattery be never so apparent, the Flatterer never so illuthought of, his Praises are still agreeable, and we contribute to our own Deceit. I was therefore ever fond of all Opportunities and Pretences of being in his Company. In a Word, I was at last ruined by him, and brought to this Place, where I have been ever since immur'd; and from the satal Day after my Fall from Innocence, my Worshipper became my Master and my Tyrant.

Thus you fee me habited in the most gorgeous Manner, not in Honour of me as a Woman he loves, but as this Actire charms his own Eye, and urges him to repeat the Gratification he takes in me, as the Servant of his brutish Lusts and Appetites. I know not where to fly for Redress; but am here pining away. Life in the Solitude and Severity of a Nun, but the Conscience and Guilt of an Harlot. I live in this lewd Practice with a Religious Awe of my Minister of Darkness, upbraided with the Support I receive from him, for the inestimable Pollession of Youth, of Innocence, of Honour, and of Conscience. To show that I do not bear an irreconcilable Hatred to my mortal Enemy, Mr. Powell at Bath, I do his Function the Honour to publish to the World, that Plays represented by Puppets are permitted in our Universities, and that Sort of Drama is not wholly thought unworthy the Critick of learned Heads: But as I have been conversant rather with the greater Ode, as I think the Criticks call it, I must be so humble as to make a Request to Mr. Powell, and defire him to apply his Thoughts to answering the Difficulties with which my Kinsman, the Author of the following Letter, feems to be embarraffed.

To my Honoured Kinsman Isaac Bickerstaff Esq;

Dear Coufin, HAD the Family of the Beadlestaffs, where-of I, the unworthy, am one, known of vour being lately at Oxon, we had in our own Name, and in the Universities, (as it is our 'Office) made you a Compliment: But your fhort Stay here robbed us of an Opportunity. of paying our due Respects, and you of receiving an ingenious Entertainment, with which we at prefent divert our felves and Strangers. A Puppet-Show at this Time sup-Nymphs of this City are disappointed of a luscious Musick-Speech, and the Country Ladies of hearing their Sons or Brothers speak Verfes; yet the vocal Machines, like them, by the Help of a Prompter, fay Things as much to the Benefit of the Audience, and almost as properly their own. The Licence of a Terre-" Filius is refined to the well-bred Satyr of Punchenello. Now, Cousin Bickerstaff, tho' Punch has has neither a French Nightcap, nor Long Pockets, yet you must own him to be a Pretty Fellow, a very Pretty Fellow: Nay, fince he feldom leaves the Company, without calling, Son of a Whore, demanding Satisfaction, and Duelling, he must be owned a Smart Fellow too. Yet, by some Indecencies towards the Ladies, he feems to be of a Third Character, distinct from any you have yet touch'd upon. A young Gentleman who fat next me (for I had the Curiofity of feeing this Entertainment) in a tufted Gown, red Stockings, and Long Wig, (which I pronounce to be tantamount to red Heels and a dangling Cane) was enraged when Punchenello disturbed a foft Love Scene with his Ribaldry. You would oblige us mightily by laying down ' some Rules for adjusting the extravagant Behaviour of this Almanzor of the Play, and by writing a Treatife on this Sort of Dramatick Poetry, fo much favoured, and fo little understoood, by the learned World:

' From its being conveyed in a Cart after the Thespian Manner, all the Parts being recitedby one Person, as the Custom was before Aschilus, and from the Behaviour of Punch as if he had won the Goal, you may possibly deduce its Antiquity, and fettle the Chronology, as well as some of our Modern Criticks. In its natural Transitions, from Mournful to Merry ; as, from the Hanging of a Lover, to Dancing upon the Rope; from the Stalking of a Ghost, to a Lady's presenting you with a Jig; you may discover such a Decorum, as is not to be found elsewhere than in our Tragi-Comedies. But I forget my felf; 'tis not for me-to dictate: I thought fit, dear Coulin, to give you these Hints, to shew you, that the Beadlestaffs don't walk before Men of Letters to no Purpose; and that the we do but hold up the Train of Arts and Sciences, yet like other with so little Satisfaction as this Evening; for you must know, I was Five Hours with Three Merry, and Two Honest Fellows. The former sang Catches; and the latter even died with laughing at the Noise they made. Well, (says Tom Belfrey) You Scholars, Mr. Bickerstaff, are the worst Company in the World. Ay, (says his Opposite) You are dull to Night; prithee be merry. With that I huzza'd, and took a Jump cross the Table, then came clever upon my Legs, and fell a laughing. Let Mr. Bickerstaff alone (says one of the Honest Fellows), when he's in a good Humour, he's as good Company as any Man in England. He had no sooner spoke, but I snatched his Hat off his Head, and clap'd it upon my own, and burst out a laughing again; upon which we all fell a laughing for half an Hour. One of the Honest Fellows got behind me in the Interim, and hit me a found Slap on the Back; upon which he got the Laugh out of my Hand, and it was such a Twang on my Shoulders, that I confess he was much merrier than I. I was half angry;

the Company; and after hollowing as loud as I could possibly, I drank off a Bumper of Claret, that made me stare again. Nay, (says one of the Honest Fellows) Mr. Isaac is in the Right, there is no Conversation in this; What signifies Jumping, or hitting one another on the Back? Let's drink about. We did so from Seven a Clock till Eleven; and now I am come hither, and, after the Manner of the wise Pythagoras, begin to reslect upon the Passages of the Day. I remember nothing, but that I am bruised to Death; and as it is my Way to write down all the good Things I have heard in the last Conversation to surnish my Paper, I can from this only tell you my Sufferings, and my Bangs.

I nam'd Pythagoras just now, and I protest to you, as he believ'd Men after Death enter'd into other Species, I am now and then tempted to think other Animals enter into Men, and could name several on Two Legs, that never discover any Sentiment above what is common with the Species of a lower Kind; as we see in these bodily Wits whom I was with to Night, whole Parts confift in Strength and Activity; but their boifterous Mirth gives me great Impatience for the Return of such Happiness as I enjoyed in a Conversation last Week. Among others in that Company, we had Florio, who never interrupted any Man living when he was speaking; or ever ceased to speak, but others lamented that he had done. His Discourse ever arises from a Fulness of the Matter before him, and not from Oftentation or Triumph of his Understanding for though he feldom delivers what he need fear being repeated, he speaks without having that End in View; and his Forbearance of Calumny or Bitterness, is owing rather to his good Nature than his Discretion; for which Reason, heis esteem'd a Gentleman perfectly qualified for Conversation, in whom a general Good will to Mankind takes off the Necellity of Caution and Circumspection.

We had at the same Time that Evening the best Sort of Companion that can be, a good-natured old Man. This Person meets in the Company of young Men, Veneration for his Benevolence, and is not only valued for the good Qualities of which he is Master, but reaps an Acceptance from the Pardon he gives to other Mens Faults: And the ingenuous Sort of Men with whom he converses, have so just a Regard for him. that he rather is an Example, than a Check to their Behaviour. For this Reason, as Senecio never pretends to be a Man of Pleasure before Youth, fo young Men never fet up for Wisdom before Senecio; so that you never meet, where he is, those Monsters of Conversation, who are grave or gay above their Years. He never converses but with Followers of Nature and good Sense, where all that is urtered is only the Effect of a communicable Temper, and not of Emulation to excel their Companions; all Defire of Superiority being a Contradiction to that Spirit which makes a just Conversation, the very Esfence of which is mutual Good-will. Hence it is, that I take it for a Rule, that the natural, and not the acquired Man, is the Companion. Learning, Wit, Gallantry, and good Breeding, are all but fubordinate Qualities in Society, and are of no Value, but as they are subservient to Benevolence, and tend to a certain Manner of being or appearing equal to the rest of the Company; for Conversation is composed of an Assembly of Men, as they are Men, and not as they are distinguished by Fortune: Therefore he that brings his Quality with him into Conversation, should always pay the Reckoning; for he came to receive Homage, and not to meet his Friends. - But the the D the P me be expla think good last the Din about my Ears from the Clamour of the People I was with this Evening, has carried me beyond my intended Purpose, which was to explain upon the Order of Merry Fellows; but I think I may pronounce of them, as I heard good Senecio, with a Spice of the Wit of the last Age, say, viz. That a Merry Fellow is the Saddest Fellow in the World.

White's Chocolate-house, July 25. VE see every Day Volumes written against that Tyrant of Humane Life called Love, and yet there is no Help found against his Cruelties, or Barrier against the Inroads he is pleased to make into the Mind of Man. After this Preface, you will expect I am going to give particular Instances of what I have afferted. That Expectation cannot be raifed too high for the Novelty of the History, and Manner of Life, of the Emperor Aurengezebe, who has refided for fome Years in the Cities of London and Wostminster, with the Air and Mien indeed of his Imperial Quality, but the Equipage and Ap-Potentate, for a long Series of Time, appeared from the Hour of Twelve till that of Two at a Coffee-house near the Change, and had a Seat (though without a Canopy) facred to himself, and Protection.

where he gave diurnal Audiences concerning Commerce, Politicks, Tare and Tret, Ufury and Abatement, with all Things necessary for helping the Distressed, who are willing to give one Limb for the better Maintenance of the rest; or such joyous Youths, whose Philofophy is confined to the present Hour, and were defirous to call in the Revenue of next half Year to double the Enjoyment of this. Long did this growing Monarch employ himfelf after this Manner: And as Alliances are necessary to all great Kingdoms, he took particularly the Interests of Lewis the Fourteenth into his Care When all Mankind were attacking that unhappy Monarch, and those who had neither Valour or Wit to oppose against him, would be still showing their impotent Malice by laying Wagers in Opposition to his Interests, Aurengezebe ever took the Part of his Contemporary, and laid immense Treasures on his Side in Defence of his important Magazine of Toulon. Aurengezebe also had all this while a constant Intelligence with India, and his Letters were answered in Jewels, which he foon made Brillant, and caused to be affixed to his Imperial Castor, which he always wears cock'd in Front, to show his Defiance; with an Heap of Imperial Snuff in the Middle of his ample Visage, to show his Sagacity. their Coffers to his Treasury. But Wealth and Wisdom are Possessions too folemn not to give Weariness to active Minds, without the Relief (in vacant Hours) of Wit and Love, which are the proper Amusements of the Powerful and the Wife: This Emperor therefore, with great Regularity, every Day at Five in the Afternoon, leaves his Money-Changers, his Publicans, and little Hoarders of Wealth, to their low Pursuits, and ascends his Chariot to drive to Will's; where the Tast is refined, and a Relish given to Mens Possessions, by a polite Skill in gratifying their Passions and Appetites. There it is that the Emperor has learned to live and to love, and not, like a Miser, to gaze only on his Ingots or his Treasures; but with a nobler Satisfaction, to live the Admiration of others, for his Splendour and Happiness in being Master of them. But a Prince is no more to be his own Caterer in his Love, than in his Food; therefore Aurengezebe has ever in waiting Two Purveyors for his Dishes, and his Wenches for his retired Hours, by whom the Scene of his Diver-fion is prepared in the following Manner. There is near Covent-Garden a Street known by the Name of Drury, which, before the Days of Christianity, was purchased by the Queen of Paphos, and is the only Part of Great Britain where the Tenure of Vassalage is still in being. All that long Course of Building is under particular Districts or Ladiships, after the Manner of Lordships in other Parts, over which Matrons of known Abilities preside, and have, for the Support of their Age and Insirmities, certain Taxes paid out of the Rewards of the amorous Labours of the Young. This Seraglio of Great Britain is disposed into convenient Allies and Apartments, and every House, from the Cellar to the Garret, inhabited by Nymphs of different Orders, that Persons of every Rank may be accommodated with an immediate Confort, to allay their Flames, and partake of their Cares. Here it is, that when Aurengezebe thinks fit to give a Loofe to Dalliance, the Purveyors prepare the Entertainment; and what makes it more august august is, that every Person concerned in the Interlude has his set Part, and the Prince sends before-hand Word what he designs to say, and directs also the very Answer which shall be made to him.

It has been before hinted, that this Emperor has a continual Commerce with India; and it is to be noted, that the largest Stone that rich Earth has produced, is in our Aurengezebe's Pos-

But all Things are now disposed for his Reception. At his Entrance into the Seraglio, a Servant delivers him his Bever of State and Love, on which is fixed this inestimable Jewel as his Diadem. When he is seated, the Purveyors, Pandarus and Nuncio, marching on each Side of the Matron of the House, introduce her into his Presence. In the midst of the Room, they bow all together to the Diadem.

When the Matron -

Whoever thou art, (as thy awful Apect Speaks thee a Man of Power) be propitious to this Mansion of Love, and let not the Severity of thy Wisdom disdain, that by the Representation of naked Innocence, or pastoral Figures, we revive in the the Memory at least of that Power of Venus, to which all the Wise and the Brave are some Part of their Lives devoted. Aurengezebe consents by a Nod, and they go out backward.

After this, an unhappy Nymph, who is to be fupposed just escaped from the Hands of a Ravisher, with her Tresses dishevel'd, runs into the Room with a Dagger in her Hand, and falls before the Emperor.

Pity, Oh! pity! whoever thou art, an unhappy Virgin, whom one of thy Train has robbed of her Innocence; her Innocence, which was all her Por-Portion — Or rather, let me die like the memorable Lucretia — Upon which she stabs her self. The Body is immediately examined after the Manner of our Coroners. Lucretia recovers by a Cup of right Nants; and the Matron, who is her next Relation, stops all Process at Law.

This unhappy Affair is no fooner over, but a naked Mad-woman breaks into the Room, calls for her Duke, her Lord, her Emperor. foon as the spies Aurengezebe, the Object of all her Fury and Love, the calls for Perticoats, is ready to fink with Shame, and is dreffed in all hafte in new Attire at his Charge. This unexpected Accident of the Mad-woman, makes Aurengezebe curious to know, whether others who are in their Senses can guess at his Quality. For which Reason the whole Convent is examined one by one. The Matron marches in with a tawdy Country Girl --- Pray Winifred. (fays she) Who do you think that fine Man with those lewels and Pearls is? --- I believe (fays Winifred) it is our Landlord --- It must be the 'Squire himself --- The Emperor laughs at her Simplicity --- Go Fool, fays the Matron: Then turning to the Emperor --- Your Greatness will pardon her Ignorance ! After her, feveral others of different Characters are instructed to mistake who he is in the same Manner: Then the whole Sifterhood are called together, and the Emperor rifes, and cocking his Hat, declares, He is the Great Mogul, and they his Concubines. A general Murmur goes through the Assembly, and Aurengezebe certifying, that he keeps them for State rather than Use; tells them, they are permitted to receive all Men into their Apartments; then proceeds through the Crowd, among whom he throws Medals shaped like . Half-Crowns, and returns to his Chariot. This

This being all that passed the last Day in which Aurengezebe visited the Women's Apart. ments, I confulted Pacolet concerning the Foundation of fuch strange Amusements in old Age: To which he answer'd; You may remember, when I gave you an Account of my good Fortune in being drowned on the 30th Day of my Humane Life, I told you of the Difasters I should otherwise have met with before I arrived at the End of my Stamen, which was Sixty Years. I may now add an Observation to you, That all who exceed that Period, except the latter Part of it is spent in the Exercise of Virrue and Contemplation of Futurity, must necessarily fall into an Indecent old Age, because, with Regard to all the Enjoyments of the Years of Vigour and Manhood, Childhood returns upon them: And as Infants ride on Sticks, build Houses in Dirt, and make Ships in Gutters, by a faint Idea of Things they are to ad hereafter; so old Men play the Lovers, Potentates, and Emperors, from the decaying Image of the more perfect Performances of their stronger Years: Therefore be sure to insert Assculapius and Aurengezebe in your next Bill of Mortality of the Metaphorically Defunct.

As foon as I came hither this Evening, no less than Ten People produced the following Poem, which they all reported was sent to each of them by the Penny-Post from an unknown Hand. All the Battle-Writers in the Room were in Debate, who could be the Author of a Piece so martially written; and every Body applauced the Address and Skill of the Author, in calling it a Postscript: It being the Nature of a Postscript:

a Postscript to contain something very Material which was forgotten, or not clearly expressed in the Letter it felf. Thus, the Verses being occafioned by a March without Beat of Drum, and that Circumflance being no ways taken Notice of in any of the Stanza's, the Author calls it a Postscript; not that it is a Postscript, but figuratively, because it wants a Postscript. Common Writers, when what they mean is not expressed in the Book it felf, supply it by a Preface; but a Postscript seems to me the more just Way of Apology; because otherwise a Man makes an Excuse before the Offence is committed. All the Heroick Poets were gueffed at for its Author but though we could not find out his Name, yet one repeated a Couplet in Hudibras which spoke his Qualifications:

I'th' midst of all this Warlike Rabble, Crowdero march'd, expert and able.

The Poem is admirably suited to the Occasion: For to write without discovering your Meaning, bears a just Resemblance to Marching without Beat of Drum.

On the March to Tournay without Beat of Drum.

The Bruffels POSTSCRIPT.

this Place, or the Service he has for a last Victoria.

Could I with plainest Words express
That great Man's wonderful Address,
His Penetration, and his towring Thought;
It would the gazing World surprize,
To see one Man at all Times wise.
To view the Wonders he with Ease has wrought.

Refining Schemes approach his Mind,
Like Breezes of a Southern Wind,
To temperate a fultry glorious Day;
Whose Fannings, with an ulefal Pride,
Its mighty Heat doth sofily guide,
And having cleared the Air, glide silently away.

Thus his immensity of Thought,
Is deeply formed, and gently wrought,
His Temper always softening Life's Disease;
That Fortune, when she does intend
To rudely frown, she turns his Friend, Admires his Judgment, and applauds his Ease.

His great Address in this Design,
Does now, and will for ever shine,
And wants a Waller but to do him Right to The whole Amusement was so strong,
Like Fate he doom'd them to be wrong,
And Tournay's took by a peculiar Slight.

Thus, Madam, all Mankind behold Your wast Ascendant, not by Gold, But by your Wisdom, and your pious Life: Your Aim no more than to destroy That which does Europe's Ease annoy, And supersede a Reign of Shame and Strife.

My Brethren of the Quill, the ingenious Society of News-writers, having with great Spirit and Elegance already informed the World, that the Town of Tourney capitulated on the 28th Instant, there is nothing left for me to say, but to congratulate the good Company here, that we have Reason to hope for an Opportunity of thanking Mr. Withers next Winter in this Place, for the Service he has done his Country. No Man deserves better of his Friends ahan than that Gentleman, whose distinguishing Character it is, that he gives his Orders with the Familiarity, and enjoys his Fortune with the Generofity, of a Fellow-Soldier. His Grace the Duke of Argyle had also an eminent Part in the Reduction of this important Place. That illu-Strious Youth discovers the peculiar Turn of Spirit and Greatness of Soul, which only make Men of high Birth and Quality useful to their Country; and confiders Nobility as an imaginary Distinction, unless accompanied with the Practice of those generous Virtues by which it ought to be obtained. But that our Military Glory is arrived at its present Height, and that Men of all Ranks to passionately affect their Share in it, is certainly owing to the Merit and Conduct of our glorious General: For as the great Secret in Chymistry, though not in Nature, has occasioned many useful Discoveries; and the fantastick Notion of being wholly difinterested in Friendship. has made Men do a Thousand generous Actions above themselves; so, though the present Grandeur and Fame of the Duke of Marlborough is a Station of Glory to which no one hopes to arrive, yet all carry their Actions to an higher Pitch, by having that great Example laid before them.

From Tuesday July 26. to Thursday July 28. 1709.

White's Chocolate-house, July 27. Y Friend Sir Thomas has communicated to me his Letters from Epfom of the 25th Instant, which give, in general, a very good Account of the present Posture of Affairs in that Place; but that the Tranquility and Correspondence of the Company begins to be interrupted by the Arrival of Sir Taffety Trippet, a Fortune-hunter, whose Follies are too gross to give Diversion; and whose Vanity is too stupid to let him be fensible that he is a publick Offence. If People will indulge a splenarick Humour, it is impossible to be at Ease, when fuch Creatures as are the Scandal of our Species, fet up for Gallantry and Adventures. It will be much more easy therefore to laugh Sir Taffety into Reason, than convert him from his Foppery by any ferious Contempt. I knew a Gentleman that made it a Maxim to open his Doors, and ever run into the Way of Bullies, to avoid their Insolence. The Rule will hold as well with Coxcombs: They are never morti-fied, but when they see you receive, and despise them; otherwise they rest assured, that it is your Ignorance makes them out of your good Graces; or, that 'tis only want of Admittance prevents their being amiable where they are shun'd and avoided. But Sir Taffety is a Fop of fo fanguine a Complexion, that I fear it will be very hard for the fair One he at present purfues to get rid of the Chace, without being so tired, as for her own Ease to fall into the Mouth of the Mungrel she runs from. But the History of

It happened, that when he first set up for a Fortune hunter, he chose Tunbridge for the Scene of Action; where were at that Time two Siftersupon the same Design. The Knight believed of Course the Elder must be the betrer Prize; and confequently makes all his Sail that Way. People that want Sense, do always in an egregious Manner want Modesty, which made our Hero triumph in making his Amour as publick aswas possible. The adored Lady was no less vain of his publick Addresses. An Attorney with one Cause is not half so restless as a Woman with one Lover. Where-ever they met, they talked to each other aloud, chose each other Partner at Balls, faluted at the most conspicuous Parts of the Service at Church, and practifed in Honour of each other all the remarkable Particularities which are usual for Persons who admire one another, and are contemptible to the rest of the World. These Two Lovers feem'd as much made for each other as-Adam and Eve, and all pronounced it a Match of Nature's own making; but the Night before the Nuptials, (fo univerfally approved) the younger Silter, envious of the good Fortune even of her Silter, who had been present at most of their Interviews, and had an equal Tast for the Charms of a Fop (as there are a Set of Women made for that Order of Men); the younger, I say, unable to see so rich a Prize pass by her, discovered to Sir Taffety, that a Coquet Air, much Tongue, and Three Suirs, was all the Portion of his Mittress. His Love vanished that Moment, himself and Equipage 0 3010 figural the next Morning. It is uncertain where the Lover has been ever fince engag'd; but certain it is, he has not appeared in his Character as a Follower of Love and Fortune till he arrived at Exsom, where there is at present a young Lady of Youth, Beauty, and Fortune, who has alarmed all the Vain and the Impertinent to infest that Quarter. At the Head of this Assembly, Sir Taffety shines in the brightest Manner, with all the Accomplishments which usually ensoare the Heart of Woman; with this particular Merit, (which often is of great Service) that he is laughed at for her Sake. The Friends of the fair One are in much Pain for the Sufferings the goes through from the Perseverance of this Hero; but they may be much more fo from the Danger of his succeeding, toward which they give him an helping Hand, if they disswade her with Bitterness for there is a fantastical Generolity in the Sex, to approve Creatures of the least Merit imaginable, when they fee the Imperfections of their Admirers are become Marks of Derision for their Sakes; and there is nothing so frequent, as that he who was contemptible to a Woman in her own Judgment, has won her by being too violently opposed by others.

Grecian Coffee-house, July 27.
In the several Capacities I bear, of Astrologer, Civilian, and Physician, I have with great Application studied the publick Emolument: To this End serve all my Lucubrations, Speculations, and whatever other Labours I undereake, whether nocturnal or diurnal. On this Morive am I induced to publish a never-failing Medicine for the Spleen: My Experience in this Distemper came from a very remarkable Cure on my ever worthy Friend Tom Spindle, who, through excessive Gaiety, had exhausted that that natural Stock of Wit and Spirits he had long been bleffed with: He was funk and flattened to the lowest Degree imaginable, sixting whole Hours over the Book of Martyrs . and Pilgrims Progress; his other Contemplations never rifing higher than the Colour of his Urine, or Regularity of his Pulse. In this Condition I found him, accompanied by the learned Dr. Drachm, and a good old Nurse. Drachm had prescribed Magazines of Herbs. and Mines of Steel. I foon discovered the Malady, and descanted on the Nature of it, till I convinced both the Patient and his Nurse, that the Spleen is not to be cured by Medicine, but by Poetry. Apollo, the Author of Phylick, shone with diffusive Rays the best of Poets as well as of Phylicians; and it is in this double Capacity that I have made my Way, and have found fweet, easy, flowring Numbers, are oft superior to our noblest Medicines. When the Spirits are low, and Nature funk, the Muse, with sprightly and harmonious Notes, gives an unexpected Turn with a Grain of Poetry, which I prepare without the Use of Mercury. I have done Wonders in this Kind; for the Spleen is like the Tarantula, the Effects of whole malignant Poison are to be prevented by no other Remedy. but the Charms of Musick: For you are to una derstand, that as some noxious Animals carry Antidotes for their own Poisons; so there is fomething equally unaccountable in Poetry: For though it is sometimes a Disease, it is to be cured only by it felf. Now I knowing Tope Spindle's Constitution, and that he is not only a pretty Gentleman, but also a pretty Poet, found the true Cause of his Distemper was a violent Grief that moved his Affections too strongly: For during the late Treaty of Peace, he had writ a most excellent Poem on that Subject; and when he wanted but two Lines in the last Stanza for finishing the whole Piece, there comes News that the French Tyrant would not fign. Spindle in a few Days took his Bed, and had lain there still, had not I been sent for. I immediately told him, there was great Probabilivy the French would now fue to us for Peace. I faw immediately a new Life in his Eyes; and knew, That nothing could help him forward fo well, as hearing Verses which he would believe worse than his own; I read him therefore the Bruffels Postfcript. After which I recited some Heroick Lines of my own, which operated fo strongly on the Tympanum of his Ear, that I doubt not but I have kept out all other Sounds for a Fortnight; and have Reason to hope, we shall fee him abroad the Day before his Poem.

This you fee, is a particular Secret I have found out, viz. That you are not to chuse your Phylician for his Knowledge in your Distemper, but for having it himself. Therefore I am at Hand for all Maladies arising from Poerical Vapours, beyond which I never prerend. For being called the other Day to one in Love, I took indeed their Three Guinea's, and gave them my Advice; which was, to fend for Æsculapius. Æsculapius, as soon as he saw the Patient, cries us, Tis Love! 'Tis Love! Oh! the unequal Pulse! These are the Symptoms a Lover feels; fuch Sighs, fuch Pangs, attend the uneasy Mind; nor can our Art, or all our boasted Skill, avail - Yet, O Fair! for thee Thus the Sage ran on, and owned the Passion which he pitied, as well as that he felt a greater Pain than ever he cured: After which he concluded, All I can advise, is Marriage: Charms and Beauty will give new Life and Vigour, and turn the Course of Nature to its better Prospect. This is the new Way; and thus Esculapius has left his beloved Powders, and writes a Recipe for a Wife at Sixty. In short, my Friend followed the Prescription, and married Youth and Beauty in its perfect Bloom.

Supine in Silvia's fnowy Arms he lies,
And all the busy Care of Life defies:
Each happy Hour is fill'd with fresh Delight, While Peace the Day, and Pleasure crowns the Night.

From my own Apartment, July 27.
Tragical Passion was the Subject of the Discourse where I last visited this Evening; and a Gentleman who knows that I am at present writing a very deep Tragedy, directed his Difcourfe in a particular Manner to me. It is the common Fault (faid he) of you, Gentlemen, who write in the Buskin Style, that you give us rather the Sentiments of fuch who behold Tragical Events, than of fuch who bear a Part in em themselves. I would advise all who pretend this Way, to read Shakelpear with Care, and they will foon be deterred from putting forth what is usually called Tragedy. Way of common Writers in this Kind, is rather the Description than the Expression of Sorrow. There is no Medium in these Attempts; and you must go to the very Bottom of the Heart, or it is all mere Language; and the Writer of such Lines is no more a Poet, than a Man is a Phyfician for knowing the Names of Diftempers. without the Causes of them. Men of Sense are professed Enemies to all such empty Labours: For he who pretends to be forrowful, and is not, is a Wretch yer more contemptible than he who pretends to be merry, and is not. Such a Tragedian is only maudlin drunk. The Gentleman went on with much Warmth; but all he could fay had little Effect upon me: But when I came hither, I so far observed his Counfel, that I looked into Shakespear. The Tragedy I dipped into was, Harry the Fourth. In the Scene where Morton is preparing to tell Northumberland of his Son's Death; the old Man does not give him Time to speak, but says,

The Whiteness of thy Cheeks
Is apter than thy Tongue to tell thy Errand;
Even such a Man, so faint, so spiritless,
So dull, so dead in Look, so Wee-Be gone.
Drew Priam's Curtain at the Dead of Night,
And would have told him Half his Troy was burnt:
But Priam found the Fire, e're he his Tongue,
And I my Percy's Death e're thou report st it.

The Image in this Place is wonderfully noble and great; yet this Man in all this is but rising towards his great Affliction, and is still enough himself, as you see, to make a Simile? But when he is certain of his Son's Death, he is lost to all Patience, and gives up all the Regards of this Life; and tince the last of Evils is fallen upon him, he calls for it upon all the World.

Now let not Nature's Hand
Keep the wild Flood confined; let Order die,
And let the World no longer be a Stage,
To feed Contention in a ling'ring Act;
But let one Spirit of the first-born Caix Reign in all Bosoms, that each Heart being set On bloody Courses, the wide Stene may end,
And Darkness be the Burier of the Dead.

Reading but this one Scene has convinced me. that he who describes the Concern of great Men, must have a Soul as noble, and as susceptible of high Thoughts, as they whom he represents: I shall therefore lay by my Drama for some Time. and turn my Thoughts to Cares and Griefs, fomewhat below that of Heroes, but no less moving. A Misfortune proper for me to take Notice of has too lately happened: The disconsolate Maria has three Days kept her Chamber for the Lofs of the beauteous Midelin, her Lap-dog. Lesbin her felf did not shed more Tears for her Sparrow. What makes her the more concern'd, is, that we know nor whether Fidelia was kill'd or stolen ; bet she was feen in the Parlour-Window when the Train-bands went by, and never fince. Whoever gives Notice of her, dead or alive, shall be rewarded with a Kiss of her Lady.

THIS Day I obliged Pacolet to entertain mewith Matters which regarded Persons of his own Character and Occupation. We chose to take our Walk on Tower-Hill; and as we were coming from thence in order to stroll as far as Garraway's, I observed two Men, who had but just landed, coming from the Waterside. I thought there was something uncommon mon in their Mien and Aspect; but though they seemed by their Visage to be related, yet was there a Warmth in their Manner, as if they differed very much in their Sentiments of the Subject on which they were talking. One of them feem'd to have a natural Confidence, mixed with an ingenuous Freedom in his Geflure, his Dress very plain, but very graceful and becoming: The other, in the midst of an over-bearing Carriage, betrayed (by frequently looking round him) a Suspicion that he was not enough regarded by those he met, or that he feared they would make some Attack upon him. This Person was much taller than his Companion, and added to that Height the Advantage of a Feather in his Hat, and Heels to his Shoes so monstrously high, that he had three or four Times fallen down, had he not been supported by his Friend. They made a full Stop as they came within a few Yards of the Place where we stood. The plain Gentleman bowed to Pacolet; the other looked on him with fome Displeasure: Upon which I asked him, Who they both were? When he thus informed me of their Persons and Circum-Stances.

You may remember, Isaac, that I have often told you, there are Beings of a superior Rank to Mankind, who frequently visit the Habitations of Men, in order to call them from fome wrong Pursuits in which they are actually engaged, or divert them from Methods which will lead them into Errors for the future. He that will carefully reflect upon the Occurrences of his Lite, will find he has been sometimes extricated out of Difficulties, and received Favours where he could never have expected fuch Benefits; as well as met with cross Events from some unseen Hand, which have disappointed his best laid Designs. Such Accidents arrive from the Interventions of Aerial Beings. as they are benevolent or hurtful to the Nature of Man, and attend his Steps in the Tracts of Ambition, of Business, and of Pleasure. Before I ever appeared to you in the Manner I do now, I have frequently followed you in your Evening Walks, and have often, by throwing some Accident in your Way, as the passing by of a Funeral, or the Appearance of some other folemn Object, given your Imagination a new Turn, and changed a Night you had destined to Mirth and Jollity, into an Exercise of Study and Contemplation. I was the old Soldier who met you last Summer in Chelfea-Fields, and pretended that I had broken my Wooden-Leg, and could not get Home; but I fnap'd it short off on purpose, that you might fall into the Reflections you did on that Subject, and take me into your Hack. If you remember, you made your felf very merry on that Fracture, and asked me. Whether I thought I should next Winter feel Cold in the Toes of that Leg? As is usually observed, that those who lose Limbs, are senfible of Pains in the extreme Parts, even after those Limbs are cut off. However, my keeping you then in the Story of the Battle of the Boin, prevented an Affignation, which would' have led you into more Difasters than I then related.

To be short: Those Two Persons you see yonder, are such as I am; they are not real Men, but are mere Shades and Figures: One is named Alethes, the other Verisimilis. Their Office is to be the Guardians and Representatives of Conscience and Honour. They are now going to visit the several Parts of the Town, to see how their Interests in the World decay or flourish, and to purge themselves from the many false Imputations they daily meet with in the Commerce and Conversation of Men. You observed Verismilis frowned when he first saw me. What he is provoked at, is, that I told him one Day, though he strutted and dressed with so much Ostencation, if he kept himself within his own Bounds, he was but a Lacquey, and wore only that Gentleman's Livery whom he is now with. This frets him to the Heart; for you must know, he has pretended a long Time to set up for himself, and gets among a Crowd of the more unthinking Part of Mankind, who take him for a Person of the First Quality; though his Introduction into the World was wholly owing to his present Companion.

This Encounter was very agreeable to me, and I was refolved to dog them, and defired Pacolet to accompany me. I foon perceived what he told me in the Gesture of the Persons: For when they look'd at each other in Difcourse, the well-dress'd Man suddenly cast down his Eyes, and discovered that the other had a painful Superiority over him. After fome further Discourse, they took Leave. The plain Gentleman went down towards Thomesffreet, in order to be present, at least, at the Oaths taken at the Gustom-bouse; and the other made directly for the Heart of the City. It is incredible how great a Change there imme-diately appeared in the Man of Honour when he got rid of his uneafie Companion: He adjusted the Cock of his Hat a-new, settled his Sword-Knot, and had an Appearance that attracted a fudden Inclination for him and his Interests in all who beheld him. For my Part (faid I to Pacolet) I cannot but think you are miltaken in calling this Person, of the Lower Quality; for he looks much more like a Gentleman tleman than the other. Don't you observe all Eyes are upon him as he advances: How each Sex gazes at his Stature, Aspect, Address, and Motion? Pacolet only fmiled, and shaked his Head; as leaving me to be convinced by my own further Observation. We kept on our Way after him till we came to Exchange-Alley. where the plain Gentleman again came up to the other; and they stood together after the Manner of eminent Merchants, as if ready to receive Application; but I could observe no Man talk to either of them. The One was laughed at as a Fop; and I heard many Whifpers against the other, as a whimsical Sort of Fellow, and a great Enemy to Trade. They crossed Cornhill together, and came into the full Change, where fome bowed, and gave themselves Airs in being known to so fine a Man as Verifonilis, who, they faid, had great Interest in all Princes Courts; and the other was taken Notice of by several as one they had feen somewhere long before. One more particularly faid, He had formerly been a Man of Confideration in the World; but was fo unlucky, that they who dealt with him, by some strange Infatuation or other, had a Way of cutting off their own Bills, and were prodigioully flow in improving their Stock. But as much as I was curious to observe the Reception these Gentlemen met with upon Change, I could not help being interrupted by one that came up towards us, to whom every Body made their Compliments. He was of the common Height, and in his Drefs there feemed to be great Care to appear no Way particular, except in a certain exact and feat Manner of Behaviour and Circumspection. He was wonderfully careful that his Shoes and Cloathes should be without the least Speck upon them;

and feem'd to think, that on fush an Aceident depended his very Life and Fortune. There was hardly a Man on Change who had not a Note upon him; and each feem'd very well fatisfied that their Money lay in his Hands, without demanding Payment. I asked Pacolet, What great Merchant that was, who was fo univerfally addressed to, yet made too familiar an Appearance to command that extraordinary Deference? Pacotet answer'd, This Person is the Dæmon or Genius of Credit; his Name is Umbra. If you observe, he follows Alethes and Verifimilis at a Distance; and indeed has no Foundation for the Figure he makes in the World, but that he is thought to keep their Cash; though at the same Time, none who trust him, would trust the others for a Groat. As the Company rolled about, the Three Spe-Eters were jumbled into one Place: When they were fo, and all thought there was an Alliance between them, they immediately drew upon them the Business of the whole Change. But their Affairs soon encreased to such an unweildy Bulk, that Alethes took his Leave, and faid, He would not engage further than he had an immediate Fund to answer. Verisimilis pretended, that though he had Revenues large enough to go on his own Bottom, yet it was below one of his Family to condescend to trade in his own Name; therefore he also retired. I was extremely troubled, to fee the glorious Mart of London left with no other Guardian, but him of Credit. But Pacolet told me, That Traders had nothing to do with the Honour or Conscience of their Correspondents, provided they suppor-ted a general Behaviour in the World, which could not hurt their Credit or their Purses: For (faid he) you may in this one Tract of Building of London and Westminster see the imaginary Morives

Motives on which the greatest Affairs move, as well as in rambling over the Face of the Earth. For tho' Alethes is the real Governour, as well as Legislator of Mankind, he has very little Bufiness but to make up Quarrels, and is only a general Referree, to whom every Man pretends to appeal; but is fatisfied with his Determinations no further than they promote his own Interest. Hence it is, that the Soldier and the Courtier model their Actions according to Verisimilia's Manner, and the Merchant according to that of Umbra. Among these Men, Honour and Credit are not valuable Poffessions in themselves, or pursued out of a Principle of Justice; but merely as they are serviceable to Ambition and to Commerce. But the World will never be in any Manner of Order or Tranquility, till. Men are firmly convinced, that Conscience, Honour, and Credit, are all in one Interest; and that without the Concurrence of the former, the latter are but Impositions upon our selves and others. The Force these delusive Words have, is not feen in the Transactions of the busie World only, but also have their Tyranny over the Fair Sex. Were you to ask the unhappy Lais, What Pangs of Reflection, preferring the Confideration of her Honour to her Conscience, has given her? She could tell you, That it has forced her to drink up half a Gallon this Winter of Tom Dassapas's Potions; That she still pines away for fear of being a Mother; and knows not, but the Moment The is fuch, the shall be a Murderess: But if Conscience had as strong a Force upon her Mind as Honour, the first Step to her unhappy Condition had never been made; The had still been innocent, as she's beautiful. Were Men fo enlighten'd and studious of their own Good; as to act by the Dictates of their Reason and Reflection, and not the Opinion of others, Conficience would be the steady Ruler of humane Life; and the Words, Truth, Law, Reason, Equity, and Religion, would be but Synonymous Terms, for that only Guide which makes us pass our Days in our own Favour and Approbation.

Quicquid agunt Homines nostri Farrage Libelli.

White's Chocolate-house, August 1.
THE Imposition of honest Names and Words upon improper Subjects, has made so regular a Confusion amongst us, that we are apt to At down with our Errors, well enough fatisfied with the Methods we are fallen into, without at-tempting to deliver our felves from the Tyranny under which we are reduc'd by fuch Innovations. Of all the laudable Motives of humane Life, none has suffered so much in this Kind, as Love; under which rever'd Name, a brutal Defire call'd Lust is frequently conceated and admitted; tho' they differ as much as a Marron from a Proftitute, or a Companion from a Buffoon. Philander the other Day was bewailing this Misfortune with much Indignation, and upbraided me for having some Time since quoted those excellent Lines of the Satyrift ;

To an exact Perfection they have brought The Action Love, the Paffin is forget.

How could you (faid he) leave such a Hint so coldly? How could Aspassa and Semphronia enter into your Imagination at the same Time, and you never declare to us the different Reception

The Figures which the ancient Mythologists and Poets put upon Love and Luft in the Writings, are very inftructive. Love is a beauteous Blind Child, adorn'd with a Quiver and a Bow, which he plays with, and shoots around him, without Delign or Direction; to intimate to us, that the Person beloved has no Intention to give us the Anxieties we meet with; but that the Beauties of a worthy Object are like the Charms of a lovely Infant: They cannot but attract your Concern and Pondness, tho' the Child fo regarded is as infensible of the Value you put upon it, as it is that it deferves your Benevolence. On the other Side, the Sages figured Luft in the Form of a Saryr; of Shape, part Humane, part Bestial; to signify, that the Followers of it proftirute the Reafon of a Man to purfue the Appetires of a Beaft. This Satyr is made to haunt the Paths and Coverts of the Wood-Nymphs and Shepherdeffes, to lurk on the Banks of Rivulets, and watch the purling Streams, (as the Reforts of retired Virgins) to flow, that lawless Defire tends chiefly to prey upon Innocence, and has fomething fo unnatural in it, that it hates its own Make, and shuns the Object it lov'd, as foon as it has made it like it self. Love therefore is a Child that complains and bewails its Inability to help it felf, and weeps for Affiftance, without an immediate Reflection or Knowledge of the Food it wants: Luft, a watchful Thief which feizes its Prey, and lays Snares for its own Relief; and its principal Object being Innocence, it never robs, but it murders at the same Time.

From this Idea of a Cupid and a Satyr, we may settle our Notion of these different Desires, and accordingly rank their Followers. Apalia must therefore be allow'd to be the first of the beauteous Order of Love, whose unaffected Freedom, and conscious Innocence, give her the Attendance of the Graces in all her Actions. That awful Di-Stance which we bear towards her in all our Thoughts of her, and that chearful Familiarity with which we approach her, are certain Instances of her being the truest Object of Love of any of her Sex. In this accomplish'd Lady, Love is the constant Effect, because it is never the Defign. Yet, tho' her Mien carries much more Invitation than Command, to behold her is an immediate Check to loofe Behaviour; and to love her, is a liberal Education: For, it being the Nature of all Love to create an Imitation of the beloved Person in the Lover, a Regard for Aspasia naturally produces Decency of Manners, and good Conduct of Life in her Admirers. If therefore the giggling Leucippe could but see her Train of Fops affembled, and Apasia move by 'em, she would be mortified at the Veneration with which the is beheld, ev'n by Leucippe's own unthinking Equipage, whose Passions have long taken Leave of their Understandings:

As Charity is esteemed a Conjunction of the good Qualities necessary to a virtuous Man, so Love is the happy Composition of all the Accomplishments that make a Fine Gentleman. The Motive of a Man's Life is seen in all his Actions; and such as have the Beauteous Boy for their Inspirer, have a Simplicity of Behaviour, and a certain Evenness of Desire, which burns like the Lamp of Life in their Bosoms; while they who are instigated by the Satyr, are ever tortured by Jealousies of the Object of their Wishes; often desire what they scorn, and as often are mutually indifferent.

Florio, the generous Husband, and Limberham, the kind Keeper, are noted Examples of the different Effects which these Desires produce in the Mind. Amanda, who is the Wife of Florio, lives in the continual Enjoyment of new Instances of her Husband's Friendship, and sees it the End of all his Ambition to make her Life one Series of Pleasure and Satisfaction; and Amanda's Relish of the Goods of Life, is all that makes 'em pleasing to Florio: They behave themselves to each other when present with a certain apparent Benevolence, which transports above Rapture; and they think of each other in Absence with a Considence unknown to the highest Friendship: Their Satisfactions are doubled, their Sorrows lessen'd by Participation.

On the other Hand, Corinna, who is the Mistress of Limberham, lives in constant Torment: Her Equipage is, an old Woman, who was what Corinna is now; an antiquated Footman, who was Pimp to Limberham's Father; and a Chamber-Maid, who is Limberham's Wench by Fits, out of a Principle of Politicks to make her jealous and watchful of Corima. Under this Guard, and in this Conversation, Corinna lives in State: The Furniture of her Habitation, and her own gorgeous Drefs, make her the Envy of all the strolling Ladies in the Town; but Corinna knows the her felf is but Part of Limberham's Houshold-stuff, and is as capable of being dispos'd of elsewhere, as any other Moveable. Bur while her Keeper is perswaded by his Spies, that no Enemy has been within his Doors fince his last Visit, no Persian Prince was ever fo magnificently bountiful: A kind Look or falling Tear is worth a Piece of Brockade, a Sigh is a Jewel, and a Smile is a Cupboard board of Plate. All this is shar'd between Corima and her Guard in his Absence. With this great Occonomy and Industry does the unhappy Limberbam purchase the constant Tortures of Jealousie, the Rayour of spending his Estate, and the Opportunity of enriching one by whom he knows he is hated and despised. These are the ordinary and common Evils which attend Keepers, and Corima is a Wench but of common Size of Wickedness were you to know what passes under the Roof where the fair Messalina reigns with

Meffalina is the profes'd Mistress of Mankind the has left the Bed of her Husband and her beauteous Offspring, to give a Loofe to Want of Shame and Fulness of Defire. Wretched Notturnus, her feeble Keeper! How the poor Creature fribles in his Gate, and skuttles from Place to Place to dispatch his necessary Affairs in painful Day-light, that he may return to the constant Twilight preserv'd in that Scene of Wantonness, Meffalina's Bed-chamber! How does he, while he is absent from thence, consider in his Imagination the Breadth of his Porter's Shoulders, the spruce Nightcap of his Valet, the ready Attendance of his Butler! Any of all whom he knows the admirs, and profesles to approve of. This, alas! is the Gallantry; this the Freedom of our Fine Gentlemen: For this they preserve their Liberty, and keep clear of that Bugbear, Marriage. But he does not understand either Vice or Virtue, who will not allow, that Life without the Rules of Morality is a wayward uneafie Being, with Snatches only of Pleasure; but under the Regulation of Virtue, a scasonable and uniform Habit of Enjoyment. I have feen in a Play of old Haymood's, a Speech at the End of an Act, which souch'd this Point with much Spirit. He makes a married Man in the Play, upon some endearing Occasion, look at his Spouse with an Air of Fondness, and fall into the following Reflection on his Condition:

Oh Marriage! Happiest, easiest, safest State; Let Debauchees and Drunkards scorn thy Rights, Who, in their nauseous Draughts and Lusts, profane Both thee and Heav'n by whom thou wer't ordain'd.

How can the Savage call it Loss of Freedom, Thus to converse with, thus to gaze at A faithful, beauteous Friend? Blush not, my fair One, that thy Love applands

Nor be it painful to my wedded Wife,
That my full Heart o'erflows in Praise of thee.
Thou art by Law, by Interest, Passion, mine:
Passion and Reason join in Love of thee.
Thus, through a World of Calumny and Fraud,
We pass both unreproached, both undeceived;
While in eath other's Interest and Happiness,
We without Art all Faculties employ,
And all our Senses without Guilt enjoy.

Letters from the Hague of the 6th Instant, N.S. say, That there daily arrive at our Camp Deserters in considerable Numbers; and that several of the Enemy concealed themselves in the Town of Tourney when the Garrison marched into the Citadel; after which, they presented themselves to the Duke of Marlborough; some of whom were Commissioned Officers. The Earl of Albemarle is appointed Governour of the Town, Soon after the Surrender, there arose a Dispute about a considerable Work, which was afferted by the Allies to be Part of the Town, and by the French to belong to the Citadel. It is faid, Monsieur de Surville was fo ingenuous as to declare, he thought it to be comprehended within the Limits of the Town; but Monsieur de Mesgrigny, Governour of the Citadel, was of a contrary Opinion. It is reported, That this Affair occasioned great Difficulties. which ended in a Capitulation for the Citadel it felf; the principal Article of which is, That it shall be furrendred on the 5th of September next, in case they are not in the mean Time relieved. This Circumstance gives Foundation to believe, that the Enemy have acted in this Manner, rather from some Hopes they conceive of a Treaty of Peace before that Time, than any Expectation from their Army, which has retired towards their former Works between Lens and La Bassie. These Advices add, That his Excellency the Czarish Ambassador has communicated to the States-General, and the Foreign Ministers residing at the Hague, a Copy of a Letter from his Master's Camp, which gives an Account of the entire Defeat of the Swedish Army. They further fay, That Count Piper is taken Prisoner, and that it is doubted whether the King of Sweden himself was not kill'd in the Action. We hear from Savey, That Count Thaun having amus'd the Enemy by a March as far as the Tarantaife, had fuddenly repassed Mount Cennis, and moved towards Brianzon. This unexpected Disposition is apprehended by the Enemy as a Piece of the Duke of Savoy's Dexterity; and the French adding this Circumstance to that of the Confederate Squadron's lying before Toulon, convince themselves, that his Royal Highness has his Thoughts upon the Execution of some great Defign in those Parts.

The Hiftory of Orlando the Fair. Chap. I.

Hatever malicious Men may fay of our Lucubrations, we have no Defign but to produce unknown Merit, or place in a proper Light the Actions of our Contemporaries who labour to distinguish themselves, whether it be by Vice or Virtue. For we shall never give Accounts to the World of any Thing, but what the Lives and Endeavours of the Persons (of whom we treat) make the Basis of their Fame and Reputation. For this Reason it is to be hoped, that our Appearance is reputed a publick Benefit seand tho' certain Persons may turn what we mean for Panegyrick into Scandal, let it be answered once for all, That if our Praises are really defign'd as Raillery, fuch malevolent Perfons owe their Safety from it only to their being too inconfiderable for Hiftory. It is not every Man who deals in Ratsbane, or is unfeafonably amorous, that can adorn Story like Afculapius; nor every Stock-Jobber of the India Company can assume the Port, and personate the Figure of Aurengezebe. My noble Ancestor Mr. Shake-spear, who was of the Race of the Staffs, was not more fond of the memorable Sir John Falstaff, than I am of those Worthies; but the Latins have an admirable Admonition express'd in two Words, to wit, Neguid nimis, which forbids my indulging my felf on those delightful

Subjects, and calls me to do Justice to others. who make no less Figures in our Generation: Of fuch, the first and most renown'd is, that eminent Hero and Lover, Orlando the Handsome, whose Disappointments in Love, in Gallantry, and in War, have banish'd him from publick View, and made him voluntarily enter into a Confinement, to which the ungrateful Age would otherwise have forc'd him. Ten Lustra and more are wholly pass'd tince Orlando first appeared in the Metropolis of this Island: His. Descent noble, his Wir humorous, his Person charming. But to none of these Recommendatory Advantages was his Title fo undoubted as that of his Beauty. His Complexion was fair, but his Countenance manly; his Stature of the tallest, his Shape the most exact; and tho'in all his Limbs he had a Proportion as delicate as we fee in the Works of the most skilful Statuaries, his Body had a Strength and Firmness little inferior to the Marble of which fuch Images are form'd. This made Orlando the universal Flame of all the Fair Sex; Innocent Virgins figh'd for him, as Adonis; experienc'd Widows, as Her. swles. Thus did this Figure walk alone the Pattern and Ornament of our Species, but of Courle the Envy of all who had the fame Paffions, without his Superior Merit and Pretences to the Favour of that enchanting Creature, Woman. However, the generous Orlando believ'd himself form'd for the World, and not to be engros'd by any particular Affection. He figh'd not for Delia, for Chloris, for Chloe, for Betty, nor my Lady, nor for the ready Chamber-maid, nor distant Baroness: Woman was his Mistress, and the whole Sex his Seraglio. His Form was always irrefiftible: And if we consider, that not One of Five hundred can bear the least Favour from a Lady without being exalted above himfelf:

felf; if also we must allow, that a Smile from a Side-Box has made Jack Spruce half mad, we can't think it wonderful that Orlando's repeated Conquests touch'd his Brain: So it certainly did, and Orlando became an Enthuliast in Love; and in all his Address, contracted something out of the ordinary Course of Breeding and Civility. However, (powerful as he was) he would still add to the Advantages of his Person that of a Profession which the Ladies always fayour, and immediately commenc'd Soldier. Thus equipp'd for Love and Honour, our Hero feeks distant Climes and Adventures, and leaves the despairing Nymphs of Great Britain to the Courtship of Beaus and Witlings till his Re-His Exploirs in Foreign Nations and turn. Courts, have not been regularly enough communicated unto us, to report 'em with that Veracity which we profess in our Narrations: But after many Feats of Arms, (which those who were Witnesses to them have suppress'd out of Envy, but which we have had fairhfully related from his own Mouth in our publick Streets) Orlando returns home full, but not loaded with Years. Beaus born in his Absence made it their Business to decry his Furniture, his Dress, his Manner; but all fuch Rivalry he suppress'd (as the Philosopher did the Sceptick, who argued there was no fuch Thing as Motion) by only moving. The Beauteous Villaria, who only was form'd for his Paramour, became the Object of his Affection. His first Speech to her was as follows:

Madam, It is not only that Nature has made us Two the most accomplished of each Sex, and pointed to us to obey her Dictates in becoming One; but that there is also an Ambition in following the mighty Persons you have favoured. Where Kings and Heroes, as great as Alexander, or such as could personate Alexander, have bowed, permit your General to lay his Lawrels:

According to Milton ;

Fortune had now supplied Orlando with Necessaries for his high Tast of Gallantry and Pleasure: His Equipage and Oeconomy had something in them more sumptuous and gallant than could be received in our degenerate Age; therefore his Figure (tho' highly graceful) appeared so exotick, that it affembled all the Britons under the Age of Sixteen, who saw his Grandeur to follow his Chariot with Shouts and Acclamations, which he regarded with the Contempt which great Minds affect in the midst of Applauses. I remember I had the Honour to see him one Day stop, and call the Youths about him, to whom he spake as follows:

Good Bastards—Go to School, and don't lose your Time in following my Wheels: I am loth to hurt you, because I know not but you are all my own Offspring: Hark'ee, you sirrah with the white Hair, I am sure you are mine: There's Half a Crown. Tell your Mother, This, with the half Crown I gave her when I got you, comes to Five Shillings. Thou halt cost me all that, and yet thou are good for nothing. Why, you young Dogs, did you never see a Man before? Never such a one as you, Noble General, replied a Truant from Westminster, 'Sirrah, I believe thee: There is a Crown for thee. Drive on Coachinan.

This Vehicle, tho' facred to Love, was not adorn'd with Doves. Such an Hieroglyphick denoted noted too languishing a Passion. Orlando therefore gave the Eagle, as being of a Constitution which inclined him rather to seize his Prey with Talons, than pine for it with Murmurs.

From my own Apartment, August 2.

I have received the following Letter from Mr. Powell of the Bath, who, I think, runs from the Point between us, which I leave the whole World to judge.

To Ifaac Bickerstaff Esq;

SIR,

Aving a great deal of more advantagious Bulinels at present on my Hands, I thought to have deferr'd answering your Tatler of the 21st Instant, till the Company was gone, and Season over; but having resolved not to regard any Impertinences of your Paper, except what relate particularly to me, I am the more easily induc'd to answer you (as I shall find Time to do it): First, partly lest you should think your self neglected, which I have Reason to believe you would take heinously ill. Secondly, partly because it will increase my Fame, and consequently my Audience, when all the Quality shall see with how much Wit and Raillery I show you— I don't care a Farthing for you. Thirdly, partly because being without Books, if I don't show much Learning, it will not be imputed to my having none.

I have travell'd Italy, France, and Spain, and fully comprehend whatever any German Artist in the World can do; yet cannot I imagine, why you should endeavour to disturb the Repose and Plenty which (tho' unworthy) I enjoy at this Place. It cannot be, that you take Offence at my Prologues and Epilogues, which you are pleas'd to miscall Foolish and R 3 Abu-· Abusive. No, no, until you give a better, I . shall not forbear thinking, that the true Reas ion of your picking a Quarrel with me was, because it is more agreeable to your Principles, as well as more to the Honour of your assured Victory, to attack a Governour. Mr. Ifaac, Mr. Ifaac, I can fee into a Mill-stone as far as another (as the Saying is). You are for fowing the Seeds of Sedition and Disobedience among my Puppets, and your " Zeal for the (good old) Cause would make you perswade Punch to pull the String from his Chops, and not move his Jaw when I have a Mind he should harangue. Now I appeal to all Men, if this is not contrary to * that uncontroulable, unaccountable Dominion, which by the Laws of Nature I exercise over them; for all Sorts of Wood and Wire were made for the Use and Benefit of Man: I have therefore an unquestionable Right to *frame, fashion, and put them together, as I 'please; and having made them what they are, my Puppers are my Property, and therefore my Slaves: Nor is there in Nature any Thing more just, than the Homage which is paid by a less to a more excellent Being: So that by the Right therefore of a superior Genius, I am their supreme Moderator, * altho' you would infinuate (agreeably to your elevelling Principles) that I am my felt but a great Pupper, and can therefore have but a co-ordinate surisdiction with them. I fupopofe I have now fufficiently made it appear, that I have a paternal Right to keep a Pupe pet-Show, and this Right I will maintain in my Prologues on all Occasions.

And therefore, if you write a Defence of your felf against this my Self-Defence, I admonish you to keep within Bounds; for every Day will not be fo propitious to you as the 29th of April; and perhaps my Re-· sentment may get the better of my Generosity, and I may no longer scorn to fight one who is not my Equal with unequal Weapons: . There are fuch Things as Scandulums Magnatums; therefore take Heed hereafter how ' you write fuch Things as I cannot easily an-· Iwer, for that will put me in a Passion.

' I order you to handle only these Two Propolitions, to which our Dispute may be reduced : The First, Whether I have not an Ab-' folute Power, whenever I please, to light a * Pipe with one of Punch's Legs, or warm my Fingers with his whole Carcais? The Second, Whether the Devil would not be in Punch, " should he by Word or Deed oppose my Sove-' reign Will and Pleasure? And then, perhaps, I may (if I can find Leisure for it) give you

"the Trouble of a second Letter.

But if you intend to tell me of the Original of Puppet-shows, and the several Changes and Revolutions that have happened in them, ' fince Thespis, and I don't care who, that's " Noli me tangere; I have folemnly engaged to fay nothing of what I can't approve. Dr, if you talk of certain Contracts with the Mayor and Burgesses, or Fees to the Con-ftables, for the Privilege of Acting, I will ' not write one fingle Word about any fuch ' Matters; but shall leave you to be mumbled by the learned and very ingenious Author of a late Book, who knows very well what's to be faid and done in fuch Cases. He is now ' shuffling the Cards, and dealing to Timothy; but if he wins the Game, I will send him to play at Backgammon with you; and then he will fatisfy you, that Deuce-Ace makes Five.

And fo, submitting my self to be try'd by my Country, and allowing any Jury of 12 good Men, and true, to be that Country; not excepting any (unless Mr. Isaac Bickerstaff) to be of the Pannel, for you are neither good nor true; I bid you heartily farewel; and am,
